WAR HERO PLEADS FOR EDUCATION OPPORTUNITIES
PIKEVILLE, KY., Sept. 27.—Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, founder of moonlight schools, and Sergt. Sandlin, Leslie County, are here to wage war on illiteracy. They spoke at the Presbyterian church and Sergt. Sandlin made a plain and touching appeal. He told incidents connected with Kentucky's 20,000 soldier boys in the recent war, who could not read and write, and related how he refused promotion, when his superiors insisted upon it, on account of not being educated.
