There is a report that Col. Craig Tolliver has notified the Prohibition candidate for the State Senate in that district that he must not come into Rowan county to make any speeches. Col. Tolliver is well acquainted with the temperaments of the Rowan county people, and he is satisfied that political discussions with the mercury at its present position are not good for those temperaments. Of course the candidate will give due heed to Col. Tolliver's notification. There is hardly a man in Kentucky who would venture into Rowan county after Col. Tolliver had warned him to keep out—unless, indeed, it might be some unhappy creature who was determined to commit suicide.

If Col. Tolliver persists in deciding who shall and who shall not enter Rowan county, he will soon become a whole interstate commerce law within himself. He may even conclude not to let Gov. Knott's militia go into the county. In that event it will become necessary to call the attention of Congress to Col. Tolliver. It would perhaps be well for our next Legislature to pass an act declaring Col. Tolliver a felony.

Col. Tolliver's neighbor, 'Squire Stofer, of Montgomery county, who assisted Cornelison to escape from jail a few weeks ago, has not yet been indicted by the grand jury. It is not improbable that 'Squire Stofer will be a candidate at the first opportunity for a seat on the Appellate bench, and it would not be proper to annoy him with litigation about his personal and official conduct.
