This Collegiate World

By Associated Collegiate Press

At the Kentucky State Teachers College, Morhead, Ky., a freshman who, when asked by a patron, "How old are you?" replied, "Well, my latest personal survey shows my chronological age to be 27. My mental age is 18. My emotional age is 15. My physiological age is 16. This advanced view of my age, my chronological age, which is 18, thus shows me to be a member of the generation."

A college student in a most recent survey was asked to paraphrase the sentence, "He was ready to ready for his next step." He wrote, "The night of my next step."

Notes posted on the bulletin board in the Engineering building at the University of Texas for the month of February read: "I don't want to be a dam." "I don't want to be a dam."

With a knowledge born of experience, a sane understanding student has addressed to the note "My sympathies, dam."

A perplexed freshman, Mr. Grosshauer, who is in charge of the dormitory at the University of Colorado, and asked him where he was staying. Mr. Grosshauer checked the list and sent the young man up to room 302.

The newcomer wandered wearily up to the third floor, and, passing to check the numbers on the door to closely, he opened the door of Room 302. He happened to be a telephone booth with the phone removed. He quickly ran downstairs and into the office with this statement:

"I'm sorry, sir, but I'm afraid it's going to be impossible for me to get all of my stuff in that room—it's too crowded."

Several Texas Christian University students, on an abating party at the Will Rogers' Memorial Coliseum last week, were resting and commenting on the fact that Froggie games would soon play their games there. One excited young man was asked to describe the games to the entire dissection, only opening up long enough to give out with one comment just before returning to the rink.

With well-earned innocence and a puzzled little frown, he remarked: "Well, I still think that the ice is going to be too slippery for the boys to play very good basketball."

Aviation Training Now Open To Qualified Men

Aviation cadet training is now open to qualified Regular Army Air Force enlisted personnel, it was announced today by Sgt. William V. Stevens of the Ashland Army recruiting station.

Upon successful completion of approximately 51 weeks of instruction, the trainee will be rated a pilot, and commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States, and assigned to flying duty.

For full information concerning this great opportunity, call at the postoffice in Morhead on Tuesday and either Sgt. Stevens or Corporal Martin will supply full details.

News Down Mexico Way

President Miguel Aleman of Mexico has been inaugurated at a time when the people of Mexico are ready to back his ideas for advancement. The progressive republic of Mexico is a land of great potentialities in its ability to contribute to the material and cultural enrichment of the world.

No president of Mexico is eligible to succeed himself after the expiration of the single six-year term to which he may be elected. Thus, there is a restraint on political machines.

The progressive development of Mexico is of the greatest importance and the election of President Miguel Aleman is a matter of satisfaction to the United States. The people of Mexico have inaugurated a new and capable president, and the United States should take pride in being associated with them in working for a better world.

Valentine's Day

Development Of Curriculum Material In School

On January 28, 10 members of the Morhead State Teachers College staff and guests of the principal, Henry McGuire and the Carter County Teachers Association, met at the school for a day of study. The speakers, Dr. W. H. Dwyer, University of Tennessee, and Dr. J. H. Dwyer, University of Tennessee, discussed the development of curriculum material for the Carter County school system, both in the field of the physical and the social sciences. The speakers discussed the use of glass, galena, etc., for the purpose of making a map of the world, and the use of the same for the purpose of making a map of the world.
