MOREHEAD, Ky.---

MSU Open House is Feb. 18

Morehead State University provides opportunities for students in the region, state and beyond through excellent academic programs, hands-on career skills and a commitment to student success. It is why MSU has been named one of the Top 15 best public regional universities in the South by U.S. News & World Report.

Future Eagles can learn more about MSU at Open House on Saturday, Feb. 18, at 10 a.m. in the Adron Doran University Center (ADUC).

By signing up, prospective students and families can:

- Speak with faculty from our academic programs.
- Get guidance from financial aid representatives.
- Learn about advising, tutoring, career planning and other student success services.
- Eat lunch with students, faculty and staff.
- Take a tour of MSU's campus.

"Our goal is to make it convenient to get answers to questions about starting college by bringing deans, department chairs and faculty from our academic programs, as well as staff from admissions, financial aid, housing and many more services, together in one place," said Holly Pollock, director of undergraduate admissions. "Families will hear success stories about our graduates and learn some statistics that demonstrate the academic quality offered at MSU."

For those who apply for admission at Open House, MSU will waive the $30 application fee. Transcripts and test scores must be turned in at the event to qualify for the fee waiver.

Attendees at MSU's Open House will receive complimentary tickets to cheer on the Eagle Basketball teams when they take on Lindenwood in Johnson Arena. The Eagle Women's Basketball game takes place at 1 p.m., followed by the Eagle Men's Basketball team playing at 3 p.m.

MSU's Open House also provides information and a campus tour for high school students interested in attending the Craft Academy for Excellence in Science and Mathematics. Please indicate your interest in the Craft Academy on your registration form.

Students and families are encouraged to register for Open House. To register online, visit moreheadstate.edu/openhouse.

For more information, visit moreheadstate.edu/admissions or contact MSU's Office of Enrollment Services by emailing admissions@moreheadstate.edu or calling 606-783-2000 or 800-585-6781.

Morehead State celebrates Black History Month

Morehead State's Eagle Diversity Education Center (EDEC) and the Campus Activities Board (CAB) are sponsoring programs throughout February to celebrate Black History Month.

Several movies representing black actors and stories are showing every Monday in February in the Adron Doran University Center (ADUC) theater. They are:

- "Black Panther," Monday, Feb. 6, at 6 p.m.
- "Black Panther: Wakanda Forever," Monday, Feb. 13, at 6 p.m.
- "The Butler," Monday, Feb. 20, at 6 p.m.
- "Till," Monday, Feb. 27, at 6 p.m.

Several events are planned for Wednesday, Feb. 15, at Prefontaine Pub. At 4:30 p.m., there is "Diversity is the Spice of Life." Participants will be able to create their own spice blends to take home. There will be music and prizes during the event.

At 6 p.m., the pub will host MSU's Fifth Annual Soul Food Dinner. The event will feature a performance by the Kazual Acapella Troupe with their unique combination of R&B, Hip-Hop and Pop with dance and dubstep. To attend, please RSVP by email to mclemmons2@moreheadstate.edu or call 606-783-9051.

Morehead State Public Radio (MSPR), 90.3FM, has special programming planned for Black History Month, including:

"Expanding Our Origin Story," Feb. 6 at 10 a.m.: Clint Smith of The Atlantic traveled to 9 historical sites to understand how slavery is remembered and taught in America today. And Gayle Jessup White's memoir chronicles her journey to uncover her family's slave roots at Jefferson's home Monticello.

"The HBCU Renaissance," Feb. 13 at 10 a.m.: HBCUs are experiencing a renaissance sparked by the Black Lives Matter movement and the fight for racial justice. HBCU bands like the Trojan Explosion play with power and energy. That unique HBCU sound and style is the pinnacle of Black musical excellence. Jemayne King is both a proud sneakerhead and an English professor at Virginia State University. He's teaching the first-ever college English course on sneaker culture at HBCUs.

"The Homecoming," Feb. 20 at 10 a.m.: America's first federally registered Black neighborhood is getting some love. Jackson Ward in Richmond, Virginia, was once known as the Harlem of the South. Now two sisters are working to restore it, starting with the home of the first Black homeowner there, Abraham Skipwith.

"Riding Jane Crow," Feb. 27 at 10 a.m.: Miriam Thaggert illuminates the experiences of women and trains in her book, "Riding Jane Crow: African American Women on the American Railroad." In Addition, A new book by Michael Hall reveals how black writers of the Jim Crow era found ways to circumvent hostilities and travel restrictions.

"The Health Gap," Feb. 27 at 10:30 a.m.: Racism's direct impact on health is well-documented. What we know less about is how to fix it.

For more information, contact the EDEC at edec@moreheadstate.edu or 606-783-9569.

Daxson Lewis brings traditional music studies experience to role as KCTM director

Daxson Lewis (Class of 2016) said that traditional music was heard playing at nearly any occasion or location, thanks to his paternal grandparents. Eventually, Lewis landed on his musical instrument of choice.

"As I listened to this music, I was drawn to this particular sound. I didn't know what it was at the time," he said. "It was the banjo. I was drawn to that right off the bat."

Lewis' affection for the Appalachian sound not only led him to enroll at Morehead State University's traditional music studies program as a student. It also helped him develop his talents and professionalism so he could guide future traditional music students as the Kentucky Center for Traditional Music director.

Lewis had some unique performance experiences before he ever became an MSU Eagle. After convincing his dad to buy him a banjo and acoustic guitar for Christmas at age 11, the West Liberty native found himself on the stage of the Grand Ole Opry four years later alongside American Western band Riders in the Sky later as the recipient of Deering Banjo Company's Brian Friesen Award in 2008.

"Once I got the chance to be on that historic stage, there was no question. This is what I needed to do," Lewis said. "Being able to have that experience at an early age lent some legitimacy that this could happen."

Because Lewis had other interests and a desire to get a college education, he enrolled in MSU's nursing program and played music professionally on the weekends. To fulfill a work-study requirement, he worked at the front desk at the Kentucky Center for Traditional Music (KCTM).

"I'm sitting up front, you know, answering the phone doing clerical things, and I keep seeing these students walk by with banjos and guitars, and I can hear them in the back, and they are going to play shows," he said. "So, I start asking questions and it wasn't long before I changed majors."

In addition to studying under the mentorship and performing alongside former KCTM director Raymond McLain with the McLain Family Band, Lewis also studied strategic communication and graduated with bachelor's degrees in traditional music studies and strategic communication in 2016. He said the two majors complemented each other "hand in glove" since he was learning audio and video production, writing and public speaking through strategic communication. The traditional studies program was doing more than helping him get better at his instrument.

"(McLain) always said his goal was to help students realize their full potential, and he did that, but also learn how to live their lives in a positive and healthy way as an artist," Lewis said. "That's as important to what we do as anything."

After graduation, Lewis continued to play professionally with the McLain Family Band and MSU graduates The Price Sisters (Leanna Price and Lauren Price Napier both graduated in 2017), as well as serving as a recording artist, publicist and tour manager. He became an adjunct instructor for KCTM from 2018-21, teaching traditional music history classes while leading student ensembles and providing private instruction on banjo, guitar and bass.

Shortly after Lewis took time away from instruction, he began touring with the bluegrass group Dailey & Vincent starting in the fall of 2021. Raymond McLain retired as director of the KCTM in May 2022 and Lewis decided to apply for the director position.

"My first thought was, gosh, I could never fill those shoes. Raymond was so great at being director and pushing this program forward," he said. "I can just be me and bring what I can to the table."

Lewis began serving as KCTM director in the fall of 2022 and his first semester at the helm was an exciting and successful one. The KCTM's touring student group, the Mountain Music Ambassadors, were invited to both the International Bluegrass Music Association Convention and to perform at the Industrial Strength Bluegrass Festival, an event in Ohio with festival headliners including The Del McCoury Band, The Grascals, Junior Sisk, the Dan Tyminski Band, and the Kody Morris Show.

Lewis admits while he doesn't have McLain's abundance of touring and instructional experience, he said being the only KCTM director who has gone through the traditional music studies program has its advantages when connecting to students.

"I think it allows me to pull from the things that really helped me," he said. "That mentorship that I had from these instructors, it's exciting to think that we are doing that for our current students."

Lewis said his goal is to continue KCTM's mission of offering a nationally accredited program in traditional music studies while doing everything to preserve and promote the musical heritage of the Appalachian region. Through connections and performances Lewis did with the McLain Family Band, KCTM welcomed its first exchange students from Hungary last year. He also wants to increase the program's social media presence and "do everything I can to increase top-of-mind awareness for our program."

"There are ways to grow, and we are exploring those things," he said. "The center has always been in good hands. Everyone has done great work, and I hope to just continue doing that."

MSU hosts talk on rural higher education

Morehead State University's Ernst and Sara Lane Volgenau College of Education welcomes Dr. Devon Brenner, director of the Social Science Research at Mississippi State University, for her presentation "Oh, The Places We're From: Old Challenges and New Narratives for Rural K-12 and Higher Education."

The talk is at 4 p.m. today (Tuesday, Feb. 7) at the Adron Doran University Center (ADUC) Theater. It is sponsored by Appalachian Future Educators. The event is open to the public. A reception will follow immediately after the presentation.

In addition to her role with Mississippi State University, Dr. Brenner is the editor of the National Rural Education Association journal "The Rural Educator" and author of the book "Teaching in Rural Places: Thriving in Classrooms, Schools, and Communities." Copies of that book will be available to purchase at the event.

At Mississippi State, Brenner taught courses on the foundations of education and literacy methods while researching rural education, literacy policy and practice before becoming an administrator. She also formerly served as assistant vice president for outreach and initiatives in the Office of Research and Economic Development. She helped facilitate the construction of Partnership Middle School, a sixth- and seventh-grade school located on the Mississippi State campus.

Office of Information Technology warns of authentication scam

Morehead State's Office of Information Technology (OIT) is warning users about potential multi-factor authentication (MFA) scams.

According to Director of Information Security and Compliance Patrick Gonzalez, MFA offers greater security for accounts than a simple username and password login, but it is not foolproof.

"It is important to realize that while MFA provides a significant increase in privacy and security. It does not provide complete safety from attackers and compromised accounts," Gonzalez said. "Once an attacker has acquired your username and password, they can send MFA requests to your authentication device by repeatedly attempting to log in with your credentials. This attack is called "MFA prompt bombing."

Common forms of MFA prompt bombing include:

Persistently sending MFA requests to your phone until you accept one to make the "noise" stop.

Sending one or two MFA prompts per day. This method often attracts less attention but is often successful in deceiving by distraction.

Calling you, pretending to be part of the organization, and telling you they need to send you an MFA request as part of a standard policy or process.

Gonzalez urges MSU users not to accept a login request from their authentication device that they did not immediately initiate.

"MFA is a powerful control and a best practice to prevent cyber-attacks. However, we must remain mindful of the continuous innovation of cyber criminals and threat actors who prey on our attitudes and behaviors. You are our first and last line of defense," Gonzalez said.

For more information or to report suspicious emails or account activity, contact the OIT at 606-783-HELP (4357) or ithelpdesk@moreheadstate.edu.

Craft Academy student presents research in Japan

Kiera Fehr, a Craft Academy senior from Lexington, and Dr. Rachel Rogers, assistant professor of research for the Academy, presented at the International Academic Forum's 14th Asian Conference on Education (ACE2022), held in November in Tokyo, Japan.

They represented MSU and the Craft Academy at the conference, presenting research on the impact of informal STEM learning on student success.

Fehr and Rogers' research investigated the impact of outside-of-class untraditional learning experiences on student success inside the classroom. They found that students grew from these experiences (classified within the study using a student's personal learning experiences) in six ways independently defined as new experiences, new skills and understanding, Impact future/ STEM careers, desire for credibility, perseverance, and self-efficacy.

While at the event, Fehr and Rogers networked and attended sessions on the latest research in education.

"This was my first experience spending time in another country, so everything was automatically interesting to me," Fehr said. "My favorite part of the trip was the conference dinner. Sitting with professionals from South Africa, Portugal, Australia, Britain, China, and Japan, I was able to have the special experience of listening to the interactions and conversations that connected us all. It was exciting to spend the evening laughing and connecting with people from the most different backgrounds."

"Overall, it was a superb trip which I believe changed my life. I now understand the expectations, traditions, and lifestyle of living in Japan, which has shifted the way I view our society and how I understand the world," Fehr said. "I have to admit that I enjoyed the fun souvenirs, tasty treats, and genuine conversations I experienced on this research trip. I am grateful to my mentor, Dr. Rachel Rogers, who gave me the direction and time needed to complete this research. I am extremely lucky that she embarked on this adventure with me and supported me through the entire project.”

Myiah Clemons helps students find community

Morehead State welcomes Myiah Clemons (Class of 2022) as the new manager of the Eagle Diversity Education Center and coordinator for student diversity and inclusion.

As a 2020 graduate of the Craft Academy for Excellence in Science & Mathematics and Morehead State, she brings a student perspective to this new role.

"There weren't many students or staff that looked like me. However, the Eagle Diversity Education Center alleviated that sense for me," she said. "The center provided a safe space for under-represented minorities to feel at home."

She works to ensure that under-represented minority students feel safe and supported at MSU as the coordinator of First Year Programs and Second Year Programs for Diversity and Inclusion. This includes managing the Eagle Diversity Education Center.

"When I was offered this job at MSU, I was extremely excited. Working with students is something I genuinely enjoy doing," she said. "I love serving as a mentor for not only students that look like me but any student at this campus."

As a student, she was engaged in many activities on campus. As a Craft Academy student, she joined the Black Gospel Ensemble, the Black Student Union, Women's Virtue and the DREAMS program and served as a Craft Academy ambassador. As an undergraduate MSU student, she remained active in those organizations and was president of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc.

Clemons said she owes much of her success as an undergraduate student to relationships she formed with staff at EDEC, particularly former assistant director Dr. Cory Clark (Class of 2020).

"Dr. Clark mentored me throughout my experience on campus until he left the University. He always encouraged me to go above and beyond," she said. "He kept me, and many others, on track and he always held us accountable."

After graduating with a Bachelor of Business Administration in Accounting in 2022, she is continuing her education at MSU to earn a Master of Business Administration. She hopes to increase the number of students who utilize the center and help diverse student organizations increase their membership numbers.

Clemons wants to use her experience to support and mentor students.

"As a former student, I think I can bring experience that will benefit students. I have been in their same shoes, and I won my battles. I graduated despite not having many graduates in my family. I graduated with honors. I went to graduate school, the first in my family. I started a job right out of college," Clemons said. "I stand as an example that I looked toward as a child and as a student."

Clemons can be reached at mclemons2@moreheadstate.edu or 606-783-9051.

Bowen named director of the Golding-Yang Gallery

Michael Bowen is the new director of Morehead State's Golding-Yang Art Gallery.

Bowen has been an adjunct sculpture instructor at Morehead State, given sculpture workshops and demonstrations, and has participated in faculty art exhibitions. He has also worked at Shawnee State University, Marshall University, and the University of South Carolina.

Bowen earned a Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA) from Marshall University in 2004, a Master of Fine Arts (MFA) from South Carolina University in 2010 and a visiting student at the Tainan National University of the Arts in Tainan, Taiwan, in 2009.

"I think galleries are an important part not only in developing a career as an artist, but a part that many artists just kind of assume works," Bowen said. "Moving forward my goals are to bring as diverse representation of the art world to the campus," Bowen said. "Galleries also form as a different form of education to expand upon the classroom setting and I want to be an active part of that education." Bowen added he's already making plans for a possible international watercolor show and a contemporary jewelry show in the fall. He also has hopes of starting an outdoor sculpture gallery and organizing and utilizing the permanent collection.

Dr. David Oyen, interim associate dean of the School of Creative Arts, said Bowen is an ideal choice for the role of gallery director.

"Mike Bowen is an ideal choice as director of the Golding-Yang Gallery because his experience encompasses all the roles necessary to fill that position," said Oyen. "As a sculptor, he has exhibited in galleries across the country and knows the experience of entering his own work in juried competitions. As an educator, he has ample experience in college art teaching and an excellent rapport with the students who will serve as interns and workers in the galleries and will exhibit their own work in student exhibitions. He has work experience in galleries such as the Huntington (WV) Museum of Art and has helped in the installation and planning of exhibits at the Golding-Yang Gallery. At the same time, he was an adjunct instructor of art at Morehead State. We look forward to his vision for the future of the gallery."

Bowen has a busy spring semester planned at the gallery, starting with the opening of the annual sophomore exhibit on Wednesday, Feb. 15. A reception will be held from 4-6 p.m. at the gallery. In addition, the Burley-Coal High School Art Competition will return to the gallery, as will the senior and BFA shows near the end of the semester. He said he hopes to build on the work of his predecessors to increase community support for the gallery.

“I hope that I can build on the hard work of the previous gallery directors by supporting both artists and the students as well as encouraging more people to visit our gallery,” he said. “I believe it is important for any community to support galleries and museums and is unfortunately almost always an under-utilized resource in any community. In our community, it is even more important because it is the only resource for contemporary art within an hour of campus and further for many of the schools that utilize our gallery.

The Golding-Yang Art Gallery, located within the Claypool-Young Art Building, is a pivotal educational and cultural component of the Department of Art & Design, the Caudill College of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences, the MSU campus and the community at large. Through national calls for entries for both group and thematic exhibitions, the gallery showcases the work of contemporary artists in exhibitions curated by the gallery director with the advisement of faculty, or independent jurors. The gallery also hosts faculty and student exhibitions, providing an opportunity for art majors to exhibit their work in a professional venue. The three-level gallery features approximately 2,500 square feet of exhibition space with a screening room to display new media.

Rowan County Senior High student essays to be featured on 'Mountain Edition'

A locally produced radio news program is featuring the writings of Rowan County Senior High School students this month.

RCSHS Teacher Lindsey Johnson (Class of 2011, 2018) asked her AP English students to participate in the "This I Believe" essay contest for a class assignment. The essays are based on an initiative started in the 1950s by journalist Edward R. Murrow to encourage people to write about their lives and experiences. Murrow would then read the essays on the air. The original initiative by Murrow spawned the This I Believe non-profit organization, founded in 2004.

On Thursday, Dec. 15, the students visited Morehead State Public Radio, WMKY 90.3 FM, and recorded their essays, which air throughout February as part of WMKY's magazine news program, "Mountain Edition." The show airs weekdays at 5:06 p.m.

"It is always a wonderful opportunity to meet members of the community and show off what we are able to do here at WMKY," said News Director Dr. Leeann Akers (Class of 2006, 2022). "I love hearing their essays, giving them a chance to record them, and building them up, so they know that their opinions matter."

Darryl Parker realized his potential and purpose after transferring to MSU

For Darryl Parker (Class of 2022), the decision to attend college was not an option. It was the decision he knew would change his trajectory.

"Living life in the real world, I learned that you can't go far without a college degree," Parker said. "Being a first-generation student, I wanted to lead by example, not just for my family, but for others that look like me in this area."

Parker earned his GED and then graduated as a transfer student at Morehead State University, where he said he was able to find both preparation and purpose for his current role as coordinator of cultural diversity at Hazard Community and Technical College (HCTC).

Parker came to HCTC as a transfer student looking for a change from his hometown of Lexington. With his family's support and a positive experience with HCTC staff that "treated me like a person regardless of the color of my skin," Parker enrolled at HCTC and earned an associate degree in science and an associate degree in art in 2020. Tracy Counts, an enrollment services counselor for post-traditional students at MSU, consulted with Parker at her office at HCTC about transferring.

"I really wasn't sure if I wanted to go to MSU at first. Well, that was until I met Tracy Counts here at HCTC," Parker said. "We had several talks, and she took the time to go over a lot of things MSU had to offer. That's what won me over. She actually cared and took her time to explain everything in detail...taking the time to listen to what I wanted to do."

Before Parker transferred to MSU, he started as a student worker for HCTC before being hired as a recruitment specialist and later the college's first social media student liaison for the Office of Equity and Inclusion. While working, he completed his MSU degree online, earning a Bachelor of University Studies in December 2022.

While earning his degree from MSU, Parker focused on leadership and diversity, equity and inclusion efforts. Parker is involved with several local community service events, including A Seat at the Table dinners, The Poetry Slam and Art Show, and gathering and delivering food to local blessing boxes. He has also chaperoned a trip for local high school students to visit the Underground Railroad Museum in Cincinnati.

Parker serves on several boards and committees and is a member of several organizations, including UK (University of Kentucky) North Fork Valley Community Health Center, Pathfinders of Perry County, Housing Development Alliance, Appalachian Arts Alliance, HCTC's Equity and Inclusion Committee, American Association of Blacks in Higher Education, HCTC's Student Government Association, Kentuckians for the Commonwealth, People of Color Caucus, Back Home Together, Southeast Kentucky African American Cultural Center and Museum and the Appalachian Studies Association.

"My motivation to be involved with various groups and organizations is to promote positive changes here. Given that a lot of the time I'm the only person of color in the room, it means something to me," he said. "It displays that we are changing, and when others that look like me see me in these spaces, they know we are about to shake some stuff up in a positive way. Representation means more than what people realize."

In 2022, the Kentucky Student Success Collaborative selected Parker as one of three Kentucky college students to serve as a student voice research fellow. The student voice fellows gather information on students' experiences at Kentucky's public colleges and universities. Student voice fellows conduct surveys and one-on-one interviews and lead focus groups. The criteria for selection included verbal, written and presentation skills, understanding issues facing diverse students and an interest in improving the college student experience.

"What has benefitted me the most is the work I'm doing with the Student Success Collaborative, which is a part of CPE (Council on Postsecondary Education)," he said. "With this platform, it is making sure our student voices are heard."

The same year Parker earned his degree from MSU, HCTC hired him for his current role as coordinator of cultural diversity. He said this position was a combination of a 180-degree turn and things coming full circle. Where he was initially reluctant to get out into the Hazard community as a student, he is now actively seeking a future generation of minority students and emphasizing the importance of a college degree to make their lives better.

"I noticed there was a great need for black men in higher education and a need in this community for the work that we are doing," he said. MOREHEAD, Ky.---

MSU's Steven Middleton releases documentary, 'Stages and Waves: An Excursion through Challenging Times'

Steve Middleton, instructor of mass communication at Morehead State, is unveiling a new documentary this spring.

Middleton is releasing his 16th documentary, "Stages and Waves: An Excursion through Challenging Times," through his production company, State Run Media Productions. The film chronicles the experiences of eight individuals and Middleton himself during the COVID-19 pandemic. The film explores how people coped with loneliness and isolation and used their time during the pandemic shutdown to explore their creativity.

Middleton found himself eager to hear stories about how others were affected by the pandemic and said the film was an extension of that.

"I wanted to produce a film that dealt with the pandemic and did not look at it politically. I wanted to find a way to tell stories of people and the changes now three years out," Middleton said. "As the days turned to months, months to years after the lockdown, I started to notice a change in the people I was around the most. I wondered how many people I could find that had a profound change in their lives within the arts since the initial pandemic."

"The people involved are a combination of people in my social circle and people that were complete strangers to me. Some I just heard second and third-hand stories about and sought them out on social media and asked if they would want to be a part of my film. My friends became closer, and what were strangers before the film are now new friends."

Middleton will appear on WKYT's "Everyday Kentucky" program on Thursday, Feb. 16, to promote the film's release.

Three screenings of the film are planned:

- Saturday, Feb. 18, 6 p.m., at the Rock House Brewing in Lexington.
- Tuesday, Feb. 28, 6 p.m., at CoffeeTree Books in Morehead.
- Friday, March 31, at Gateway Regional Arts Center Mt. Sterling, time TBD.

The film will also be broadcast on West Virginia Public Broadcasting (WVPB) Tuesday, March 28, at 10:30 p.m., and on Kentucky Educational Television (KET) sometime in April.

"Stages and Waves" was produced, directed, edited, and narrated by Middleton. The following students assisted him:

- Willard Ferguson, a senior convergent media major from Louisa.
- Lucy Becker, a junior traditional music major from Lexington.

"I absolutely love being able to get out of the classroom and use real-world field experience with students. Take all the things learned in the classroom as students and apply it in a real setting," Middleton said. "I am honored to be able to work here and share my knowledge with a new generation in the hope that they will one day produce their own projects and surpass my success."

Instructor of Journalism John Flavell and retired professor of communication John Modaff provided additional stock aerial footage. Scott Miller, a lecturer at the Kentucky Center for Traditional Music (KCTM) and founder of the Appalachian School of Music, produced the original soundtrack for the film.

Middleton said he hopes the film can help viewers find common ground through similar shared experiences to bring them closer together.

"The film highlights a great change in us as a society and culture because of COVID-19. It seems the divide in our country over politics got worse because of COVID-19," Middleton said. "I hope this film lets others see that kindness does still exist and we can all experience stages and waves in our lives and find a positive on the other side."

Enhance your career prospects at the Career & Internship Fair

The Spring Career & Internship Fair gives Morehead State Eagles an advantage in career success. The fair is scheduled for Wednesday, March 1, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Adron Doran University Center (ADUC) ballrooms.

At MSU's fair, you can connect with regional, state-wide and even out-of-state employers and graduate programs, all while learning about full-time and part-time jobs, internships, co-ops, and graduate schools.

"Employers want to hire graduates who have hands-on experience in addition to the specific discipline knowledge gained in the classroom. MSU prioritizes ensuring our students have opportunities to engage in high-quality experiential opportunities as part of their learning experience. The career fair is the signature event that connects employers and graduate programs with students who are looking to land internships and co-ops as well as full-time jobs," said Megan Boone, director of MSU's Center for Career Development and Experiential Education (CCDEE).

It's crucial for first- and second-year students to make attending a career fair a priority. Seth Smallwood, a first-year student majoring in agribusiness, said it helped him get a jumpstart on his career.

"Attending the Career & Internship Fair in my first semester provided me with valuable knowledge and information about the industry I'm interested in working in. I was able to make connections with employers in that particular area, and they were able to advise me in the right direction regarding my future curriculum choices and which skills they value the most," Smallwood said. "When it comes to relevant experience or technical skills, internships are highly valued. Making a good first impression on a potential employer at the Career Fair is a great first step in the right direction."

Students should prepare to make the most of the Career & Internship Fair:

Dress the part. Make sure to dress professionally. If you need a suit or business jacket, visit the Suit Bank in the CCDEE. Find something that fits and keep it without charge.

Bring copies of your resume and have an introduction prepared that will serve as what Boone calls your "30-second commercial."

Research the companies and schools that will be in attendance and be prepared with questions to ask them.

Explore industries and build your network. You could land an offer to interview for a fantastic opportunity. Many MSU graduates return to campus to recruit talent.

Students who attend can get a free professional headshot for their LinkedIn page and other social media accounts. "We want to ensure MSU students have the resources necessary to build a professional presence online and in person," Boone said.

MSU students and alumni from all majors are encouraged to attend. Download the free Symplicity Jobs and Careers app on Google Play and Apple Store for a list of employers and recruiters.

MSU's CCDEE focuses on giving students helpful tools, knowledge, and opportunities to achieve career success. For resources, upcoming events and more information, call 606-783-2233 or visit moreheadstate.edu/career.

Craft Academy's Josh Day accepted to West Point

Josh Day from Nicholasville, a senior at Morehead State's Craft Academy for Excellence in Science and Mathematics, comes from a military family. His grandfather served in Vietnam, and several of his cousins are in the armed forces. So, it is no surprise that Day too, would be interested in military service. But Day has taken it a step further and is now the first Craft Academy student to be accepted to the United States Military Academy, commonly referred to as West Point.

Day said he is excited to become a part of West Point's storied history.

"It allows me to get my undergraduate education and provides me with a guaranteed career in the military immediately following. More than that, though, is the Long Grey Line of graduates before me," Day said. "They were all incredible individuals, and some of our greatest leaders came from West Point: Ulysses S. Grant, William T. Sherman, and hundreds of others. That's a legacy I want to be a part of. Praise God for giving me the opportunity to pursue that."

While at the Craft Academy, Day has been a focus group leader, Craft big brother, participated in numerous community service projects, and was a member of the leadership institute, working with Nigerian doctors to help with health issues in that country and help develop a health campaign.

Day plans to attend medical school and would like to work as a physician in the Army Medical Corps, and he feels attending West Point will help him accomplish that goal.

"I have wanted to go into the medical field since I was 11. I love all of the sciences, but biology, in particular, is my favorite. As an athlete, learning about my body is exhilarating and has proven useful. Much more than this, though, I want to save lives. That's what the Lord has been calling me to do for years. Being a doctor is my way to be obedient and achieve that goal," Day said. He added that one of the things he's looking forward to at West Point is all the sports and athletic activities the school sponsors.

"They have a lot of required physical training, but they also have sports. I will be placed in the required boxing and swimming courses, but I will also pursue some of their other sports, like submission grappling, ultimate frisbee and gymnastics. I know that West Point will be challenging, but I look forward to all of it."

The Craft Academy for Excellence in Science and Mathematics is a dual-credit academy for academically exceptional Kentucky students. Craft Academy provides students with a postsecondary residential experience to complete their junior and senior high school years by enrolling in college courses. The Craft Academy's purpose is to meet the unique educational needs of the Commonwealth's academically gifted and talented high school juniors and seniors.

Concert to celebrate the career of Dr. Roma Prindle

A celebration of Professor of Music Dr. Roma Prindle's 30 years of service with Morehead State University is scheduled for Friday, March 3, at 7:30 p.m.

Prindle and more than 40 alumni will present a concert at Jesus Our Savior Catholic Church, 315 Battson Avenue in Morehead. The show is free and open to the public.

"I am thrilled that so many of my former students will be returning to be a part of this event," Prindle said. "A couple of years ago, I had a big birthday, and a bunch of them showed up to celebrate with me. When I realized that my 30th year of teaching at MSU was approaching, I decided to extend the celebration with an even bigger reunion."

Prindle said there are many things she enjoys about teaching, but what she enjoys most is watching her students develop.

"It is so satisfying to see them grow into young artists who are serious about the profession. It's also fulfilling to know that even those who don't go into the music profession benefit from the process and discipline of voice study in many different ways," Prindle said.

The program for the evening will include operatic arias from Gounod's "Faust," Mozart's "Magic Flute" and "Marriage of Figaro," Händel's "Rodelinda," Bizet's "Pearl Fishers," Puccini's "Tosca," and Carlisle Floyd's great American opera, "Susannah." Songs by Samuel Barber, Claude Debussy, Madeleine Dring, Ben Moore, Tom Cipullo, Edith Piaf and excerpts from classic musical theater will also be presented. The evening will conclude with "Make Our Garden Grow," from Leonard Bernstein's opus based on the Voltaire work from the Age of Enlightenment, "Candide."

Prindle said she has no plans of stopping any time soon.

"Every day, every lesson is a fresh start in building the physical and the communicative aspect of singing. It never gets old. I'm not sure I'll ever retire," she said.

For more information, contact Prindle at r.prindle@moreheadstate.edu or call 606-783-2481.

Morehead State University announces freeze on student housing rates

Morehead State University is pleased to announce it will once again be freezing on-campus residential housing rates for students for the upcoming academic year. The decision to freeze housing rates is part of the University's commitment to making higher education more accessible and affordable for students and their families.

"We understand that the cost of tuition and housing can be a significant burden for many students and their families," said MSU President Dr. Jay Morgan. "By freezing housing rates again, we hope to create an environment of affordability coupled with a quality education."

The freeze on housing rates will apply to all students who live on campus, regardless of their year in school or their housing assignment. The University is committed to providing a safe, comfortable and supportive living environment for all students. The freeze on housing rates is just one of many ways MSU is working to support its students.

MSU also offers a variety of programs and services to support its students, including academic advising, career counseling and financial aid resources. The University is committed to providing a comprehensive college experience that prepares students for success, both in their careers and in their personal lives.

For more information about MSU housing rates, contact the Office of Student Housing at housing@moreheadstate.edu, 606-783-2060 or visit moreheadstate.edu/housing.

MSU mourns the death of former English professor Betty Jo Peters

Morehead State University mourns the death of retired assistant professor of English, Betty Jo Peters, who died Monday, Feb. 20, 2023, at Community Hospice at age 84.

Born Nov. 27, 1938, in Hancock County, Tennessee, she began her career at MSU in 1975 as an administrative assistant for academic affairs. She joined the English faculty as an instructor in 1978 and was promoted to assistant professor in 1982. She retired after 30 years as an educator. During her tenure, she served as an academic advisor, was vice president of the Psi chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, was a member of the Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity in Education, the Kentucky Council of Teachers of English, the National Council of Teachers in English, the Kentucky Philological Association, the Ashland Chapter of the American Association of University Women and the MSU Speaker's Bureau.

In addition to teaching, Peters produced her own line of natural herbal cosmetics and skin care products.

Survivors include her daughter, Dona (Tom) Ross of Catlettsburg; a brother, Wayne Francis of Tazewell, Tennessee and a sister, Anita Lyons of Georgetown. She was preceded in death by her parents, the late John and Mary Manning Francis; a daughter, Gretchen Flatt and a brother, Les Francis.

At the request of the deceased, there will be no funeral services. Steen Funeral Home in Ashland is handling arrangements. Online condolences may be made at the funeral home's website.

MSU announces March to Service Initiative

Morehead State University students are recognized for their commitment to positively impacting their communities. The Center for Career Development and Experiential Education (CCDEE) is launching the March to Service Initiative to enhance these efforts.

The March to Service Initiative stems from the Council on Postsecondary Education's Kentucky Graduate Profile. This endeavor ensures that students graduating from Kentucky colleges will develop 10 skills to prepare them for life, including communication, cultural competency and civic engagement.

"We are excited to be involved in and lead this initiative in civic engagement. Morehead State University is an anchor institution in our service region, so it's important for us to be engaged with these wonderful communities," said MSU President Dr. Jay Morgan. "It is our hope that every academic program will step up to the challenge of preparing our students as civically engaged citizens. This type of hands-on learning is exactly what we want our students to experience before they graduate and enter their respective careers. We will prepare them to have the skills that will help them in life after college."

CCDEE kicked off the event with a unique training opportunity for MSU faculty. Dr. Laurie Couch, associate provost; Megan Boone, director of the Center for Career Development and Experiential Education; and Andrew Sexton (Class of 2020, 2022), coordinator of service learning, are leading the faculty training group.

At the kickoff in January, guest speaker Dr. Henry Cunningham, director of community engagement at the University of Louisville, presented the value of teaching and participation in civic engagement while detailing the variety of benefits that students, faculty and institutions can receive from being civically engaged. Benefits include improved academic performance, cultural awareness, networking and understanding of individual relationships to social justice issues.

"Morehead State University strives to ensure our graduates are well-rounded and have the hands-on experiences that employers and graduate programs desire," Boone said. "March to Service accomplishes this goal while improving the communities in which we live."

Faculty are designing community and civic engagement volunteer projects taking place throughout March to increase MSU students' civic engagement while incorporating skills developed within their respective majors. Students will also reflect on what they learned and the overall value of their experience.

More than 20 March to Service Initiative events are planned for the spring. Some of these include:

- Developing evidence-based posters and providing education to women and families who are planning pregnancy, pregnant, or new or adopting parents.
- Introducing elementary-aged students to orchestra instruments through a "Meet the Instruments" event before a musical performance.
- Participating in our Pi Day celebration, where upper-level mathematics majors will design mathematical activities for visitors to explore mathematics beyond arithmetic and algebra.
- Handling setup and event assistance for the EKTSA (Eastern Kentucky Technology Student Association) Regional Conference.

"The March to Service initiative is designed to help students see their role in solving the problems of their communities. Each student is gaining discipline expertise in their academic program, and we want them to learn to use that expertise to help their community in some way," Couch said. "The projects students will do in March will teach our students to pitch in when their communities need them and to apply their special knowledge of the field to bring value when their communities face challenges."

Community partners for MSU's March to Service Initiative include:

- Rowan County Schools
- Rowan County Health Department
- City of Morehead
- Paramount Arts Center
- Hindman Settlement School
- Eastern Kentucky Technology Students Association
- Future Business Leaders of America
- National Marrow Donor Program
- Cave Run Symphony Orchestra

Dr. Jay Morgan announces Morehead State University Foundation sets fundraising records for 2022

Morehead State University President Dr. Jay Morgan has announced fundraising success for the 2022 calendar year. Last year, over 4,000 donors came together to contribute $6.7 million in support. The previous record for calendar-year giving was exceeded by nearly $1 million.

"Our Foundation is critical to the support of our students. The Foundation is continuing to grow thanks to the support of our generous alumni and donors," said Dr. Morgan. "Our University would not be where it is today without our loyal donors who believe in Morehead State and want to assist our students."

From his first day on campus, Dr. Morgan established increasing private giving for student scholarships as one of the highest priorities for MSU. Since his tenure began, the MSU Foundation raised almost $35 million, much of it going to scholarships. This milestone is one Dr. Morgan attributes to the support of MSU's alumni, corporate supporters, faculty and staff.

The funds raised by the Foundation help MSU continue to serve Eastern Kentucky by preparing students with the career skills and experience they need to succeed.

The MSU Foundation is a non-affiliated corporation and tax-exempt educational foundation designed to assist the University with financial support through privately funded scholarships and support. The total endowment held by the MSU Foundation is now valued at nearly $70 million.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---

MSU plans $2.75 million Wi-Fi upgrade

Internet speed with instant and uninterrupted access is essential for student learning and engagement on college campuses. Morehead State is upgrading its Wi-Fi network to put MSU in a class all its own for Kentucky's public universities.

Through asset preservation funds and as part of MSU President Dr. Jay Morgan's campus revitalization plan, MSU will spend $2.75 million to upgrade the University's Wi-Fi network and improve overall network access for students, faculty, staff and visitors. Rick Phillips (Class of 2011), chief information officer for the Office of Information Technology (OIT), said this is an upgrade of all 1,400 APs (Access Points) across campus to 6E.

"It's actually brand new. It's been out a year or two, and no other school in Kentucky has done this exclusively," Phillips said. "Most schools don't replace 1,400 APs at a time. They just do a building here and there. It just made sense to do a big bang."

MSU's OIT saw an uptick in connectivity issues. This led to the University taking over the management of its online network and surveying every structure on campus using heatmaps to pinpoint spots in each building where signal strength is weak or nonexistent and tailoring their AP placement to optimize internet across campus.

"The previous plan just saw walls and treated it as a wall," said Marc Williams, senior network engineer. "We can focus on these specific issues and design around these specific issues and give a better design around campus."

The replacement of the APs will begin at the end of the Spring 2023 semester and take about nine months, with priority given to residence halls and commonly utilized areas like the Adron Doran University Center and Button Auditorium before moving on to administrative and academic buildings. MSU plans to improve the network at regional campuses and the University Farm.

Upon completion, MSU's Wi-Fi network will comfortably support high-speed, uninterrupted internet access. Students will notice immediate improvements in network capabilities, whether utilizing multiple devices during their studies or relaxing with gaming and streaming services during their downtime.

"This will be better everywhere," said David Flora (Class of 2002, 2005), project manager for OIT." Instructors in their office, classrooms, you name it."

"This will set MSU up where a freshman coming in will have a great experience until they graduate," Phillips said. "This Wi-Fi replacement is part of an overall strategy to improve the networking experience at Morehead State University."

Outreach employees recognized for service to region

Two Morehead State employees were recently recognized for their service to low-income students.

Maria David, associate director of Talent Search, and Summer Bryant (Class of 2008), director of Talent Search programs, were honored at the 51st Annual Southeastern Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel Inc. (SAEOPP) Conference for their outstanding service and contributions to the TRIO movement.

David received the Deborah Northcross Unsung Supporter Award for Kentucky. Recipients of this award must contribute to the state's and SAEOPP's missions and goals, contribute to TRIO through service at conferences and committees, and positively promote TRIO.

Bryant received the SAEOPP Honors of the Executive Committee Award. This is SAEOPP's most prestigious award and recognizes an individual whose contributions on behalf of the association were instrumental in advancing the association forward. Bryant currently serves on the KY TRIO executive board and SAEOPP board. This past October, she represented MSU and the TRIO associations during an executive leadership institute held at Princeton University.

Dr. Dan Connell, assistant vice president of regional education and outreach, said Bryant and David "are very deserving of these honors."

"Summer Bryant and Maria David deserve the honor and recognition for their many contributions to the Southeastern Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel (SAEOIPP)," said Connell. "Both of them give of their time and expertise to advocate for low-income and first-generation students as well as promote professional development for TRIO professionals in the eight-state SAEOPP region. Their commitment and dedication are to be commended."

Morehead State University Talent Search serves 1,800 low-income, first-generation students in 12 counties in Kentucky's Appalachian region (Bath, Carter, Elliott, Greenup, Johnson, Lewis, Magoffin, Menifee, Morgan, Powell, Rowan & Wolfe). For more information regarding MSU's Talent Search program, call 606-783-2977.

The mission of the SAEOPP is to promote and support equal educational opportunity and access to postsecondary education. Through professional development, networking, research, and advocacy, SAEOPP provides TRIO personnel and others with the necessary skills and techniques to ensure that the least advantaged have equal access to higher education. SAEOPP comprises the following eight states; Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee.

MSPR student awards announced

Morehead State Public Radio (MSPR) provides opportunities for students to gain career skills and experience. MSPR is honoring two of those students with awards.

Clay Wallace, a senior convergent media major from Frankfort, is the recipient of the 2023 MSPR Outstanding Student Award and Karina Gonzalez, a senior from Mt. Sterling double-majoring in Spanish and Biomedical Sciences, is the recipient of the 2023 Community Advisory Board (CAB) Student Leadership Award.

The Outstanding Student Award is presented annually to an intern, work-study or volunteer student who worked at MSPR during the past year (2022). Selected by the MSPR staff, the recipient is chosen based on leadership, dependability, initiative, and personal development while performing quality work and an overall commitment to MSPR.

The CAB Student Leadership Award is presented annually to an intern, work-study or volunteer student who worked at MSPR during the past year (2022). Selected by MSPR's Community Advisory Board, the recipient is chosen based on personal achievements, leadership, volunteerism, and campus and community involvement.

"I congratulate Clay and Karina on their success and achievements, contributions to the community, and for their dedication to the mission of Morehead State Public Radio," said Paul Hitchcock, MSPR general manager.

MSPR relies on student work studies, interns, and volunteers, performing various essential roles, including news gathering, interviewing and reporting, audio editing, engineering and production.

"WMKY offers a wide variety of hands-on opportunities in a professional and educational environment. We value the hard work by our student staff and their commitment to our listeners," added Hitchcock.

Serving more than 20 counties throughout eastern Kentucky, southern Ohio, and western West Virginia, Morehead State Public Radio (WMKY) broadcasts from the campus of Morehead State University at 90.3FM and online at www.wmky.org.

Additional information is available by contacting Hitchcock at 606-783-2334 or by e-mail at p.hitchc@moreheadstate.edu.
