THE GARDEN

Among the earliest vegetables to go into the garden are asparagus, peas. Some gardeners, in fact, make St. Valentine's Day pea planting day, and although one need not be as specific as that, for there is no particular pea planting virtue in that day, the advantage of getting the first peas started early cannot be denied.

Peas are a seed crop therefore their fertilizing must be balanced. Stable manure is desirable to use.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Five room house large garden, good orchard. Also 6 room house with garage and garden. Thomas Addition. See Z. J. TUNNEY.

FOR RENT—Five room house, all modern. See M. F. BROWN.

For it is a soil conditioner but stable manure, used in excess, may be taken to where it is sometimes an extremely light soil. Phosphorus is needed to make blossoms thick and set pods, and because stable manure lacks phosphorus, this element should be added in the form of a superphosphate. It may be applied broadcast over the entire garden, for all the vegetables benefit from its use or it may be applied where the row is to be, and shopped into the soil a few inches.

Broadcast rate is 100 pounds to a space 100 feet square or if an acre is involved, 200 pounds. Row applications are made at the rate of one pound to 30 feet.

Peas are distinctly a "cool" crop, they go out of bearing soon after the weather has become definitely warm, or after the soil has got warm. They can be kept quite a bit longer, even though the atmosphere has warmed up if rains have been taken to get them rooted deeply. Good practice, always, is to make the seed furrows deep, say 4 inches, then to fill the furrow after the peas have grown above it. Some gardeners prepare their pea furrows early in the winter so as to be ready to do their pea planting when the favorite date comes, ignoring almost entirely the condition of the soil. This is good practice, especially for the early sorts, Alaska and Radio. By the way, the latter is much the superior variety, all ways.

About April 1, the ground having warmed to some extent, it becomes safe to plant the sweeter, wrinkled seeded varieties, Thomas Laxton and deep furrowing helps.

Peas are beset by two serious pests, wildew and plant lice. The disease mildew may come at any time, but particularly when the weather turns suddenly muggy, but days with sudden showers, and following rapidly, mildew damage has been reduced by spraying with lime sulphur or the entire value of the peas. Sometimes a change in the weather mitigates the difficulty, and that is practically all the "control" the grower has. Under the same weather conditions, plant lice may come late and be stopped by spraying with dusting with tobacco extract or with rotenone, but this is questionable for peas because of the intermediate both in quality and in hardness are American Wonder and English Wonder. These are part wrinkled and are thus better able to cope with sudden soil and low temperatures than the really good wrinkled-seeded "Sugar" sorts. The season may be wound up with Telephone, the reliable tall, prolific sort, but those quality is only medium, and should be sown promptly if the pods have filled.

There is a definitely summer sort of peas whose popularity deserves to spread, namely the edible-podded varieties, a French Mammoth Melting Sugar is the best known variety. They are the tallest of all, a support 6 feet high is not too much. They should be sown just as the seedlings begin to show. Their planting time is during early April, and deep furrowing helps.

Under the same weather conditions, plant lice may come late and be stopped by spraying with dusting with tobacco extract or with rotenone, but this is questionable for peas because of the expense or really effective control. Generally when pea lice make their appearance, the gardener may best write off his peas and hope for "better luck" next year, and by the by, is the way so often that gardeners must reconcile themselves.

TO FERTILIZER FOR IMPROVED TOBACCO

Farmers in doubt about soil management and fertilization for tobacco will find useful information in Bulletin No. 379 of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

Where hurley is grown on good soil an acre of producing 1,000 pounds of leaf an acre without additional fertilization, it is suggested that about 300 to 400 pounds of fertilizer analyzing 4 to 5 percent potash usually will prove profitable. On less productive soils it may pay to use 500 to 800 pounds of fertilizer an acre.

In most instances 8 to 10 tons of manure per acre, supplemented by about 200 pounds of superphosphate on low-phosphate soil, will give better quality tobacco than complete fertilization, according to this bulletin.

For dark tobacco, 250 to 300 pounds an acre of 38-0, or similar analysis, is recommended for use at the hills. This is considered sufficient for soils already in good condition. On poorer land, fertilizer at the hills should be supplemented with 200 pounds of superphosphate and a broadcast application of 50 or 75 pounds of muriate or sulfate of potash to the acre.

GIVES POINTS IN BUILDING HABITS

Discussing the building of habits, Miss Florence Inley of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture says that "many adults fail to realize that the most important factor in training children is their attitude and method of approach to the child." She lists the following points to keep in mind in developing good habits:

- Be calm and self-controlled. Speak quietly but firmly. Be a good example. Think before giving an order. Agree, as parents, on a plan but realize that it must be flexible.

THOMAS FOR STATE SENATOR

J. J. THOMAS

TO THE VOTERS OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY OF THE THIRTY-FIRST SENATORIAL DISTRICT, COMPOSED OF THE COUNTIES OF BATH, FLEMING, MASON, MENFEE, POWELL AND ROWAN:

I hereby make formal announcement of my candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the office of State Senator from the 31st District, subject to the will of the voters at the Primary Election to be held on August 5, 1939.

It is to be noted that I was born and reared at Preston, Bath county, and after teaching the age of majority, I engaged in the mercantile business at Preston. In later years I removed to Owingsville, where I now reside.

On April 17, 1917, I enlisted in the United States Army, ten days after the United States declared war against Germany, and served for the period of twenty-one months in the World War.

The Democratic party honored me by electing me as a member of the House of Representatives of the 69th Legislative District, composed of the counties of Bath and Rowan, and I served in the regular session of 1936 and the Special Sessions of 1937. As a servant of my constituency and the entire people of the state during the sessions, I at this time desire to refer you to some history making laws of our state during these sessions, all of which I faithfully supported and cast my vote for.

I worked and voted for the Social Security Law, commonly called the "Old Age Pension" primarily intended for the support of all those unfortunate persons of our state who from adversity, caused by no fault of their own, are unable to support themselves. At the time the bill was passed by the Legislature, our state was heavily burdened with debt, saddled upon us by former administrations, and in order to retire that indebtedness it became necessary to place a limit on the amount per month of each applicant for old age pension. Now the huge indebtedness that was heaped upon the people of our state has been reduced, or will be reduced to a minimum, paid off, by the end of the present term, if elected. I pledge myself to work diligently and vote for the maximum amount of $3000 per month to each and every unfortunate person in our state, who may claim a within the requirements of the law.

I voted for the State Reorganization bill, and as a law has been mainly responsible for the cutting down of unnecessary expenses in the operation of our State Government, and which was principally responsible and enabled the payment of the huge state debt we inherited.

During those sessions I actively supported and voted for the Rural Highway Law, which has proven to be instrumental in enabling the people who were isolated in rural districts to get to the markets and in connecting them with the main highways of our state. I pledge, if elected, to use all my efforts in the continuance of highway construction in order that our state shall no longer be called a "detour" state.

Prior to the time of its passage, there was a crying demand over our state for the construction and enlargement of our charitable and penal institutions, and in order to make them more adequate, sanitary and humane for the keeping of our unfortunate citizens, I worked for and voted for the bill providing for their welfare, which became a law. The progress that has been made in the building of these institutions is well known to the people of our state.

At those sessions there was another state wide demand for the increase of the per capita of all school children of the state. I voted for the sum of $1200 per capita, thereby placing our state in line with other states in the raising of the standard of education. If elected, I shall work and vote for the maintenance of the present school program.

Respectfully, J. J. THOMAS.

BIOGRAPHY Ann Morris

Ann Morris is a real Hollywood Cinderella. A year ago, she was tested at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Billy Grady, talent scout, was impressed by her beautiful and had talent, but explained to her that she needed more dramatic experience.

"Come back in a year," he said. Exactly twelve months to the day, the young woman returned to the studio. She had been appearing in amateur plays and little theater shows. She took another test, and this time it was a new story. Not only did she win a four-term contract, but a lead for her career.

She appeared opposite Dennis O'Keefe in "The Chamber". O'Keefe, incidentally, was unknown when he was taken from the extra ranks to portray the romantic lead in "The End of the Road".

Mrs. Morris was born in Tampa, Florida, August 6. As a child she and her mother, Mrs. M. J. Morris, who is a well-known actress, moved to Dallas, Texas, and attended her schooling at Hollywood High School, where she excelled in drama. Her father, John Young, was once a student.

Ann is obtaining a college education by attending lectures at night and during the day when she's not working.

Signed to a contract on a Saturday afternoon, she was in front of the cameras on the following Monday. Her director, Edwin Martin, thinks she has more possibilities than any other newcomer in the past five years.

Her parents are Frank Everett Morris and Mary Lee Evans Morris. Her father is a day goods merchant in Dallas.

Her favorite sports are tennis and horseback riding. Besides acting, she's proud of the fact that she can rope and brand a calf and ride in a barrel race.

Five feet, seven inches tall, Miss Morris weighs 120 pounds. She is a blonde with green eyes. Her favorite menu is not fried chicken, but pickles and peanuts. She collects records, including everything from classics to swing. She can handle any type of a suit-boat up to an eight-footer, and has been in several races.

If she were not in pictures, Ann would marry and raise a family; she thinks six children would be fine if she had a ranch. Gardenia perfume makes a hit with her, and her best friend always brings carnations. Paul Whitman leads all the other hands in her estimation.

Business Guides By C. E. Johnston

Director, Business Training Schools, International Correspondence Schools

A MAN who plans to open a business should have a reasonable assurance of success. He should also have specific knowledge of the field he plans to enter. Many persons who do not have these qualifications attempt to compensate for their deficiencies by employing trained and experienced managers. While it is possible to succeed by this method, hired brains rarely take the place of knowledge on the part of the business owner. This is a good point to keep in mind.

Any man who is starting a business should realize the great importance of a good name. He must decide how his business can best be placed to the public. If the enterprises has to do with the manufacture of a product, a reputation of reliability of the product. The reputation of a business that has only a service to market, however, may depend solely upon the quality of the service rendered by its employees for customers.

Some of America's great businesses were founded by men who had little business knowledge to begin with, but not one such man was built on a doubtful reputation.

It is obvious that today the success of a new business depends on three essentials: A knowledge of business principles, an understanding of the field in which the enterprise is started, and a reputation for honest dealing.

Among the more important measures to come before the general assembly during Mr. Thomas' term in the lower house were the Social Security Act (Old Age Pension), the State Reorganization Bill, Rural Highway Act, the measure looking to the reorganizing of the state charitable and penal institutions, the law reducing the cost of automobile and truck licenses and other measures, which, as an adherent of the administration, he supported.

A B C Logic in Casserole Cookery

A Real Appetite-Rouser, Individual Rice Mushroom Casserole With Canned Peas

Too many cooks are inclined to overlook the opportunities offered by casserole cookery. Since casseroles do afford such an excellent way to use every part of the entire family preparation.

Some cooks are apt to allow the remaining bits of a baked ham, a roast or the dinner vegetables to be tossed carelessly into a casserole and as soon as they are heated, assume that the family will be pleased to see them.

In preparing casserole dishes, try and combine foods that are contrasting in flavor as well as color. Indicate little change in texture here and there and you have the foundation recipe upon which you may build many a casserole dish that really spoils good cooking.

Just to refresh your memory as to the many foods that lend themselves to casserole cooking, here a few of the time honored favorites — macaroni, spaghetti, peas, potatoes, eggs, cheese, bread, vegetables, fish and practically all types of meats.

Another good rule to follow in planning the ingredients for your casseroles is to introduce one new food either as a garnish to the finished dish, or include it as part of the casserole. The food which lends itself so well for this purpose is canned peas. You'll find them put in a neat and neat into any dish when they are added.

The versatility of varied peas is based on their fresh and elegant flavor and because they can be obtained in size and texture to suit any taste.

Some people like them, they some like them very large, some like them extra tender, and sweet, while still others prefer peas that are large and perhaps more mature, with a meaty texture. So the canning industry aims to please every type and taste.

Here are several suggestions for casserole meals — some of them may be prepared from left-over foods or you may find them so tempting that you'll not be able to wait until the rice and ham are left over. Regardless of how the ingredients are obtained, they'll make good eating for the entire family.

Stuffed Meat Loaf With Canned Peas

2 lbs. meat loaf mixture (see your favorite combination of 1 lb. per ground pork 1 lb. pork).

This in the center about 2 cups of seasoned bread stuffing, then fold the meat from the middle of the pan back carefully (casserole pan before serving with a ring of hot-baked corned beef. This makes a delicious one-dish meal.

Here's an appetizing dish you can think together in no time. It's Rice Mushroom Casserole with a garnish of flavoured canned peas.

Rice Mushroom Casserole

1 cup rice 1 1/2 cups butter
1 lb. mushrooms 1 cup ground beef
1 cup onion 1 cup peas
1/2 cup milk 1/2 cup cheese
1/2 cup salt water. Place in a well buttered 2 1/2 quart casserole. Bake at 350° and thoroughly cooked, serve at once. The making of this quantity of rice and peas is one dish which serves in individual casseroles prepared above.

IT'S A HIT! The NEW Firestone CHAMPION TIRE

Because IT'S THE ONLY TIRE MADE WITH THE NEW SAFETY-LOCK CORD BODY and GEAR-GRIP TREAD

CAR OWNERS everywhere are acclaiming the extra blowout protection and non-skid safety of the new Firestone Champion Tire. And automobile manufacturers, knowing its outstanding performance, have adopted it for their new 1939 models. On every hand you hear, "It's the most effective tire we ever had on wet pavement and in mud and snow!" It's the hit of 1939!

The Firestone Champion Tire is a completely new achievement in safety engineering and the result of a new and revolutionary means of locking greater safety into the cord body of a tire. This is accomplished first, by the use of a new type of tire cord called "Safety-Lock," in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to give greater strength. And then the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply and the plies themselves are all securely locked together by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-Dipping, which provides amazingly greater strength — and greater strength means greater safety.

The new Safety-Lock cord construction gives the added strength that makes possible the use of the new thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip Tread, which provides remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new tread is called "Gear-Grip" because of its unique design which has more than three thousand sharp-edged angles that grip the road with a square-footed hold to protect against skidding and to assure a safe stop.

Come in today and equip your car with a set of new Firestone Champion Tires, the only tires made that are safety-proofed on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

The FEUD at SINGLE SHOT

By Luke Short

Sprawled in an easy chair on the other side of the wide fireplace, a far end of the room, sat Quinn. One of his guns pointed at the door. The other pointed at the two men. Pearson and Crowell, seated together on aavenport. Both men were holding their hands over their heads.

"Quinn?" Roy exploded.

"Howdy," Quinn drawled. "Pearson seems to think I shouldn't have come here tonight."

Roy was the first to find himself and he chuckled. "Reckon he'd like to tell Buck Hammond that?"

"I don't intend to tell Buck Hammond anything," Pearson snapped. His face was stern and unyielding. Quinn drew a pair of handkerchiefs from his pocket and handed them to Roy.

Pearson and Quinn, protesting, were handcuffed together.

"Reckon you and Crowell can take them over to Doc Phillips?" Roy asked Dave. "I'm going to get the sheriff. Well, make this legal any how."

It was a grim and silent group that collected on the porch of Dr. Phillips' at Roy's behest. He had gone to the hotel to awaken Mary, and had been told by the clerk that Winters was found dead in a hotel room. The clerk had informed the sheriff, who immediately started a search for Quinn.

"Did you tell Mrs. Winters?" Roy asked softly.

"Sure, she's her husband, ain't he?"

Roy had no desire to face her now, so he had sent a note up to her room with the clerk, asking her to come to Hammond's. Then he picked up Larcio, Chuck and the sheriff, and they went back to Hammond's.

Mary was there about of three Dave's face was strangely calm. Pearson and Crowell were sitting side by side on an empty bed. Dorsey was sitting on the far side of Hammond's bed.

Quinn was seated in the corner near the door. Hank eyed him suspiciously and Quinn chugged his seat, a smile of inner amusement on his face.

The sheriff started in without preliminaries. "Pearson, we've got all the goods on you," he announced.

"What's any idea what you're talking about," Pearson replied.

"Wait a minute," Roy put in. He lounged off one of the beds and sat on the foot of Hammond's across from Pearson and Crowell. Roy built a cigarette, lit it, and inhaled deeply.

"Matter of fact, Pearson," he drawled at last, "we haven't got a thing on you."

"Then let me go?" Pearson said coldly.

"What's the connection have you got with Crowell?" Roy asked mildly. "Banking business," Pearson said.

"The kind that would make Crowell get on a train in front of five or six men to make it look like he was leavin' town and then jump off as soon as he was out of the station?"

"That was unfrat," said Mr. Crowell. "I'm no business of mine. He had an engagement to marry her. He kept it. That's all I know." His voice rose; it makes things you for me."

Roy laughed. "What makes you think we have to?"

"Because I'm innocent of any crime. The law requires it?"

Roy handed forward a little his face unsmiling. "Forget you have any rights under the law, Pearson. You've got to go with me."

"he knows you're behind this bushwhackin' and dynamitin' and stealin' the same as we do. Only he don't have what they call the 'judicial temperament.' Maybe you'd wondered what's happened to 'em."

Neither of them answered, but they looked at Roy closely.

"Trials are expensive, the sheriff thinks."

"I'm talkin' to you now, Crowell," Roy said. "I was under the davenport when you were talkin' to Mr. Winters and her husband. I heard the conversation you and Winters had when Mrs. Winters went out of the room. Dave overheard that. Says that you ordered the kidnapping of Dorsey Hammond and the deed sigued was in your favor. More than that, you left orders before Hank arrested you to burn the D Bar T, so as to make Mary run away her half the spread. What've you got to say?"

"Have it," Crowell said calmly. "I demand to be placed in jail and have this go through the regular channels."

Roy smiled and turned to the sheriff. "What say, Hank? He's a damn fine trader."

"Yes, I heard it," the sheriff said. "Butter let me take him in."

Roy shrugged. "All right. Dave was goin' with you. I'll talk to Pearson."

"I can handle him alone," the sheriff said. There was menace in his speech. "Griping them keys," he said to Quinn.

Suddenly, Mary cried out. She took Roy's seat, sprang and faced Roy. "Roy, don't do it! Don't do it! You know what will happen!"

The night was deathly still.

Roy's hand out, as came the end of the sheriff's gun, he held against the wall, where he had laid like a small boy fearing punishment. "I didn't do it! I did it! Get him away." The sheriff made his way out of the room.

"Reckon it begins with the train hold-up, don't it, Pearson?" Dave asked.

"Pearson nodded. "How did you know that?"

"That ranny by the name of Chinch out at Sayers place," Dave said.

Quinn frowned, then turned to Pearson. "The money in the baggage car was goin' to your bank, was it?"

Pearson nodded. "Crowell gave Sayers the order to stick up the train. Part of the money would be given to Sayers, and the rest turned over to me. You see that money was insured. I would get that same amount back from the insurance company."

The outer door opened and heavy footsteps trailed through the house. The porch door opened to let the sheriff in. Larcio said quietly, "A quick trip, Angelo said quietly.

"Uh-huh." The sheriff pulled a cigarette and lit it, then looked at Roy. "Well?"

"No go."

The sheriff walked over to Roy's side and stood looking down at him.

"A quick trip, Angelo said quietly. "Better come along, Pearson," he growled.

"I might be for you, but it isn't for me. I got elected on a oath that I'd do my best to prevent crime. If you want, I'm goin' to let him go and have this to go through all the courts, you better take a long walk home."

"Can you find to cover it up?"

"Crowell's cover, at Pearson's place now, I'm on the floor with my gun in my hand," the sheriff said. "Pearson can be arrested in the room with a gun in his hand and I come in with my deputy in the morning after the bank asks me a fine. Jim just a plain case of no more honest man's other."

He turned to face Pearson, but the banker had crept behind the door.

"Oh, God, get him away!" Pearson cried through his hands. He saw the sheriff's gun held against the wall, where he had laid like a

"And he was cheating you all the time," Quinn put in quietly. He was mining that gold on the sly and gambling the money away." He told them of his discovery of the room Winters kept in the barber shop and the source of his money. "That's why I want to see you this afternoon, Pearson. And—" he smiled slightly—"that's what's goin' to get you hung."

"Why?" Roy cut in.

"Because Pearson told Winters I was snooping around and Winters decided to kill me before I found out too much and told Pearson." He told them of the note, and the killing in the hotel room. The sheriff listened intently, nodding his satisfaction. "And when I caught this paper that was with Winters down in the alley, Quinn finished, 'we had it out I owned him. I knew Winters could have about me from only two people—Sam the barber, and Pearson and Sam was too scared to talk. So I headed for Pearson's."

Roy looked at him for a long moment, then turned to Pearson. "Go on."

"It's so on," Crowell rapped out, sneering at Pearson. "Let me tell about this Eastern genius. The lake was ready to blow when Dave got home. When Pearson heard about Turner coming home, he lost his nerve. He hired Freeman to bushwhack Dave, and nuke it look like Hammond did it. Then he had Sayers blow the lake out. When Hammond wouldn't sell, even then, he ordered Dorsey Hammond kidnapped. Hammond would have to sell the mine to get the money to ransom her and of course Pearson. Pearson said that I would give Hammond for the mine would go to Sayers and back to me and then to Pearson again." "That's why I want to see you this afternoon, Pearson. And—" he smiled slightly—"that's what's goin' to get you hung."

"And I was to be murdered," Dave put in quietly. Murdered by those whoopiwawls of Sayers after they tortured me into signing a way my half?"

"C'mon," the sheriff said stolidly to the two of them. "Put out your hands. He leaned over his fat belly to handcuff them together.

With the swiftness of a striking snake, Crowell whipped one of Sayers's guns out of the sheriff's belt and pointed it at the sheriff. (Crowell backed away a few feet across the bed, his gun noosing steadily at his captors.

He was laughing quietly, a little insanely, in the still room.

"You'll never make it, Crowell," Roy said softly. "You'll only get one of us before we cut down on you."

gentlest sort of hint to hike you straight to the forefront—and the snug and reassuring steadiness of this low-swing, stable stepper's gait!

All of which is well and good, and not to be disputed. But has your good friend told you this:

... That Buick's prices are easily the lowest prices for the value you'll find anywhere on automobile row?

... That this far-ranging great-hearted eight—with all the sky-larking life those extra cylinders give it—still costs less than some sixes?

... That factory list figures run anywhere from $51 to $102 less than a year ago—and that they buy worlds more in self-banking Knead-Action, Handshift transmission, 15% softer Buick Springing, visibility stepped up as much as 412 square inches, any number of so-called "extras" such as the Flash-Way direction signal?
