Account Numbers Not Necessary On Job Questionnaires

Social Security Office Flooded With Useless Requests For Cards

Individuals should not apply for a social security account number card merely for the purpose of showing an account number on their occupational questionnaires, stated Elmer M. Bohon, manager of the Social Security Board in Ashland, Kentucky. Social security account numbers should be obtained only when a person going to work or has a job in employment which is covered by the Social Security Act. Farmers who are required by the Selective Service Board to fill in an occupational questionnaire do not need a social security account number card, according to Mr. Bohon.

The Social Security Board has been receiving numerous applications for social security cards recently from those who have registered for the draft and have received an occupational questionnaire from the Selective Service Board. There is a place on the questionnaire for the social security account number. If an individual filling in the questionnaire does not have a social security account number, he should simply write "none" in the space provided for his social security number.

Those who have had social security account numbers and have lost them may secure a duplicate card free of charge at the Ashland, Kentucky, Field Office or at their nearest Social Security Board field office.

Solution Of Farm Labor Shortages Offered By Writer

Exchange of Workers, Full Time Use of Machinery, New Farm Practices

Farmers who find that the labor available is inadequate for regular production need to change their plans, methods and practices to make the labor more effective. Some good ways to accomplish this are:

1. Exchange of Farm Workers
It may be of mutual benefit to farm neighbors to exchange help. The barley farmer may exchange labor with the wheat farmer because the rows are seeded or harvested at different times. Livestock farmers may help each other if sheep shearing or hay harvest because these tasks require additional workers for economy of operation. Similar exchanges are important for other farm tasks.

2. Use of Power Machinery
During rush periods, where machines are available for hire in the community they should be used as much as possible. Machines such as tractors, combines, corn shredders, pick-up boilers and similar equipment should be employed as fully as possible. Full use of power machinery speeds up the work and increases accomplishment per man.

3. Changes In Farm Practices
Labor can be saved during rush periods by pasturing a portion of the small grain or nocking down a portion of the corn. Pasture and hay are the crops which give maximum food value per day of man labor.

The use of hoes or other small tools should be avoided whenever larger implements are more effective in total accomplishment per man. Times of cultivation can be reduced in many cases by doing the work on time when weeds are small.

Planning for conveniences saves much labor, such as locating stable rooms. Lanes constructed to avoid hauling water or driving livestock to water and the use of self-feeding.

The young man remained at the hospital about six weeks and came home seeing out of one eye. He is now back in Louisville for an operation on the other eye. Within a few weeks he will return seeing out of both eyes. Upon his return, he will be taken to Lexington and fitted with glasses by Miss Linda Neville.

The committee desires to thank the organizations for contributing the money and this method is used in reporting back to them as well as to the public what was done with it. It is hoped that the work can be carried on next fall after school begins. There is still much to be done.

the 9,000 Future Farmers in Kentucky are buying one or more defense stamps each week.

So far, Lafayette Chapter, Lexington, with 132,450 pounds of scrap material collected is leading the other chapters. Versailles is second with 115,420 pounds.

Members of the Breckinridge County Chapter, Hardinsburg, have bought $125.85 worth of defense bonds, which is the largest amount bought by a chapter.

Part of the money invested in the bonds and stamps will be proceeds from the sale of scrap material. Part was money earned on their products. Some chapters donated they received from the sale of scrap material to other organizations, such as the Red Cross.

Not all of the 280 chapters of FFA are participating in the salvage campaign as chapters. In cases, the chapters are cooperating with other agencies in the community. In such cases, their participation is included with the report of the agency and not with the FFA report.

In addition to these activities, these boys are helping farmers repair farm machinery in the agricultural shops of the school. They are also helping them with the Freedom program and are raising Victory Gardens. In an effort to relieve the shortage of farm labor, they are assisting in getting city boys to work on the farms during the summer.

Farm Labor---

they may save considerable labor.

Change of Crops
Substituting one crop for another may make the available labor more effective. For example, barley requires less labor per bushel than corn substituted for mixed hay and leave more acres for pasture. Carefully selected seeds such as well adapted hybrid corn, frost resistant barley and native adapted clover provides more feed per day and per acre. Labor consuming crops should be located on fertile land. Full use of manure and fertilizers also increase labor accomplishment per man.

Cover Crop Exhibit Open To Public At Sam Litton Farm

Demonstration Project Being Conducted By FSA And County Agent

By KERMIT C. MILLS
County Agent

On Wednesday, May 6, a group of farmers, the Farm Security Supervisor and County agent met at a cover crop demonstration on the Flemingburg road and located on Sam Litton's farm. This demonstration is on the left of the road as you go to Flemingburg. Signs have been posted so that everyone passing the road will see this demonstration.

This demonstration was started last fall by seeding small plots of ground separately to wheat, rye, oats, barley and vetch. It is hoped that everyone interested in winter cover crops will stop by and see these different crops growing side by side on the same kind of soil. This will give the farmer a good idea of which of these crops they will want to grow. Demonstrations like this are started from time to time with different crops in different sections of the county, so farmers will have an opportunity to compare these crops under their own local conditions. It is the farmer's good guide to go by when selecting new varieties of crops or comparing new varieties with the old varieties.

Save Soil Moisture

There has been very much rain in the spring and due to light snow and rain through the winter, soil moisture reserves are small. If home gardens are to meet the needs for them, complete filling of the family's all-year vegetable needs, steps should be taken to save whatever moisture there may be in the showers that may come.

Time was when gardens were "worked" deep stirring done with bull-tongues or shovel plows. By these means, the deeper moisture soil was brought to the surface, in fact, that this was not the case. Actually, the reverse was true. Crops so "worked" almost always showed it by "standing still" for a day or two until they could beed their roots injured or dislodged by the plow points. Old fashioned "working" worked the garden double harm, and except in extraordinary times amounted to garden suicide.

With the dry season coming, or, in fact, here, "dry farming" methods need to be adopted by home gardeners. These are:

1. Never stir the soil any deeper than to shave off the weeds, or uproot them. The vegetable's roots must never be even touched.
2. Keep the garden surface strictly level, no hills and no ripples made. A level surface exposes least area to evaporation to the sun. Besides, as soil is "borrowed" from about the plants as hills and ridges are made, the soil moisture level is lowered, sometimes quite below the reach of the vegetable's roots.

For precious soil moisture's sake, let "working" and "hilling" stop, and cultivation start!

Anderson county women enjoyed lessons on "Growing Flowers for Health, Happiness and Recreation."

RRA Extensions To Be Limited

Fleming-Mason Rural Electric Cooperative Corporation was recently notified by the War Production Board that all extensions of its facilities must be limited to 250 feet from the original existing facilities. This means that the cooperative will not be permitted to do such toward extending service to new customers. In view of the fact that the cooperative serves a rural area and most of the homes in the rural area within the above range of service already have service installed in the home.

The cooperative is wholeheartedly behind the war production activities and is cooperating to the fullest extent in the policies outlined by the War Production Board by which we must operate. The materials that are used by the cooperative for the extension of service to new consumers are materials that are on the critical list and are much needed in the war program. We realize that the use of the materials for the manufacture of war items can do more good toward winning the war than through extending service to a few farm homes.

Domestic appliances are frozen at the present time in that they require the same critical materials for their construction, however, appliances used for the conservation of foods are still available through the use of priorities. The farmer is given every consideration for his needs for the production and conservation of food. It will jump gun. It is merely a matter of speed. He lays his gun on a box and treads the eggs into the air, football snapping style; grabs his gun and scrambles the hen fruit before they fall far.

In his program Parsons presents a remarkable assortment of different features and different types of shots that are not only keen entertainment but also full of instruction and interest. He accompanies his show with a very entertaining and first of all, regaining shooting and stunts equipment.

Hunters Watch Shooting Exhibition

Three days of interesting discussions, speakers, and entertainment are scheduled for spotmen over the state of Kentucky when they convene at Frankfort May 10 for their annual convention. Durt L. Monroe, president of the League of Kentucky Sportsmen, announced today.

One of the outstanding events of the convention will be the exhibition of gun wizardry put on by Herbert Parsons Sunday afternoon, May 10.

Anyone who likes to see beautiful manipulation and shooting of shotguns and rifles, and appreciating revelations of what can be done with a gun, will not miss the unusual opportunity for such a treat in the program to be given by Parsons, extraordinary Winchester exhibition shooter at the Frankfort gun club on Highway 60, seven miles east of Frankfort on Sunday afternoon, May 10, at 2:30 p. m.

For Parsons, one of America's great all around shots, presents a program of varied and instructive feats of shooting wizardry that one is not often given chance to see. His selection of fancy shots produces a hand fire display of gun wizardry that often seems to border on the realm of magic, yet which re-creates the results of sound shooting knowledge, exceptional nature skill and supreme confidence in his arms and ammunition. The entire program, presented through the courtesy of Winchester Repeating Arms Company, sponsored by the Franklin County Game and Fish Club, is open free to all interested.

One of the things about Parsons' shooting that brings many a gasp to his audience is the speed as well as the precision with which the thrilling acts of his program are presented in quick succession from his seemingly inexhaustible bag of features. Parsons is an amazingly fast gun pointer. A natural shooter, he started hunting at the age of nine, and today his exhibitions are proving unusual entertainment that thousands talk about long after they have seen him pack up his last gun.

One of Parsons' most astonishing performances has led many observers to call him a trick shot. But there is no trick to his scrambling of three eggs with a pump gun. It is merely a matter of speed. He lays his gun on a box and treads the eggs into the air, football snapping style; grabs his gun and scrambles the hen fruit before they fall far.

In his program Parsons presents a remarkable assortment of different features and different types of shots that are not only keen entertainment but also full of instruction and interest. He accompanies his show with a very entertaining and first of all, regaining shooting and stunts equipment.

Wisdom

Stupidity is a mule can outrun a horse in a fair race. The common notion that a mule is stiff in the hind joints and can't run is false. I should insist on selecting my mule and I'd wager he could outpace a horse. Ordinarily he cares nothing about racing, he is facing to him and once you rouse his interest, he's off with a flash—Walters Winchell would say. Two more flashes for the mule.

As a matter of fact, the mule, not the horse, does the real work in the army. As he doesn't photograph well and has a good sense of modesty, he's perfectly contented to let the horse get the publicity. So that settles it.

Now, where were we... show a stupid person a lock, and he'll see the parts alright, one at a time, but he won't see all the dots working together as a unit. What he lacks is power to build these parts up into a unit. If he had the proficuous power of this kind, he might create larger and larger units with their connected parts forming systems of thought, world ideologies, or a cosmos. But an idiot is no philosopher. The stupid person is concerned only with what is present, for he doesn't see how the remote can affect him. He is at the center of a small circle, but he had more understanding he would sense his connection with the remote, giving him wider horizons.

What we have said is that the evil of stupidity appears when we come to adapt means to get a particular result—Lacking knowledge of how the parts of a system are connected, we pull the wrong lever, or push it in the wrong direction.

So if you want to select a stupid person, find one who is relatively unsuccessful in getting what he wants.

So You Are Getting A Diploma?

It's a pretty tosy-turvy old world our 1942 crop of High School graduates step out into.

But your education and training will be of immense value as you join the ranks of forward-looking men and women working for world improvement, based on freedom, tolerance and decency.

Sincere congratulations, boys and girls, upon successful completion of your High School work.
