FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University has awarded a contract for the first phase of installation of sprinkler systems in its residence halls. Work will begin next Monday in Alumni Tower and Cartmell Hall.

This phase is slated for completion in mid-August at a cost of $1,282,000. Two Lexington firms, Jerry A. Taylor & Associates, Inc., and D.W. Wilburn, Inc., are the architect/engineer and the contractor, respectively. The sprinkler system will be installed by Great Valley Sprinkler of Ashland.

In addition to sprinklers in each room, the fire alarm system will be upgraded to be code compliant with audible and visual alarms, as well as pull stations and control panels where appropriate, according to Joe Planck, director of physical plant.

"From our first estimate, there has been a 66 percent increase in cost to complete all fire safety projects on campus," Planck said. "We originally thought that they would cost $3 million but have now determined that we are looking at better than $5 million."

MSU is joining other public universities in a statewide effort to bring residence halls up to current fire safety standards. To date, three of the University's 16 residence halls, Fields, Thompson and Mays, are fully sprinkled.

At the recommendation of MSU's Board of Regents, the University has made the residence hall fire safety project a priority. Sprinklers will be installed in all residence halls in a five-phase process to supplement existing measures which include emergency lights, building alarms and fire extinguishers.

The planned phases are:

Phase II--Mignon Tower, Mignon Hall and Cooper Hall, fall 2000.

Phase III---Nunn Hall, West Mignon Hall and East Mignon Hall, fall 2001.

Phase IV---Regents and Wilson halls, fall 2002.

Phase V---Normal, Waterfield and Butler halls, fall 2003.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---High school students competed in 11 divisions during the 65th Spring Symposium of the Kentucky Junior Academy of Science (KJAS) held recently at Morehead State University.

Seventy-nine students competed for awards and all expense paid trips to the meeting of the American Association of the Advancement of Science in Washington, D.C. later this year.

First, second and third place awards were given in each of the different scientific divisions. The first place winners then competed for two top spots to be sponsored by the KJAS for the trip to Washington which also will include their teacher or sponsor.

This year's competition winners were Maleeha Mohiuddin of Paul Laurence Dunbar High School in Lexington and Jason Meier of duPont Manual High School in Louisville. Mohiuddin's winning paper was based on a study of radiation-induced cell death in genetically matched cells, while Meier's research involved the examination of how a viral protein could enhance the degradation of an insecticide residue.

Winning first place in the 11 divisions were:

- *Kevin Ross, behavioral and social science, duPont Manual.
- *Mathew Falk, Biological Topics I, duPont Manual
- *Clair Rosplock, chemistry, Notre Dame Academy of Covington.
- *Max Leidner, computer science and mathematics, duPont Manual.
- *Michelle Kovank, earth and space science, Notre Dame Academy.
- *Karen Webster, environmental science, duPont Manual.
- *David Muscutt, engineering, Louisville Male High School.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Eric C. Booth, a Morehead State University senior and the son of Dr. and Mrs. Bill R. Booth of Morehead, has been awarded a doctoral fellowship in chemistry to study at Rice University in Houston, Texas.

A National Merit Scholar from Cincinnati Country Day School, Booth will complete his bachelor's degree at MSU in May with a double major in chemistry and physics and a minor in mathematics.

At Rice University, Booth will have the opportunity to study with two of the three 1996 Nobel Prize winning chemists, Dr. Richard E. Smalley and Dr. Robert F. Curl who are members of the Rice graduate faculty in chemistry.

The potential value of the award, which includes a tuition waiver and stipend, is in excess of $150,000. The letter announcing Booth's award designated him as a graduate applicant with exceptional qualifications: "This award is being offered solely in recognition of your outstanding record and qualifications."

Rice University, which has offered the doctorate in chemistry since its opening in 1912, is recognized as one of the most prestigious research universities in the Southwestern United States. It has created a new facility, the Quantum Institute and Center for Nanoscale Science and Technology, which will open this fall. With this program, Rice intends to integrate the fields of chemistry, physics, mathematics and engineering to create the world's leading center for the study of nanoscale technology.

Smalley and Curl, along with Sir Harold W. Kroto of the University of Sussex, U.K., conducted their ground-breaking research at Rice during an 11-day period in 1985. Their discovery was of a new class of carbon molecules called fullerenes. Examples of these compounds are a soccer-ball shaped molecule called C-60 and the nanotube, which has 100 times the strength of steel and can conduct electricity better than copper.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---As a representative of the last spring graduating class of the 20th century, the student speaker at Morehead State University's 1999 Spring Commencement ceremonies on Saturday, May 8, asked his fellow classmates to let this be only the beginning of their education

Kevin Beck of Grayson, reminded the other degree candidates that they were special because they had chosen to go above and beyond minimal knowledge and continue their education. "Life itself is a learning experience and we continue to learn everyday," he said.

"Today, we are stars," Beck continued, "but what about tomorrow? Will you continue to ember and glow or will you fizzle and fade? I encourage you to shine." A candidate for a Bachelor of Science degree in industrial education and technology with an area of concentration in electronics and electricity, he encouraged the graduates to "never let life pass you by. Reach for the stars, and when you get there, reach beyond."

In addition to the more than 860 students who were degree candidates, two honorary doctoral degrees were awarded. Virginia Gaines Fox, executive director and chief executive officer of Kentucky Educational Television in Lexington, was presented the honorary Doctor of Humanities degree. Alpha Hutchinson, chairman of the board of Citizens Bank in Morehead, received the honorary Doctor of Public Service degree.

In her remarks, Fox, a Fleming County native, spoke of the importance of having an educational institution close to home where one could get a degree. With higher education reform, we have an opportunity to join with technology to achieve even greater success and provide lifelong learning, she said. Showing his appreciation, Hutchinson noted that he was "honored for the distinction" he had been bestowed.

After the degrees were conferred, the new alumni were inducted into the MSU Alumni Association by its president, Janet Coakley of Harrison, Ohio.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University has cancelled its student musical performance tour of the People's Republic of China, which was slated to begin this week.

Because of unrest following the recent bombing of the Chinese embassy in Yugoslavia, the U.S. State Department has issued a travel warning asking Americans not to travel to China. "We will comply with the government's request to avoid putting our students in harm's way," said MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin. "We regret the unfortunate circumstances and hope this situation will be resolved peacefully."

MSU's Symphony Band and Percussion Ensemble, which consist of 70 students, were scheduled to depart Wednesday for a tour of China, where they were to give seven performances in a number of historical locations.

The trip was made possible by a private fund raising campaign.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University has withdrawn its offer of a site in Morehead for the proposed Community Recycling Center.

In a statement issued today by the University, MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin said the decision to withdraw the offer to lease property in West Morehead was based on the potentially negative impact of the facility on property values in that neighborhood.

Dr. Eaglin said MSU remains committed to the community recycling program, including the proposed construction of a new facility at another location.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---The story of integration and the profound successes of African-American alumni at Morehead State University have been documented in a monograph by Dr. Don Flatt titled “‘Winning Through to Fame and Glory’: African-Americans and MSU.”

The publication, sponsored by the Office of Multicultural Student Services and the MSU Foundation, was originally commissioned by President Ronald G. Eaglin in honor of the University’s 75th anniversary as a state institution. It was unveiled earlier this year as part of the “Salute to African-American History.”

Conducting approximately 40 interviews, Dr. Flatt, MSU professor of history, pieced together a story which had not previously been told. Taking its title from the closing lines of MSU’s alma mater, the monograph details the struggles of African-American students who pioneered the integration process during the 1950s and 1960s. “Morehead State was very much involved in the historical process of integration,” Dr. Flatt said.

Unlike that of many colleges and universities, MSU’s transition into the acceptance of blacks was relatively peaceful. He credits the leadership of former MSU President Adron Doran with this accomplishment.

“At the opening convocation in September 1957, Dr. Doran told the student body, ‘If you have any objections to the presence of (black) students who may be sitting beside you, you can find an institution of your liking further south,’” Flatt quoted. This was a variation of Dr. Doran’s famed “bus going East, bus going West” assertion that challenged students who were dissatisfied with the institution to find an alternative one.

The monograph traces the challenges and achievements of students who were breaking ground in those early years. The accounts are moving, according to Dr. Francene Botts-Butler, director of Multicultural Student Services. “It made me laugh and it made me cry,” she said. “But I couldn’t put it down. I cried all the way through the part about Dr. Marshall Banks. Then I began thinking of ways to use his story to motivate our students of today.”

(MORE)

Dr. Banks was the first black athlete to compete in the Ohio Valley Conference; however, conflicts with MSU's head basketball coach forced him to forego his basketball career and become a track star. He currently serves as chairman of the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation at Howard University in Washington, D.C.

In another story, a young black man had come to campus to begin his freshman year and was disenchanted to learn that the only motel in town accepted foreign blacks but not American blacks. The student then went to the desk clerk and recited the opening lines of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" in Old English. The clerk, assuming the young man was foreign, rented him a room.

"Hopefully, this book will let our African-American alumni know that their stories are not forgotten and that we remember, honor and revere them for paving the way for today's students," Dr. Botts-Butler said. "I also hope that it will make members of the community stop and ask, 'What were we so afraid of? These people just wanted to build better lives for themselves, to get ahead.'"

The monograph concludes with a "who's who" account of African-American alumni. Along with Dr. Banks, the brief biographies include Dr. Laretta Byars, vice chancellor for minority affairs at the University of Kentucky; Vic Carter, co-anchor of WJZ-TV's evening newscasts in Baltimore; Michele Marriott, reporter for the "New York Times," and Dr. James Thomas, chief vascular surgeon at the University of Kansas School of Medicine.

"The biographies represent just a sample of the outstanding achievements of our African-American alumni," Dr. Flatt said. "Most people don't realize the big success stories that we've had here.

"Our present leadership also should be commended for efforts in recruiting and retaining African-American students," Dr. Flatt said. "Even with fluctuating enrollments, our black student population has remained strong and the quality of students is a tribute to MSU's recruiting efforts."

The publication will be distributed at no cost to all MSU African-American alumni as well as to local libraries and public schools. "We want to get it into as many hands as possible," Dr. Botts-Butler said. "It is important for people to hear these stories."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Several music students at Morehead State University recently traveled to Philadelphia to perform on a landmark studio recording for Rockwell Productions to resurrect a 1927 operetta entitled "Rose-Marie."

"Not only was a cast recording of 'Rose-Marie' not available on CD, but none was ever made," said Scott Bradley, MSU alumnus and music director for Rockwell Productions. "There was a vinyl studio recording made in the 1950s but not a true cast recording of the original score."

The MSU musicians joined students and alumni from The Curtis Institute, Temple University, Oberlin Conservatory and Manhattan School of Music to provide instrumentation for the cast recording. "The MSU students performed brilliantly," said Bradley.

Students who participated in the recording were:

*Mike Agee, Englewood, Ohio, senior, on clarinet;

*Heather Brown, West Van Lear junior, on flute;

*Adria Dowd, Berea senior, on clarinet;

"It was a great tribute to Morehead State University and its Department of Music that these students had the opportunity to work in Philadelphia and be exposed to the talents of other fine musicians," Bradley said. "They should be commended for their professionalism and commitment to excellence."

"Our students were well-prepared for the job," said Dr. Christopher Gallaher, chair of MSU's Department of Music. "This shows that their education at Morehead State is equal to or above the quality of some of the stellar music schools on the East Coast. It is also good professional experience for them which could open new avenues for their career choices," he said.

PAINTSVILLE, Ky.---A retired teacher from Flat Gap, who scrimped and saved to go to college, has made the pathway easier for future students from Johnson County by giving $1.3 million to Morehead State University.

Johnson County School Superintendent Orville Hamilton and MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin announced today that the late Thomas Raymond Curtis, a 1951 MSU graduate, created the scholarship endowment through his estate to benefit "gifted and needy" graduates of Johnson Central High School. It is the largest single gift in MSU's history.

The first person selected to be a "Curtis Scholar" at MSU is Brandy N. Castle, the daughter of Easter and Donnie Castle Sr., of River. The scholarship is worth $10,000 per year and may be renewed for three additional years. Students who want to become teachers receive preference in the selection process. Other criteria include superior academic performance and financial need.

"Mr. Curtis has left a beautiful, enduring legacy to Johnson County students whom he taught for 30 years. His modest lifestyle and entrepreneurial skills as a buyer and seller of collectibles allowed him to fulfill his dream of sending other mountain students to college without the financial hardships he had to overcome," said Dr. Eaglin.

"For three generations, Johnson County students have been influenced by this gentle man. Now, future generations will be able to thank this humble citizen for financing their education," Superintendent Hamilton said.

Mr. Curtis, who died last November at age 68, also stipulated in his will that special attention be given to students whose parents did not finish high school and who are from the Flat Gap area. One "Curtis Scholar" will be selected annually until four are enrolled concurrently, or until the endowment has accrued sufficient interest to fund additional scholarships.

The University anticipates that 10 or more "Curtis Scholars" eventually will be enrolled at MSU at any one time, according to Tim Rhodes, director of admissions and financial aid.

Mr. Curtis first came to the Morehead State campus on June 4, 1947, riding in the bed of a cattle truck his parents had hired to make the trip. After only one year of college, he dropped out to teach at the one-room school at Red Bush on an emergency certificate. He continued his studies at MSU and earned a bachelor's degree with a double major in English and history.

His education did not end there. Mr. Curtis enrolled at Marshall University, where he completed a master's degree in English in 1952. A stint in the military followed. During the next 18 months, he was part of an armor unit in Europe. While there, he studied at the U.S. Army-Europe Quartermaster School and graduated in 1953.

With his military obligation fulfilled, Mr. Curtis returned to East Kentucky and the classroom, this time as the teacher of grades 7 through 12 at Flat Gap, where he would remain for the next 30 years. He continued to practice what he offered as advice to young teachers: "Establish good discipline in the classroom and learning will follow."

After retiring from teaching, Mr. Curtis was self-employed in retail sales and as a collector of numerous items including knives and guns. A free lance writer, he penned "Collecting Case Knives," a copy of which was distributed to every Case salesman in the U.S. at that time.

Up until the time of his death from cancer, Mr. Curtis remained active in his community.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Despite his rocky beginnings as a chemistry student, Dr. Marshall Chapman, assistant professor of geoscience at Morehead State University, became a volcanologist and a geochemist—in other words, he studies volcanoes and the chemistry of the planet. Through a grant from the National Science Foundation, he is currently researching the volcanoes of Hawaii.

While studying religion as an undergraduate at the University of the South in Sewanee, Tenn., Dr. Chapman did not pass his freshman chemistry course. In those days, he was more interested in studying the evolution of Christian theology than the evolution of the earth. In fact, it wasn't until his senior year that he took his first geology course; but from that point he was hooked.

"Since I was not a science major, I had to make up a lot of undergraduate courses and I wasn't initially accepted to graduate school," Dr. Chapman said. Through continuing education opportunities to enhance his coursework in geoscience, he was eventually accepted by the University of Massachusetts at Amherst where he completed his master's degree and later his doctoral degree in geochemistry.

In graduate school, Dr. Chapman studied the geologic make-up of Isle au Haut, an island off the coast of Maine, which is part of Acadia National Park. "We analyzed the chemistry of the lava which told us about the plumbing system of the volcano that produced the island," he said. "We crushed the rocks and used X-ray beams to fluoresce the particles so we could analyze the elements and measure their amounts. The chemical make-up told us about the volcano's chamber, how deep it was, what pressure it was under and what type of magma (molten rock material within the earth) was produced there," he said.

Through chemical analysis, Dr. Chapman determined that the volcanic rock produced at Isle au Haut was approximately 424 million years old. "James Hutton, an 18th Century naturalist, known as the 'father of geology,' stated that 'the present is the key to the past.' If we look at the processes that are operating today, we can determine what types of processes were at work in the past to produce the results that we see now."

A member of the International Association of Volcanology and Chemistry of the Earth's Interior, Dr. Chapman travels to points around the globe, studying the chemical processes of the earth's past. Most recently he served as a shipboard scientist on an expedition to gather volcanic rock from the ocean floor off the south and west coasts of the main island of Hawaii.

"Using a 200-foot vessel with a large boom and a chain-mail type net, we dredged the sea floor down to 4,500 meters (about 15,000 feet), collecting 7,000 pounds of rocks so we could analyze their content," Dr. Chapman said. His job was to assist in positioning the boat to ensure they got the needed rocks.

"Hawaii is built up of lava flows, one on top of the other," he said. "On the sea floor off the coast, we can potentially pick out the lava that was produced by Mauna Loa, the volcano that produced much of the island. Then we crush and analyze the lava rock to see what it's made of and how it has changed through time," he continued.

On his next expedition to Hawaii, Dr. Chapman will bring a collection of geologic samples back to the MSU campus. He hopes to use these samples to teach others about the past and what could happen in the future.

"Our goal is to increase our knowledge about how this planet works," he said.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---The Kentucky Business Environmental Assistance Program will present a breakfast briefing at Morehead State University on Thursday, May 27, to assist small businesses in complying with the June 21 deadline of air quality regulation, "Clean Air Act 112r."

The briefing will run from 8 a.m. until noon.

During the briefing, small business will learn the importance of a Risk Management Plan (RMP), issues that impact the ability to operate facilities that require an RMP, information that needs to be related to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the public, and how to avoid the RMP by modifying material handling procedures.

The Kentucky Business Environmental Assistance Program staff will be available for small businesses to schedule one-on-one assistance or site assessments.

The EPA developed air quality regulations that require businesses that handle regulated hazardous substances above certain volumes to develop and implement a program to prevent, detect and respond to chemical accidents.

This regulation affects many small businesses with less than 100 employees, such as food processors, distributors and warehouses that use ammonia as a refrigerant; manufacturers and wholesalers of durable and non-durable goods; propane users and retailers and agricultural retailers, including co-ops, that store and sell ammonia; and service industries, such as commercial laundries, janitorial services, hospitals and chemical suppliers, manufacturers and end users.

The free breakfast briefings also will be held at other locations in the state. The schedule includes: Nolin RECC Building, Elizabethtown, May 24, 8:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.; Green River Area Development District Building, Owensboro, May 25, 8 a.m.-noon; ECU Tri-County Campus, Corbin, May 26, 8 a.m.-noon; and Central Library, Lexington, June 3, 8 a.m.-noon.

The breakfast briefings are sponsored by the Kentucky Business Environmental Assistance Program, the Kentucky Division for Air Quality, the Kentucky Small Business Development Center, and the University of Kentucky.

Additional information is available by calling the Kentucky Business Environmental Assistance Program at (800) 562-2327.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Amber Fogle of Falmouth, a junior at Morehead State University, will serve as a student intern for the Kentucky General Assembly's 2000 session.

She is one of only 15 interns accepted from universities across the state and the only one from MSU. The paid position also will earn her 15 hours of credit toward her degree.

"It is a wonderful opportunity," she said. "It will give me hands-on experience the behind the scenes work of the General Assembly and an opportunity to determine if this is something I would like to get into later on."

Fogle, who has a double major in government and history with a minor in animal science, plans to attend law school after completing her bachelor's degree. "I am interested in corporate law and specifically would like to work with an agricultural corporation."

She hopes that the professional contacts she makes through the internship will prove to be valuable as she enters the job market. "I am interested in preparing myself to be a viable candidate," she said.

As an intern, Fogle will serve on a committee or be placed with a particular legislator in November. Among her responsibilities will be conducting research for the bills being prepared for the General Assembly's 2000 session, which begins in January.

Some interns are placed with the Legislative Research Commission director's office, tracking bills as they move through the legislative process, according to Dr. Lindsey Back, MSU professor of government and intern coordinator. "Others may carry out constituent services for legislators or be placed in the public information office, writing press releases and preparing information for the public."

"This is an excellent award for Amber," Dr. Back said. "Internships are quite competitive and to be chosen is a real honor."

"I am excited about the opportunity to experience something like this during my college years that will be of assistance later on," Fogle said. "Of course, it will be fun, too."

Fogle is a member of MSU's Student Government Association, Phi Alpha Theta history honor society and Gamma Phi Beta social sorority. She is the daughter of Bobby and Becky Fogle of Falmouth and the granddaughter of Gene and Mamie Faulkner of Morgan and Bill and Ruby Fogle of Butler.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Katie Evans, a senior at Morehead State University, has received an Award of Excellence from the Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi. She was one of only 30 recipients nationwide to receive the $1,000 scholarship.

"There are so many brilliant students across the country," she said. "It was amazing to win. I was absolutely surprised."

Evans, a native of Ashland, is a mathematics major and statistics minor. A May candidate for a bachelor's degree from MSU, she plans to pursue a master's degree in applied mathematics at Virginia Tech.

Unaware that Phi Kappa Phi offered financial awards, Evans learned about the process of applying for a scholarship from her adviser, Joyce Saxon, MSU assistant professor of mathematics.

"The application emphasized involvement in the Honors Program, internships, work experience, and involvement on campus and in the community. It really focused on a holistic picture of the individual," she said.

Evans has been active in the Honors Program for four years and is a member of the Leadership Development Program, Gamma Beta Phi Honor Society and the Math Club. She has completed several internships, including a math research program at Louisiana State University, an applied research program in math at the University of Kentucky's Center for Biomedical Engineering, and a lie detection research project at the Las Alamos National Lab.

"Each project gave me good experience and offered something different from regular classwork," she said.

After reviewing the applications, a committee of MSU faculty members chose Evans to be the chapter's candidate for the national competition. "I knew some of the other students who had applied, and they were top-quality students. It was an honor just to be selected by Morehead State's committee because the competition was so impressive," she said.

In addition to the $1,000 scholarship, Evans will receive a lifetime membership to Phi Kappa Phi. "I believe this will encourage me to become more active in the organization," she said. "I hope that I can represent the University in a prestigious manner. It has been such a privilege to attend MSU and to work with such outstanding faculty here."

Established in 1897, The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi is the oldest and largest national honor society that recognizes and promotes superior scholarship in all academic areas of higher education. The Society currently has a worldwide membership of more than 900,000 in 281 chapters.

Monday's groundbreaking in Louisville for the Kentucky Commonwealth Virtual University and Virtual Library was observed locally at the Rowan County Public Library via KET and the Internet. Shown seated at one of the public library's six new computers is Frankie Calvert, Rowan County librarian. Standing, from left, are John Alcorn, local library treasurer; State Rep. John Will Stacy and Vinson Watts, vice chair of the Rowan County library's Board of Trustees. Rep. Stacy said he expects the 2000 General Assembly to appropriate more state funding to local libraries to help meet the added costs of providing patrons with on-line access to classes and materials through the Commonwealth Virtual University/Library. New computers are being provided by the Gates Foundation to most of the state's public libraries.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University's Camden-Carroll Library will be closed to the public for two weeks, beginning July 31 and running through Aug. 15, as it converts to a new online library system.

The library's current Unicorn system will be replaced by Voyager, which is the new statewide system approved by the Council on Postsecondary Education through the Kentucky Commonwealth Virtual Library, according to Larry Besant, MSU director of libraries.

"This advance notice will allow all our users to plan for this period when the library will not be available," he said. "Early August is a busy time, not only for MSU faculty members, but also for public school teachers in the region, who prepare for the next term by researching materials and planning special projects."

When MSU classes begin in the fall, the users will have access to many new databases as well as access to other libraries in the state, Besant said. "With a single online search, a vast pool of resources will be readily available."

During the two-week period, all services will be upgraded to be fully operational and staff will be trained on Voyager by Aug. 15, Besant noted. MSU and KCVL will offer online or individual training and class instruction.

Besant is hopeful that the transition will be a smooth one, as this is the third major upgrade to its online system in the last decade. The library first went online in the late 1980s, when the card catalog was replaced. However, Besant expects few problems because "our technical staff and users are among the most experienced in the state."

To prepare for the changeover, patrons of MSU's library are being asked to return all materials and pay all fees before Friday, July 30.

Additional information on accessing MSU's library databases through the World Wide Web is available by calling Tom Kmetz, online services librarian, at (606) 783-5111.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Dr. Joe Winstead, chair of the Department of Biological and Environmental Sciences at Morehead State University, will lead a five-day field trip entitled "Eastern Deciduous Forests of Kentucky" as part of the 16th International Botanical Congress, July 28-Aug. 1.

The International Botanical Congress, which meets once every six years at locations around the globe, will meet in St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 1-7. "Approximately 6,000 delegates from around the world will attend," Dr. Winstead said.

Departing from St. Louis, the field trip will make several stops across the commonwealth, illustrating the enormous variety of all levels of vegetation in the temperate deciduous forests of North America, according to Dr. Winstead. He will serve as field trip leader, along with three colleagues, Dr. Mike Held of St. Peter's College, N.J., Dr. Bill Bryant of Thomas More College and Dr. William Martin of Eastern Kentucky University.

"Several stops in different physiographic parts of the state will emphasize the complexity of physical environments and native flora and vegetation, the numerous causal mechanisms promoting diversity, and the threats to sustaining these ecosystems in a largely rural, but rapidly developing region of the southeastern United States," Dr. Winstead said.

The principal areas to be included are: Boone County Cliffs and Dinsmore's Woods on the Ohio River, Bluegrass Savanna in the Lexington area, Red River Gorge Geological Area in the Daniel Boone National Forest, Lilley Cornett Woods in southeastern Kentucky, Rock Creek Gorge Clear Cut in the southern region of the Daniel Boone National Forest and Big Woods in Mammoth Cave National Park.

The field trip will be limited to 35 participants. It will be one of 24 such trips scheduled across the nation in conjunction with the Botanical Congress.

Additional information is available by calling Dr. Winstead at (606) 783-2944.
