Flood Cleanup Is Making Headway

Families In Flood Area Being Taken Care Of During Emergency By Red Cross And Kindred Groups

Record Of Work Being Done Proves All Relief Agencies Worked Together

According to Red Cross records over 500 families were rendered homeless or affected by the flood of July 5, which swept all before it as a raging torrent replaced the usually placid Triplet creek meandering through Morehead. The flood also tore out a total of 103 bridges in the county, cost 25 lives according to what are believed to be complete figures, did not allow time to farm crops, ruined half the business places in Morehead and suspended business entirely throughout the city. The Red Cross and American Legion turned his or her attention to rescue work for those who had suffered most heavily in the flood. Red Cross, early on Monday, was working in conjunction with the American Legion and individuals, is almost completely organized to assist those who suffered the least damage to their homes. Under the supervision of Miss Helen J. Moses, most of those who were rendered homeless are rapidly being replaced in homes, either the same or rented rooms. Out of the 500 homeless families 110 remain as charges of the Red Cross in the college dormitories. About the same number are now being fed at the Red Cross food center in the public school building. Clothing is being issued by the Red Cross and American Legion, the clothing unit being located in the public school building. Assistance is being issued to those who are able to return to their homes or who are already returned to them. Food is being purchased to care for those who, having returned to their homes, are still unable to provide for themselves.

Ed Felty Home Is Destroyed By Fire

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Felty in West Morehead was completely destroyed by fire last Saturday night. The cause of the fire is unknown. The Felty home was in the flood area and the family had spent the day cleaning out the mud and salvaging their furniture. The blaze was discovered late in the afternoon. Neighbors did what they could to save the furniture, but the blaze obtained such headway that the building was consumed in a short time. The Morehead Fire Department was unable to help, as the Ed Felty home is situated in an area where there are no water mains to furnish protection.

Bulletin

NOTICE TO HOME OWNERS:
All homes in the flooded area should be thoroughly cleaned and dry before being occupied. Do not move back into your homes before this is done. Every house in the flooded district is filled with germs and must be thoroughly disinfected before being occupied. After you have cleaned your home and it is thoroughly dry, inspect it, and if you are satisfied that the germs have been eliminated, you may reoccupy your home. You are advised to file an application for these orders are violated. Be sure to consult the Health Officer before you reenter your home.

Director of Health Department.

Red Cross Announces Rules To Be Observed

For the benefit of those who suffered loss of their home, clothing, or furniture in the recent flood, the Rowan County News, is devoting space to carrying information that may be helpful to those who suffered in the disaster. The most important agency carrying on the work of rehabilitation is the American Red Cross. For this reason, the editors of the News have gone to extra pains to obtain information from Red Cross officials as to the needs and manner in which those who suffered flood damage may obtain assistance.

Emergency Assistance

All those who are unable to render their homes regardless of how small, should immediately register with the Red Cross, whether they are in need of immediate assistance or not. Where emergency assistance is required it will be immediately given. Families to be taken care of first are those in which death occurred as the result of the flood, where there is illness or where there are large families.

Homes To Be Cleaned

Before the Red Cross is able to render anything more than emergency assistance flood refugees are required to clean up their homes and salvage every bit of furniture that can be salvaged from the wreckage. This is one of the most important regulations of Red Cross. If you have not yet started cleaning up your home and salvaging your furni-

To Those Who Helped Morehead

To those who rushed to Morehead's assistance during her time of need, when the darkest depths of despair blackened the future outlook, when the stunned city and her residents were quivering under the blow that had struck in the night, every citizen of Morehead bows his head in deepest gratitude. Those of us who are left cannot adequately express our thanks to those of you, neighbors and friends from surrounding communities, who hastened to our assistance and the assistance of those who suffered losses in the flood. It is impossible at this time to render proper credit to all those who helped us, because it is impossible at this time to obtain a complete list of those who helped.

Legion Posts throughout the section of Kentucky, surrounding Morehead poured in aid. Business houses sent truck loads of groceries and cash. Other truck loads of clothing and furniture were rushed into cars for those who lost their all in the rushing waters.

Morehead is thankful. Not only those who lost, but those who did not lose, are deeply grateful. In a later issue we expect to carry a complete list of those who contributed so generously to the welfare of our needy who had lost their all. We appreciate our neighbors more deeply than we can tell.

Damage To Farm Crops To Be Reported To Agent

Red Cross is unable to assist farmers who lost their crops. Those farmers who suffered crop damages, they are referred to County Agent Chas. L. Goff, who, through the Disaster Loan Corporation will obtain loans for the farmers. Read the article on the Disaster Loan Corporation in another column of this issue.

Baptist Church Plans To Open Revival July 24

The Morehead Baptist Church will conduct its first Vacation Bible School July 24th to August 4th of this year. As far as is known there has never been such a school conducted in Morehead. Pastor J. W. Martin, of the First Baptist of Haldeman has conducted one at Elliottville and one at Haldeman this summer. It is reported that their efforts in this work have met with great success.

Disaster Loan Corporation Is Giving Aid

The Disaster Loan Corporation, a Federal agency, authorized by an act of Congress in January, 1937, to make loans necessary and appropriate on account of floods, tornadoes or other disasters, has opened offices in Room 1 of the head Consolidated School building, to accept applications for loans to assist in the rebuilding and replacing property damaged in the recent flood. Loans will be made for repairs to buildings, rehabilitation of property and for replacement of household furniture, equipment, fixtures, and for other purposes necessary in the reestablishment of homes, farm buildings, industrial or commercial activities. The following men have consented to serve and have been appointed members of the local advisory committee to assist in the activities of the organization: Mr. N. E. Kennard, Chairman, Mr. John M. Palmer, Mr. C. P. Caudill, Mr. C. B. Daugherty, and Mr. Frank Hagar. The office will be in charge of Mr. W. E. Taylor, who is from the regional office of the Disaster Loan Corporation at Cleveland. He will be assisted by Mr. N. E. Kennard, County Examiner. A meeting was held with the local committee Tuesday afternoon. In attendance were Mr. Ray W. Berrett, administrative assistant in charge of Disaster Loans Corporation, Washington, D. C., Mr. W. E. Taylor, and Mr. L. S. Rastor of Cleveland. Persons desiring to make application for loans should call at the office for complete information.

Rowan County News In The Flood

Contrary to reports, the Rowan County News, Rowan County's oldest and most reliable newspaper, has not suspended publication either indefinitely or otherwise. No issue was published last week, not because it could not be done, but because the editor of the News and his sister, Mrs. Grace Ford, in spite of the fact that they had been recently indicted through the efforts of a tall, dark, slim bald headed newspaper man, and even more recently cleared of the charges forgot all that and threw their entire energies and resources into the effort to assist those who were more greatly damaged in the flood than they were.

Water was in the News plant to a depth of two feet. But since there were so many others in more dire straits than the News, the editor and his sister decided that there were more important things to be done than to clean up their plant and get out a newspaper last week. Instead they assisted in setting up and opening the food unit, and in getting it organized. Mrs. Ford visited homes throughout the flooded area, getting food to those who were unable to get out, but who were able to cook for themselves. She thus relieved over thirty families, who otherwise would not have had food or clothing. The editor of the News spent the first five days succeeding the flood in organizing the food unit and building up a system under which it is still operating. Beginning with this week the News resumes publication. Due to the fact that a damaged part was required from Chicago, we were unable to start operation the first part of the week.

The News is definitely cleaned up; our loss was not so great as some, and greater than others. We are however, not whimpering or begging. We are going along in the same course, condemning those things that in our opinion should be condemned; praising those that are entitled to praise; running a newspaper that is for the benefit of the community and not for the individual. Let it never be said of the News or the editor or his sister, that they failed to offer assistance where assistance was needed; that they looked after themselves first and let others suffer; that they placed self above service in the smallest degree. Let it never be said that the News, its editor or his sister have ever attempted to capitalize on the suffering of their neighbors and friends, by publishing a paper during a disaster and then attempting to cash in on it by selling copies of that paper at a premium. Let it rather be said that they close up their shop when they could easily have published, and devoted their time and attention to more worthy causes than attempting to cash in on a catastrophe.

All Rehabilitation Agencies Unite Under Red Cross To Assist Hundreds Of Homeless Refugees

The great flood of July 5 has gone on, but the results remain as a lasting memory to every Morehead citizen. The cleanup is well under way with business places and residences damaged in the flood being cleaned and renovated and made ready for occupancy. Stocks of goods that suffered in the flood are being cleaned and salvaged so far as possible, with most of them being offered for sale at greatly reduced prices. Altogether, Morehead is pulling herself up out of the mud and filth of the flood in a manner that is gratifying to everybody concerned. Every agency has had a part in the rehabilitation work from the Red Cross and American Legion to the civil clubs and churches, as well as individuals.

Ky. Power Co. Does Excellent Flood Work

Local Critics Take Hold To Relieve Light Situation After Power Fails In Flood. No one can prevent a flood, a hurricane or a tidal wave. All that is left to do after such a catastrophe occurs is to repair the damage as quickly as possible. When the flood of July 5th struck Morehead, leaving her prostrated, and without lights, the management of the Kentucky Power Company was on the job, ready to do their utmost in reestablishing lights for the stricken city. The following article, submitted by a friend illustrates clearly the work that was done quickly, judiciously and efficiently by the employees and management of the Kentucky Power Company to reestablish lights in Morehead.

As quickly as the news of this disaster was received the management of the Kentucky Power and Light Company sent Bruce Irvin from Maysville to determine just what was necessary to restore electric service. At 7:30 a. m. Joe Lester and his construction crew were on the job. They were in charge of construction, immediately got in touch with Mr. E. G. Laurie and his construction crew. They placed transformers at the power plant, these transformers arrived in Morehead at 3:30 p. m. and were immediately installed and electric service was permanently restored at 7:00 p. m. Through the efforts of Messrs. Waltz, Taylor and Curtis some electricity was supplied the town at 3:00 p. m. Mr. Hemphill and Estil as quickly as was humanly possible gave service to homes where service was destroyed. (Continued On Page Two)

The food unit of Red Cross was opened within 20 minutes of the time the water began to recede and within one hour the first meal were served to those who had lost their homes in the flood. The food unit is under the supervision of Mrs. C. P. Caudill, Mrs. C. B. Daugherty and Mrs. C. E. Bishop.

An emergency hospital was opened at the Morehead Hotel. Red Cross nurses in the Christian church, where cases that required medical attention have been taken care of. The W. P. A. and the State Highway Department vied with each other as to the cleaning up of the streets of the city. Both organizations turned out every man at their command to help restore the streets to normal. At present traffic is open on all streets in the city. Railroad Street where the greatest damage was done. The Health Department, under the supervision of Dr. T. A. Evans, is doing an excellent job of work in cleaning wells, giving typhoid inoculations and in generally looking after sanitary conditions throughout the flooded district. The Health Department is required to issue a permit to those who wish to return to their homes. If a home was damaged in the flood, the owner when he has cleaned up should report to the Health Department, which will assist in the cleanup work. Particular credit is due to A. P. Plummer of Flemingsburg, who turned loose all the facilities of the Highway Department to assist Morehead in her time of need. Mr. Plummer himself visited the flood stricken area and immediately ordered the highway facilities to this city to assist in the cleanup work. Only one fly was in the city. That was the Highway Patrol, who appeared to their credit to assist in the cleanup work, while doing police duty here. In other columns of this paper will be found bulletins from the Health Department and the Health Department, as to the manner of carrying out the rules and regulations to conform to laws of health and rehabilitation.

Subject: JEREBOM: A MAN WITH A GREAT OPPORTUNITY.
I Kings 11:26-34, 37-40.

Golden Text: "It all thy acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths;" (Proverbs 38).

Last week we began the new quarter with the study of Solomon's choice of wisdom, and God's gifts of wisdom, riches, honor and long life. Solomon came to be the most glorious of all Israel's rulers, with a kingdom that spread far and wide. The world bowed at his feet in homage. His wisdom startled the world.

But when he "loved strange women" and married so many heathen wives who demanded that their religion be permitted in Israel, the worship of idols, became so great that the Lord was displeased. Then came decay in the kingdom. Solomon had taken too many wives with God's blessings. As long as he put God first, his kingdom grew and spread. But when other gods came to be worshipped, the kingdom began to break in power and glory.

No kingdom can stand long without God first. Our own nation stands in great danger because it bows at the idol of wealth, politics, lust, and uncontrolled pleasure mad men.

While Solomon was having great treacheries built, and repairing the wall of Jerusalem, there was a young man by the name of Jerubom, who was very active and inquisitive in his work. Solomon discovered him and put him in as a spy over a great section of the country.

Meanwhile, Ahijah had seen the weakness of the kingdom, and changed his opposition, and turned to be a man of peace, through idol worship. Ahijah said that Solomon would soon fail. Kings on the borders of Israel were hearing of opposition, and turned to be a man of peace, through idol worship. Ahijah said that Solomon would soon fail. Kings on the borders of Israel were hearing of opposition, and turned to be a man of peace, through idol worship.

"When Solomon heard this he sought to slay Jerubom, but Jeru-

Coras stared out over the grounds of the vast Jordan estate. She listened to the rattle of the water down at the dock. This was her home. Here were her boundaries. But outside, another world was a silent snare.

The moonlight faintly illumined her young tender face and her green eyes were dark and sad as they thought of what she might do. Then she turned around and faced Joe Miller. "I can't make it Joe. I'm sorry I just don't love you at all."

His lips had done it. It had been long — and unthinking.

He lit a cigarette. "Well, this time I guess I'm walking papers for good, I mean." "It makes three weeks."

Coras couldn't answer. It was the old story. If it were a matter of being shipwrecked and lying on a beach with the best man she'd ever met, Joe would be elated. But there must be something more to life than a placid marriage with her father's junior partner. She had to find it.

He started down the steps and turned. "That's a last word Cora. If you marry a guy who isn't as good as I am — well, I'll come back and bring your neck."

She called, "Do that Joe. I'll count on it, so long."

Dad had overheard. He was standing in the doorway when she turned around. "So it's over?" He looked at her bewilderedly. She was his favorite person in all the world but he didn't understand her. "What's wrong with him, Cora?" "Not a thing, Dad. It's just that I don't love him."

"Him. Never been in love, have you Cora?"

"No. But then I don't expect to love."

Jordan sat back. "Ah. This will interest me. What is your quarrel with the gentleman? Where do they fill you?"

"I mean that's a hard one," she said. "I'm not a girl for it. Obviously, there's an excitement. They—they don't stand on the bridge of a ship, advertising sandwiches. They don't make me feel — like a woman. Can you understand what I mean, Dad?"

"Yes. And I know it inside out. Cora. But I can't say I'm happy about it, honey," because "I'm never here. I don't ever do it. I don't ever do it. Nobody ever did it."

"But look, baby," he went on. "I think you should have your chance to find it. I really do. And Cora, you'll never find it around here. You'll have to go out somewhere to meet it. And when you've had your fling and hope is abandoned, you'll never like yourself as much again. But then you can probably settle down and marry Joe. And Cora started out.

"Cora started out early the next morning. The employment agencies had leaped to find first thing in her vague formation of plans. A job might open a whole new world to her. Quite scrupulously, she had emptied her bag of all but car fare and worn her most inconspicuous suit.

By noon, she was hot, tired and downright mad. Harsh, cold faces turned her down with little compunction. Unfeeling voices sent her on her way. By three in the afternoon she was grim, but clashing big down. Six o'clock found her on benches in Central Park exhausted, disillusioned and aching to her teeth. Sitting there, she drank in the peace of the Spring.

A young man was seated at the other end of the bench. He looked toward her. "Got a cigarette?"

"I don't smoke," she said. "I don't smoke. No. I haven't and there are a lot of other benches here around."

He smiled at her. "Darling. I'm not trying to pick you up and I'm too tired to move."

A passerby thrust away a cigarette. Cora made a dive for it but her companion won. He broke it in two and offered her half.

"Yes. And I know it inside out. Cora. But I can't say I'm happy about it, honey," because "I'm never here. I don't ever do it. I don't ever do it. Nobody ever did it."

"But look, baby," he went on. "I think you should have your chance to find it. I really do. And Cora, you'll never find it around here. You'll have to go out somewhere to meet it. And when you've had your fling and hope is abandoned, you'll never like yourself as much again. But then you can probably settle down and marry Joe. And Cora started out.

them as they directed the car to George's again. Now they had some real collateral to offer him. What could be better than the police force credit?

Bill hopped out of the car in front of the restaurant. A few minutes later, he emerged with a very reluctant George. Introductions were made and Cora was her most charming self.

George's eyes were on Cora. He began to talk fast. He owed two hundred bucks to George. Right? Well now, he'd come to borrow two hundred bucks. "Now George," he phoned, "this is one of the nights you read about and never happens. Anyway, hearken, Miss Lucky Star and I have just made two hundred and fifty bucks. Rapidly, he summed up the story of the bandit and the capture.

"Now here's where you come in, George. Out of that two, fifty you'll get your two. Whereupon you give me, two fifty now and I go right over to Dusty's and run it up to the sky, where lives."

"In fact," Cora beamed, "you won't have to wait for the reward. We can pay you when we come back from Dusty's tonight." That was fair enough.

It took a full thirty minutes to convince George, but finally he capitulated. "What can I do?" he shrugged. "As being old friends, like you say." He reached into his pocket. "Gosh, for two hundred and fifty bucks, you must be crazy about me."

There were hasty goodbyes and Cora stepped out. Bill and George were hasty goodbyes and Cora stepped out. Bill and George were hasty goodbyes and Cora stepped out.

Winding up fast, she hauled off and cracked Dusty right on the button. He went down like a log. Then, from nowhere, bouncers appeared and conveyed about. Cora felt like a whole canful of Vitamin A. She fought like a man. A walloping boxer, a haymaker there. The fight was on.

der Meer and General Manager Warren C. Giles with citations for having been selected as the outstanding men in baseball during 1938.

Lombardi was presented with a Browning Shotgun, hand engraved with scenes of deer and wild birds, and which has gold plated firing pins for having been named the most valuable player in the National League. In addition to being named the most valuable player, Lombardi led the league in batting.

Vander Meer, of course was honored for his pitching masterpiece of two successive no hit games, a feat never before accomplished in major league baseball. For Vander Meer, it was his second scroll from the Sporting News, for he was named the outstanding minor league player of 1938, the year he was such a sensation for the Durham Hills of the Piedmont League. His feat that year was the fanning of 235 men and the winning of 19 games after joining the Bulls more than a month after the start of the season.

Giles was cited for "his achievement of making the smallest city in the majors a prominent factor in baseball in the space of a year. Through his efficient, although self-effacing efforts, Giles brought the Devils from the cellar to the first division by obtaining Bill McKechnie to lead the team and by establishing the morale of the squad through his tactful relations with the players."

RED SQUILL BAIT
BEST BAIT CONTROL

The open winter is one reason for the large number of rats now appearing in Kentucky, according to a statement from the entomology department of the State College of Agriculture at Lexington.

A poison bait employing red squill is the method of control recommended by this department, which gives the following directions for its use:

Pre-bait for three nights in succession, using fresh hamburger of various small bits of other things are placed where rats are commonly found. This should be done in the evening if there are any remaining pieces the next morning they should be taken away and destroyed.

On the fourth night, red squill at the rate of one part to 16 parts of the meat should be placed in the location where prebaiting was practiced.

The red squill can be obtained at most drugstores. It mixing it with meat, avoid handling with the fingers, as the rats are very wary of anything handled in this manner. Bad extermination, say men at the College of Agriculture.

A community problem because these varmints migrate over rather long distances. It is a good plan to organize by neighborhoods, with each one pledged to use poison bait at a given time.

As long as rats have other feed, such as may be found in garbage cans, the poison bait method of control is not so successful as it would be if the competing feeds were removed.

You will help hurry the program along if you observe this rule. Register and do not return until you are called for.

Three Typhoid Shots Necessary For Immunization

According to Dr. T. A. E. Evans a number of people have come in to take one shot of typhoid serum and quit, evidently under the impression that one shot is all that is necessary to protect them from disease. He wishes to impress on every one that it is necessary to take all three shots in order to guarantee safety from the disease. These shots must be taken not less than three nor more than seven days apart to be effective. If you have taken one shot, be sure to return to the Health office on Railroad street to get the other two, otherwise you will not be protected.
