Thirteen New Ones Accredited

53 INSTITUTIONS
CREATED LAST YEAR

At the meeting of the Committee on Accredited Relations for the Intercollegiate Association of Kentucky, held in the office of McHenry Rhoads at State University, yesterday afternoon, thirteen high schools not heretofore listed were put on the accredited list and important changes were made in regard to college entrance credits. A rule was also passed requiring that all schools applying for admission as "Class A" high schools must have college graduates for three-fourths of their teachers.

The schools admitted to the accredited list were Barlow High School, Brandenburg County High School, Calhoun High School, Campbellsville County High School, Clay High School, Mt. Vernon High School, Owensboro County High School, Paintsville High School, Sedalia High School, Water Valley High School, Morehead Normal School, all in "Class B"; Ogdon College, Bowling Green, and Jackson College Institute, in "Class A." These schools were admitted on the recommendation of Professor Rhoads, who is State High School Supervisor, and the changes in the entrance requirements were made on his advice.

In future the graduates of accredited schools may offer two entrance units for two years work in algebra, instead of $1\frac{1}{2}$ credits as heretofore. Two units will also be granted for two years' work in general European history, and one-half credit for a half year in general science.

Five schools, Springfield, Midway, Corydon and Frenchburg High Schools and Vanderbilt Training School, at Elkton, were raised from "Class B" to "Class A" on the accredited list. Sandy Valley Seminary was reduced from "Class A" to "Class B" on technical grounds.

In his report to the committee, Professor Rhoads called attention to the fact that fifty-three new high schools were created in Kentucky in 1914, and praised the spirit of co-operation that is being built up between the colleges and the schools of the State. He stated that he had traveled 17,600 miles in 1914 in the pursuit of his official duties.

Dean T. B. MacIntney, of Transylvania; Dr. A. L. Rhoton, of Georgetown; Prof. M. E. Marsh, of Berea; Prof. C. G. Crooks, of Central, and Professor Rhoads, who represents State University, were present at the meeting. University of Louisville and Kentucky Wesleyan were not represented.

BIDS FOR CITY BOOK EXAMINATION

Bids for the examination of the books and final affairs of the City of Lexington and the City Board of Education for the year 1914 will be received and opened by Mayor Cassidy and the City Commissioners Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the office of the Mayor in the city building.

Already one bid, that of a Louisville accountant, Benhardt Bernstein, has been received, and it is expected that others will be filed before the time for opening. While he has not yet submitted a bid, it is understood that W. A. Garland, former City Auditor, will be a competitor for the award. Mr. Garland was recently awarded the contract for examining the books for the Board of Education up to January 1, 1914.
