general appearance of the animal can be improved by removing unnecessary long hair, such as on the poll, in the ear, and around the hoof. The switch should be combed until it is free from twists and curls. Many people do not give attention to these things and often lose the prize by not spending a few hours with animal and attending to these things. Winning gives the individual good advertising as to the type of animals kept on the farm, so we want all to try to be winners or close for ties.

In showing work stock and colts, one should groom the animal often and make use of the shears. The animal should not be sheared just before the show but the shearing should be about a week off. When the animal is in the show ring the showman wants his animal to show well. A little showmanship displayed can win a prize in many cases where the competition is keen. Have the animal to stand properly and do not let the animal slump its posture. The animal should be halted and taught to lead with a quick straight stride in the walk.

Industry Ready to "Keep 'em Rolling" for Defense

Graphic illustration of the way in which one of America's greatest industries gears its activities with the United States Army for national defense is found at Little Falls, Minn., where the greatest precision manufacturers in the history of the country are being held Aug. 27-30. To "keep them rolling," Chevrolet, one of the largest suppliers of motor transport equipment to the nation's armed forces, has set up through one of its dealers, the Bert Boston Motor Co., of Minneapolis, a complete parts and service headquarters in the military reservations at Little Falls. More than $10,000 worth of parts is maintained at this depot, where three service representatives are on duty 24 hours daily to service Chevrolet equip-

Educational Displays Added Feature This Year

A complete fair in itself, the mammoth Merchants and Manufacturers Building with its gaily festooned and rich, colorful exhibits this year will add a number of educational displays for its thousands of visitors at the grand new Kentucky State Fair. Outstanding in the educational group will be an exhibit of the United Brewers Industrial Foundation, sponsors of the Kentucky Brewers and Beer Distributors Committee, Frank E. Daugherty, Committee State Director, announced today. This visual education exhibit is somewhat different than the ordinary display and occupies fully 300 square feet of floor space to tell the story of this native American product. Though the use of motors, slides and other mechanical ends, the display traces history of the beverage from its beginning, about 7,700 years ago, down through the ages, including the era of

MY DOG AND I

When living seems but little worth And all things go awry, I close the door, we journey forth My dog and I! For books and pen we leave behind, But little careth he; His one great joy in life is just To be with me. "He notes by just one upper glance My mental attitude, As on we go past laughing stream And singing wood. "The soft winds have a magic touch That brings to care release, The trees are vocal with delight, The rivers sing of peace. "How good it is to be alive! Nature, the healer strong, Has set each pulse with life thrill And joy and song. "Discouragement! 'Twas but a name, And all things that annoy, Out in the lovely world of June Life seemeth only joy! "And ere we reach the busy town, Like birds my troubles fly, We are two comrades glad of heart My dog and I. "McGuffey's Favorite Animal—The Dog In McGuffey's First Reader there one hundred and fifty-three pictures. Of this number one hundred and two were of animals. In this text there were twenty-one pictures of the dog. The dog appears nearly two hundred times in the several editions of the McGuffey texts. The dog seems to be the favorite animal of McGuffey, and regarded the dog as the best animal companion for the boy. Minchik stated that in the McGuffey readers "The dog has been compared to kings, bedfellow to poets and artists, favorite in the salon of queens and princesses, in court and castle."

was a Scotch Presbyterian had his dogs play the role of "helpers and rescuers." They must perform acts of service by rescuing their masters from danger. The dog "must be guardian to the helpless, sleepless sentinel of the household, and message bearer in time of need." Usually McGuffey chose to have the dog exhibit the finer traits of "joy, faithfulness, watchfulness and helpfulness." Only in a few instances did he have his dogs display a harmful nature. In his Primer of 1849 a dog bites the hand of a girl (not a very pretty girl); a dog bites a pig; in another case a dog bites a horse. It is interesting to note that the "biting dog" disappears in all subsequent editions. Perhaps the reason for the dog appearing so often in the McGuffey Readers was because McGuffey knew the attachments which children had for animals—particularly the dog. McGuffey was somewhat of a child psychologist and a close student of human nature. He knew that a boy would speak to his dog, expressing his hopes, fears, ambitions. In sum, all of his boyish dreams and philosophy were to be tried out on " Rover," "S p o r t," "Dodger," "Bounce," "Hatch," "Fido," "Frisk" or "Ruthie."

The United States has about thirty percent of the railroad mileage of the world.

Ky Brewers And Beer Distributors Aid State Officers

Cooperation of the Kentucky Brewers and Beer Distributor Committee with State licensing authorities cost E. E. Metzmeier prospective WPA-A to maintain a roadhouse near Louisville, the use of his retail beer license for thirty days, Frank E. Daugherty, Committee State Director, announced today.

Metzmeier's license was ordered suspended for that period of time by members of the State Alcohol Beverage Control Board after Committee investigations revealed that law violations were taking place at the roadhouse. The case was reported to Colonel H. Wattson Lindsey, Louisville District Supervisor for the Board, who immediately ordered his inspector to raid the place. A small amount of whiskey and gin was found. "The sale of beer must be carried on in strict observance of law, order and common decency," the Committee head said. "As State Director I am determined that law violations in license retail beer establishments must stop and I shall recommend action, as in The Gallop case, when evidence justifies it," he added.

HOW A New WORLD CAME OUT OF A VACUUM

WHEN Thomas A. Edison pumped all the air out of his laboratory bell jar and shot a feeble electric current through a charred cotton string, he witnessed the beginning of a new world—a world that came out of a vacuum. The electric light which came out of this vacuum built the great electric industry of the United States, an industry which today puts behind the American workings more cheap electric power than is available in any other nation. Because of this abundance of power American workmen produce more goods, and earn more money, and work shorter hours than any other men in the world. We've a new world. We Americans have developed it ourselves: with initiative, with courage, with intelligence and ingenuity, and with hard work. Thomas Edison staved because he knew the world would welcome something better. We, his followers, feel that it is our responsibility to protect and expand the usefulness of that great man's contributions. For example, because of our increasing progress, this company is able to give better service now than was possible ten years ago—at about half the rate! The average customer can now obtain as much electricity as he did then for the same amount of money! Today we're the best lighted nation on earth. And we enjoy more of the many other electrical conveniences—radios, washers, irons, refrigerators—than any other nation. We're freer—no freedom from drudgery, from inconvenience—that can't even be approached anywhere else! The next time you turn on an electric light or use in a domestic head, think how much you get for so little. And remember that it is the good of this company and its employees to bring you greater value this year than last; and bring more of the good things of life to more people at less cost. Government Credits Soldiers With Ample Cash For All Needs

The Government credits every soldier with an ample money allowance for his clothing needs. By using reasonable care a soldier can have a portion of his three-year allowance, and this saving is paid to him in cash upon discharge.

Pension Privileges
In case of a permanent illness or injury, incurred in line of duty while in the Army, which incapacitates a soldier for active service, he is given maximum hospitalization and discharged from the Army with instructions to apply for a pension. Pensions vary in amount, depending on the degree of disability, and run until the disability is removed.

Whether the soldier discharged because of physical disability receives a pension or not, regardless of the amount if he does receive one, he may be admitted to the U. S. Soldiers' Home, Washington, D. C., where he may remain for the rest of his life. This provided, of course, that his discharge was honorable and that he has contributed to the Soldier's Home Fund or fulfilled certain other requirements.

Retirement
After thirty years' service in the Army soldiers will be retired, upon their application, on three-quarters of pay at the date of their retirement, plus specified allowances for the rest of their lives.

Medical and Dental Attention
Medical and dental care, including hospital treatment under competent physicians and nurses, are furnished all soldiers wherever necessary. This service is, of course, provided without cost to the soldier.

Training
The Army trains men mentally, morally, and physically, so that they will be better soldiers, and better stronger citizens when returned to civil life. The Army maintains schools, shops, etc., where a man may learn a trade which will help him later in life. Most of these schools are not compulsory, but qualified men are encouraged to attend then whenever opportunity permits.

Physical Training
Nowhere in the world can a man get better physical training than in the Army. Medical men lay great stress on the benefits of Army physical training. Some of them go so far as to say that on account of the physical training received, one enlistment in the Army may add from three to five years to unsolicited indorsement of the medical profession lends strong support to the idea behind the Army's slogan, "The United States Army Builds Men." This consideration alone, even if there were not numerous other advantages, should make a strong appeal to any young man of enlistment age.

Opportunities for Musicians
There are usually vacancies in the Army for qualified men who possess musical talent. This includes both the skilled musician and the man who is seriously interested in music, but whose formal training has been brief and whose experience has been of a limited nature.

or not there is a traffic signal, always look both ways before crossing the street. The driver bicyclist is not on his job; you should be on yours.

2. Do not run into the street in pursuit of a ball or playmate without first making sure you will be able to return to the curb safely.

3. Do not annoy drivers by running alongside their cars or darting in and out of the street without warning. How would you like to have motorists make a game of trying to drive as close to you as possible without knocking you down?

4. Beginning today, observe all STOP signs. During the summer you may have acquired the habit of ignoring these signs; break it now.

5. Children especially young children, are liable to do the unexpected; they act first and think afterward. When you have to drive past a child playing near the street, slow down. He may dart out in front of your car.

6. Be especially observant of parked cars. In addition to the fact that a parked car is an annoying obstruction to visibility as a blind corner, many children customarily play in and about parked cars.

HANDSOME BRONZE PLAQUE

The handsome bronze plaque pictured above is being exhibited this week in the local store window of The Kentucky Power and Light Company. Morehead is in the company's Northern Division which among five divisions throughout the state, had the fewest number of accidents among employees in 1939 and was awarded the trophy.

With the average of 176 employees, the Northern Division had only twelve accidents during the year, none of which were lost time accidents, while the nearest competing division had 23 accidents. None of the dozen mishaps resulted fatally. Roman A. Brownaki of Mayaville is Northern Division safety director. He is shown above with the trophy.

For a number of years Kentucky Utilities Company and its associate Kentucky Power & Light Company have vigorously carried on accident prevention work among employees, under the leadership of Harry Hutchens, safety director.

Last year these Kentucky companies, with but six lost-time accidents, had next to the fewest such mishaps among nineteen large utility companies in the Middle West, and received warm commendation from the Bureau of Safety.

1. Be especially observant of parked cars. In addition to the fact that a parked car is an annoying obstruction to visibility as a blind corner, many children customarily play in and about parked cars.

A TRIBUTE

Dr. Homer L. Wilson, my friend, had possession of wisdom, judgment, courage and devotion to stand every test with patience and fortitude undunted. He always put all faith in his Lord, Jesus Christ, where he placed it when he confessed Him as his Savior. He was even tempered and always pleasant. He will be missed not alone in Morehead but wherever he was known. God bless his memory and we who mourn.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT
We rejoice to know that Dr. H. L. Wilson was permitted to live a good, honorable, upright life of usefulness in his closer profession in which he spent his entire life from manhood. Death at all times is sad, however, early or late its summons comes and always the human race is reluctant to receive it. There is a solace and comfort in the thought at this instance. The Grim Reaper delayed his coming until he, who has been removed from his loved ones, his dear wife, family and friends, has to a marked degree finished out a task of unselfish service, devotion and love in the guidance of his worthy and noble family whom he loved dearly, and the command found him ready to take leave of these earthly surroundings for that more abiding peace, love and beauty of the after life.

nition offered by the American Medical Association in 1934 with certain modifications. These definitions have generally been accepted by the participating states. It is required that applicants for aid have the fact of blindness established as the result of an eye examination by an ophthalmologist or physician skilled in the diseases of the eye. As a result of the high medical standards set by the Social Security Board much helpful information concerning blindness, its causes and cures, has been provided. Naturally, the various state boards desire to be helpful in such matters as restoration of eyesight, prevention of blindness and vocational adjustment. A recent survey indicated that at least fifteen percent of cases received aid had recommended for possible sight restoration, and over 700 had already been operated. Thus, we can see that this part of the Social Security program is much broader than a mere agency for temporary relief to the blind.
