In the days when people had to go rather long distances to pick up their mail and in some instances over mountains and across streams, the federal government conceived a plan whereby there would be various classes of post offices. A major post office would serve several post offices along these difficult country roads and trails with a carrier distributing mail at various points along a ten mile or more route. Such is the story of how the Ula Post Office came into being - a matter of convenience for patrons in a certain locale or community.

On August 20, 1924 Robert L. Hail submitted an application for a proposed post office. At the time the application was submitted the patrons in the community were invited to submit appropriate names for the office. One of the more frequent names was Sears. Amanda Ellen Hail submitted the name of the baby in the Hail family at that time - instead of Eula she spelled it Ula. On the original application, the proposed name for the post office was listed as Sears but after the mailing it was discovered that there was already a Sears post office in another location in the United States and the proposed Sears name was marked through and the name "Ula" written in. Eula Hail, now Mrs. Charles E. Meece, proudly tells the story of the naming of the post office. The application was approved on May 8, 1925.

The records from the Department of Archives show the following information concerning the establishment of the post office at Ula:

"Ula, Pulaski County, Kentucky
Established on June 6, 1925
Discontinued on December 4, 1933
Reestablished on August 20, 1936
Discontinued on April 30, 1964

In the day before radio and telephone communication, the arrival of the mail carrier with the latest happenings from the county seat was an exciting time, especially when there were such times as election time. Often in the winter months when farmers were not busy, many persons came to the office to await the arrival of the mail. They sat on nail kegs, sacks of feed, the wooden counters around the pot-bellied stove and the news of the community was passed around. Many issues of local, state and national interest were completely and unreservedly solved for there were many spitting philisophers.

A weekly paper with news from the county seat was a luxury and a daily paper from a far away city such as received by George Bradley merited him much respect and high regard as being well informed on state and national affairs. He made the trip daily from his home on Bradley's Bend about one and one-half miles from the post office to pick up the Cincinnati Post.

When the carrier arrived, the mail bags were opened and the postmaster called out from behind the cage in the corner the names of all persons receiving mail. Whether you were receiving a mail order catalog or a letter from your sweetheart, it was known by all the group that you had received mail - and then there was that shuffling of feet and a slow stroll to the window as if it did not really matter.

In later years, the post office at Ula served as a junction for two carriers - one coming from Somerset to Ula, meeting the carrier from the Whetstone and Goodwater communities.

The office was discontinued on April 30, 1964 when as an economy measure many of the smaller offices were closed and patrons began receiving mail on routes from the Somerset Office. And so an era passes - the community post office.
PLACE NAMES OF PULASKI COUNTY, KENTUCKY

Pulaski derives its name from County Pulaski, a Pole, who after having fought a losing battle for his own country's freedom, came to America to help the colonies win their Independence. But most names, such as Somerset, Woodstock and Cumberland, indicate the English origin of the early settlers.

Other towns in Pulaski whose names were derived from interest contemporary figures include Grundy, named for Hon. Felix Grundy, congressman, senator and member of Van Buren's cabinet.

Burnside is a monument to Gen. A. E. Burnside, who at one time during the Civil War made his headquarters there. The town was then known as Pt. Isabel.

Among other towns in this County whose names derive from individuals or families are Norfleet, Trimble, Hogue, Eubank and Norwood; also, Faubush, a corruption of the surname Forbes, and Bronston, a corruption of Brown's Town, which was named for Nicholas Brown.

In much the same way as the previously named towns received their names, those several communities femininely named came about, such as Nancy, Burnetta, Wilda, Faustine, Vinnie, Ruth and Naomi.
A community and church in the eastern part of the County was called Mt. Victory because of a successful revival held there many years ago, while Liberty and Freedom were named at a time when people were so conscious of those possessions.

The waterways received their names in much the same way as did the towns. Cumberland River is of English origin. Other smaller streams, as Pitman, Allen's Branch and Jurney's Branch, were named for families through whose land they ran. A majority of streams obtained their names from special characteristics which they or the surrounding land possessed. Thus, we have Rockcastle, so called because of the castlelike formations bordering it, and such obvious derivations as Sinking, Short, Clifty, Caney, Wolf, White Oak, and Troublesome.

Waitsborough, a steamboat landing at the head of navigation on the Cumberland, was owned by Cyrenius Wait. From this point were shipped salt, coal, lumber and other products by boat and barge to Nashville. Though the warehouses, stores and steamboats are gone, and the place which was once an important commercial center is now marked only by a ferry, the family has many interesting bills of sale and lading from other river cities as far away as New Orleans.

In Sloans Valley and Tateville live the descendants of the pioneer families for whom the valley and village were Pulaski County contains many interesting old churches. The oldest of the buildings is the Flat Lick Baptist Church, an old stone building.

Another very old brick church, Pisgah, was destroyed by a storm in 1913, but the descendants of the first builder's immediately erected another on the same grounds. Pisgah, a Biblical name applied to many churches, means to anyone who has lived in Pulaski the small Presbyterian church five miles south of Somerset and near Highway #27, which for a century and a quarter has yielded an influence for good.

Alexander's Chapel bears the name of one of the leading families and the Circuit Rider, William Alexander, who organized the church and erected the first building in 1852.

A good many years before the Civil War an old log house stood on the site of Soul's Chapel and was called Cragg's Chapel. The building now in use was completed in 1858, and named for Bishop Soul. In the earliest church records we find the names, Collier, Richardson, Cragg and Ridings predominating. When the church became divided on the question of slavery, many members withdrew and organized and built Bradley's Chapel, named for the family that gave to Kentucky W. O. Bradley and Ed Morrow. Besides these are Sweeney's Chapel, Gray's Chapel, Cook's Chapel, Randall's Chapel and Jenny's Chapel named for some of their early leaders.

There are few more interesting places in Pulaski County than Zollicoffer Park, a small State Park honoring Gen. Felix K. Zollicoffer who fell here during the Battle of Mill Springs, January 19, 1862.

Dutton Hill on the Crab Orchard Road was the scene of a skirmish between Federal and Confederate troops in 1863, so called from the Dutton family who owned the land. Both Zollicoffer Park and Dutton Hill are marked by appropriate monuments.
"Big Knob Lick is plotted by Elihu Barker on his maps of 1794 and 1796 on the middle waters of Fishing Creek at the juncture of Clifty Branch a few miles west of the present day town of Somerset. There is an outcrop of the Devonian Black Shale in this vicinity and this with its frequently included pyrite undoubtedly gave rise here during pioneer times, as at many other points in Kentucky, to sulphur saline waters. Barker describes the territory found on the lower waters of Fishing Creek and Pitman Creek in what is now Pulaski County as "very good land."
ZOLLCOFFER MEMORIAL PARK

About 7 mi. N. of Somerset on Ky. 80 Zollicofer Memorial Park is located in a section until recently remote and isolated by reason of poor roads. The site contains the grave of Gen. Felix K. Zollicoffer, gallant Confederate commander who was killed at the Battle of Fishing Creek during the war between the States. Gen. Zollicoffer died on the battlefield of a pistol shot inflicted by a Col. S.S. Fry (Union) of the 4th Ky. Infantry, and was buried nearby. The park is a memorial established by the U.D.C.

During the early years of the 20th century the U.D.C. erected a monument over the grave, the unveiling of which was attended by 5 of Gen. Zollicoffer's daughters.

On Oct. 3, 1933, Ky. 80 was completed to the park, and at that time exercises were held there with many notables in attendance.

Before the war between the States, Felix K. Zollicoffer was a successful newspaper editor of Paris and Columbia, Tenn. In the early '40s he took charge of the Nashville Banner where he gained political prominence, and recognition, that secured his election to Congress just before the war.

Zollicoffer is near the National Cemetery at Nancy, also on Ky. 80. Plans are

W.J. Moore and Mal Carter are both active in the Pulaski Co. Hist. Society. Both the local public library and the co. historical Soc. are located in the old P.O. Building. There's also a Young Historians Club in the Nancy H.S. (Garnett Walker, Prin. of the Wayne Co. Ele. School #1, Monticello, Ky.)
SINKING VALLEY is in the eastern part of Pulaski Co. A stream large enough to turn a mill flows underground, with occasional openings, for 6 or 7 miles. After heavy rains the underground channel is not large enough to carry off the water, and it then flows over the surface.

"Giant Wonder Cave" discovered in 1934. Named for large tunnels and chambers in the cave. The largest room being 1,000 feet in length, 200 feet wide, 150 feet high. "Lost River" is one of the tunnels of the cave. The river appears from an opening on one side of the cavern and then disappears on the other side. Located near Burnside, Pulaski Co. An underground lake (800 ft. long) has also been discovered in the cave.
