Williamsburg, Ky.

1. The Cumberland Falls State Park. Located on Whitley-McCreary county-line 13 mi. from both Williamsburg and Corbin, Kentucky. It can best be reached from Corbin over Ky. 90, or from Williamsburg over Ky. 26 and Ky. 90. It is accessible from US 25 or US 27, by means of Ky. 90 which connects them.

2. Eagle Falls are about a quarter of a mile below Cumberland Falls in Cumberland Falls State Park, on the west side of Cumberland River. They can be reached from Cumberland Falls by going down a trail on the east side, crossing the river in a boat, or by crossing in a boat above Cumberland Falls and going down a trail on the west side.

3. The Gatiliff Fish Hatchery is located in Whitley county at Wofford, Ky. It is about 2 1/2 mi. from Williamsburg, and 16 1/2 mi. from Corbin, Ky. It is near the Highway, and can be reached by US 25 W.

Reference Source:
Cumberland Falls. A fourteen page booklet, written by Lois Purcell Noel of Paducah, Kentucky. It is a descriptive book, telling of the Falls in all four seasons.

A Study of Retardation. Superintendent G. W. Campbell of the Corbin Schools wrote a chapter in this book, telling of the progress of Corbin, in 1929.

Corbin Times Magazine. Written in 1906, being the 34th edition.
It tells of Corbin of that time, and of the past. This is the property of Rev. J. H. Trosper, of Corbin.

A Strange People. By Anderson Wentworth, in 1911. It tells of the early Indians of this section.

Newspaper articles. April 28, 1925— article by T. O. Morgan, about the progress of Corbin. May 21, 1926— an article by J. J. Cole, also telling of progress.

Inventors. Two men in Corbin invented governors to control the speed of trucks: T. H. King, who has no patent; and E. J. Ciara, who has a pending patent.

DEAD MAN HOLLAR

Some folks don't like to go through Dead Man Hollar at night time and perhaps for good reasons. The story of how it was named will tell you why.

In about the year 1863 a young man came through Whitley County, Kentucky from East Tennessee. At a ferry he asked a man instructions on how he could contact the Union Army, then at Ft. Dick Robinson in Garrard County. He was a young soldier who had been on leave. The ferryman directed him to the home of Captain Jackson Veach on Meadow Creek where he would be welcomed to spend the night.

This particular section of the state was very sympathetic toward the Union. Folks were always eager to help someone reach the Union forces. Of such was the home of Capt. Veach. The people there were making liquor when he arrived. This was proper for in those days only a government permit was necessary.

The next day two soldiers joined him on his trip north. Later two returned but the stranger disappeared. One day an old lady digging ginseng noticed a terrible odor. She discovered the bones — his body was found with the flesh eaten off by the hogs. For many years a piece of his blue uniform hung in the bushes. A piece of his boot lay near by.

Years later a well-dressed gentleman with his servant came to the locality inquiring of news of his son. The ferryman told him of the young soldier who passed that way to join the Union Army. His description fit and the old man knew it was his son.

About two or three years ago a colored man's body was found in this same hollar. It was another murder to add to the story of Dead Man Hollar.

The story of Dead Man Hollar was told to me by Mr. C. A. Johnson, Williamsburg, Kentucky and his nephew, Mr. Everett Johnson, Corbin, Kentucky.

Formal opening in 1931. A road running from Corbin, Ky., to Cumberland Falls, which forms a link in the National Park-to-Park Highway.

C.-J. 9/5/31

Dedicated to the late Senator T. Coleman du Pont, who presented the falls area to the State as a public Park.

Rocky Creek probably now Watts Creek

The mouth of Rocky Creek, probably now called the Watts Creek, is in the Cumberland below Williamsburg, in Whitley County.

Thomas Walker and company camped on this river and discovered that the English explorers who had preceded them had left many initials on the surrounding trees.

Rocky Creek evidently received its name from the great abundance of rocks in its water.
