Craig Tollier, his two Brothers and a Cousin
Another Member of the Methodist Family
Killed by Indians at the Lower Village, on the Ohio River, at the Foot of the Falls, Sunday.

KNOX COUNTY—History of the Flame Under Washington.

SIT THE DUST.

KNOXVILLE, KY, June 23—Craig Tollier, of the famous family that fought on both sides of the war, was killed on Sunday by Indians at the Lower Village, on the Ohio River, at the foot of the Falls. The news of his death was received here by telegraph from Marietta, Ohio, where he had been living with his brother, William Tollier. The latter, who was with his brother at the time of the attack, said that they were returning from a trip to Marietta when they were ambushed by a party of Indians. The Indians, who were disguised as friendly Indians, opened fire on them as they approached the village and killed both brothers.

The news of the death of Craig Tollier was received here with great regret. He was a well-known and respected member of the community, and his death is a great loss to his family and friends.

The Indians who ambushed the Tolliers were not identified, but it is believed that they were from the tribe that lives on the Ohio River, near the Indian Agency. The attack was apparently a surprise one, and the Tolliers were not prepared for it.

The Indian Agency is located on the Ohio River, near the village of Marietta, Ohio, and is a place of great activity. It is the headquarters of the Indian Department, and is visited by many Indians from the surrounding region. The agency is also a place of trade, and many Indians come there to buy and sell goods.

The Indians who live on the Ohio River are of the Wyandot tribe, and are descendants of the Indians who were driven from their homes by the white man. They are a friendly people, and are always willing to help those who are in need.

The news of the death of Craig Tollier was received with sadness by all who knew him. He was a good man, and is greatly missed by his family and friends.

The body of Craig Tollier was taken to Marietta, where it will be prepared for burial. The funeral will take place at the Tollier home, in Knox County, on Wednesday.

The family and friends of Craig Tollier are deeply grieved at his death, and extend their sympathy to his widow and children.