Equipment Is Now Available To Farmers

Ditcher, Scraper Provided By Soil Conservation Unit

The Rowan County Soil Conservation District now has available some equipment to be used by the farmers of Rowan County. This equipment is being furnished by Mr. Leland Hall, Chairman of the Rowan County Soil Conservation District. One V-type Martin ditcher and three V-type scrapers were furnished by the Soil Conservation Service.

Walter McKenzie, Work Unit Conservator, assisted Messrs. J. M. Gregory, Joe McBrayer, Ernest Ferguson and Hiram Atkins in working out a Soil Conservation plan for their farms during May. These plans call for removal of trees which are a hindrance to the establishment of permanent hay, pasture, management, protection of forest land, liming and phosphating, establishment of water supply for livestock, cover crops, contour cultivation, and the construction of terraces and diversion ditches necessary to control surface runoff water.

Mr. Orville Caudill, of Poplar Grove community, is cooperating with the Rowan County Soil Conservation District in constructing 1100 feet of diversion ditches in a pasture field to control erosion.

Farmers interested in the work of the Rowan County Soil Conservation District should contact your County Agent or the District Office located in the Circuit Building over the Ration Board.

City Offered Free Garbage Dumping "Land-fill" Site

The week brought two new developments in Morehead's municipal waste disposal system.

At its meeting Monday, Monday, the City Council discussed proposed garbage disposal system. By its action it authorized an opinion from the office of the Attorney General that funds from the gas department be used to help pay for the installation and maintenance of a garbage system.

In the meantime, Ezra Martz offered the City, free of charge, what he described as an "ideal dumping ground" for the garbage.

Mr. William F. Guyton came to Morehead and made an extensive study of the possibility of underground water supply. Copy of this report follows: Mr. William F. Guyton, in United States Geological Survey, said that the city could be supplied with water from the creek gorges dry in the summer.

Mr. William F. Guyton, in United States Geological Survey, said that the city could be supplied with water from the creek gorges dry in the summer. Therefore, it would seem unlikely that you might obtain any considerable supply of water from the creek gorges. The dug wells in that area have a very limited supply during the summer.

This department is engaged in cooperative work with the United States Geological Survey in mapping of surface and ground water supplies, and I suggest that you contact Mr. William F. years, a number of wells have been drilled in and around Morehead for oil and gas, which is frequently found in the limestones and shales. I wish to point out that the "Corniferous" in all cases, if any water was found above the "Corniferous," it was in very small quantities. Another well found in the potential oil and gas horizon, has been salt water brine. This situation regarding the underground water of Morehead area is substantiated by a report of Geologist and Engineer in the Sample Building, Morehead, Kentucky. You have supervised the drilling of a large number of wells in that area. I quote from a letter of Mr. Eyl to Mr. Guyton: "We frequently find water in the 'Corniferous,' but invariably it is salty. Morehead Water Supply Termed Post-war Problem

Following is the text of the report compiled by head State Teachers College regarding Morehead's water supply system. The report states that the situation will, no doubt, be grave after the war, and will be one of the major problems to confront the college and the taxpayers alike. Morehead's present water system is a cooperative arrangement between the city and the college.

The first of these dams was built in 1930 by damming approximately eight million gallons of water. At the time this amount of water was deemed sufficient for the town and school per month. The second dam, however, during the following years this amount was found to be inadequate and a second dam was built with the help of the Works Progress Administration. This dam, however, started in 1939 and finished in 1942. This second dam combined with the first gave us an impounded gallonage of approximately fourteen million gallons.

During the drought year of 1943 with total maximum consumption of 15 million gallons per month, this supply was found to be insufficient. During this year with scarcely any respite from June to January disastrous was averted by pumping water from the General Refractories Christy Creek Mines, eleven miles above Morehead.

The winter of 1943 and 1944 was much below normal in rainfall. The summer of 1944 found us again in critical condition. The city was again seemed to be in our only resort, but this was averted by late September rains. The status of our water supply seems to be this: In years of normal rainfall an artificial reservoir is sufficient while in years below normal rainfall it is insufficient.

Many suggestions from various sources have been made for enlargement or improvement of our water supply. All these suggestions were studied over and some put into practice. Among these many and varied suggestions were the use of deep wells or underground water. Knowing little of this source of water supply, we obtained the advice of the U. S. Geological Survey. Following their recommendations per quotation from correspondence: (A) Letter to D. J. Jones, State Geologist.

"The town of Morehead is you no doubt know is located in Rowan County, Kentucky. Would you kindly advise from your knowledge of the structure of this locality if it would be feasible to drill deep wells for a water supply for a population of 5,000 people? If so, would you give me some idea of depth we might have to go in order to obtain this water?" (B) Letter of July 24, 1944 from D. J. Jones to W. H. Rice:

"It is my belief that you will not be successful in drilling deep water in the Rowan County. More than 400 more feet in depth probably would encounter brines, and of course the water would not be fit to drink. I realize that finding sources of good water for city and municipal supplies is becoming a very critical problem in various parts of the state. This department is engaged in cooperative work with the United States Geological Survey in mapping of surface and ground water supplies, and I suggest that you contact Mr. William F. Guyton, Engineer in Charge of Ground Water Investigations in Kentucky, at 531 Federal Building, Louisville 2, Kentucky. It is possible that we may be able to assist you

We made it a point to go to that store immediately, and without mentioning what we had overheard, ascertained from the proprietor that he hadn't had any bacon for three weeks, and then only six pounds.

Morehead merchants are like those every place else. They are beset with shortages, price ceilings and a hundred other worries. They are doing the best they can, and in our opinion are doing a pretty good job.

Don't criticize your merchant, is our advice to the shopper. True, he may make mistakes, but his is a hard lot now, and your criticism doesn't make it any easier. The same holds good for the restaurateur, the filling station operator, the garage man, the inn keeper, the department store manager—in fact, every business man.

Their task is hard enough now—don't make it any more difficult.

IT HAPPENED IN MOREHEAD
BY THE EDITOR

It's a Small World

When Lt. Billy Young, of Frankfort and Morehead, parachuted from his stricken plane over Germany last year, he landed in the middle of a Nazi raid.

The first words the German officers who took him in custody asked was: "Are you hungry?" It seems that Herr Goebels propaganda had been so effective that the Germans thought the English and Americans were starving.

After being fed and Lt. Young says it was a good meal he was taken before a German officer for questioning. In accordance with instructions, Lt. Young refused to give any information except his name, rank and serial number. The German officer advised him that his plane had been charted across Germany and that some bombs had been dropped on an agricultural village, several non-military target. "If we find this town, we'll be in a bad way in this village, you will be shot at dawn," the officer advised.

Just before he was led away to solitary confinement, Lt. Young knew that he had been hit, and realizing that it could have been his bombs that had destroyed the village, Young spent a sleepless night, but the subject was never mentioned again.

Young was placed for 13 days in solitary confinement in a cell that was pitch dark. He was periodically brought out for questioning. The food consisted of a black bread and water two or three times a day.

On the twelfth day a German officer, speaking through the small unit aperture of Young's cell asked what part of the United States he was from. Young told him from Frankfort, Ky. and the German officer began asking him if he knew of certain places, such as Cherwell, Park Louisville. He then mentioned a girl's name in Frankfort, and Lt. Young told him he thought he knew the girl, but did not know her name. The Nazi officer advised him that he would get him out of solitary confinement, and the next day he was transferred to more comfortable quarters and better food.

Upon returning to Frankfort after his release, Lt. Young ascertained that the Nazi officer was married to the Frankfort girl he had mentioned, but had deserted her to return to the Fatherland, five years before.

Cruelty To Ideals

By Ruth Taylor

Have you ever been against an idea just because you didn't like the person who promulgated it? That is cruelty to ideas—and I reckon there have been times when you've been as guilty of it as I have.

But remember, as Don Marquis used to say, an idea isn't responsible for the people who believe in it.

Did you ever try watching your own prejudices for one day? I did once. I kept a list of every instinctive bristling up, and it was pretty illuminating. When I analyze my list, my opinion of myself reached a new low!

Here are some of the things I found:

Prejudice against ideas is too often against the people who sponsor them. An idea may be so good that even a bad man will accept it—yet say nothing of the people who just want to climb on the bandwagon. Make up your mind for yourself—study the situation, and draw your own conclusions. What's the use of being an adult if you can't make your own decisions?

Prejudice against individuals is too often a mirror reflection—you see in them more mannerism, some shading of expression, some tone of voice, some characteristic of someone who perhaps you have just come to dislike—and you group the two together. You generalize—when really your likes and dislikes should be based only on the individual.

Prejudice against groups is too often either a hangover or a misconception. Either it is based on a careless statement overheard in childhood and accepted as a fact, or a stereotype acquired in some thoughtless way. Or it may be an albino, often unrealized by the holder—against some one's else ability. It is much easier to say it is a group against you than to admit personal shortcomings. The first defense of the incompetent is to incriminate.

Prejudice against the untried and the different is too often a defense mechanism. We fear the unknown. We dislike it because we don't want to admit our own ignorance. We don't like to feel inferior to ourselves—so we just say that what hasn't come within our ken is no good.

The best cure for all prejudice is knowledge—for the cause of all prejudice is ignorance. We would do well to remember that we are cruel—even to ideas. So let's get wise to ourselves.

Double Tragedy

The double tragedy of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Wells in Morehead last week, although lamentable, is another day in the life of a couple which had lived a fruitful, long and happy life together, would have wished it. Mr. Wells, a lifelong citizen of Elliot and Rowan counties, and active in merchandising and business until he suffered a stroke in November, 1943, passed away Tuesday evening at the age of 79.

On Friday, the day of the funeral, Mrs. Wells, 72, who became ill after viewing the body, passed quietly away the next day. Her funeral was postponed until Saturday, and rites for both were conducted at the same time.

They were the pioneer citizens of our community had lived a life of good citizenship; they had reared a family that they could well be proud of; they had negotiated their span of life; and today, they rest side by side. We know they wanted it that way.

Future M.D.'s

Two promising young Moreheadians have just entered the United States Navy Medical Corps, which doesn't help the local shortage of doctors any, but is a contribution to the service.

Murvel Blair, who has been resident physician at one of Louisville's larger hospitals, was inducted into the Navy early in June, and now Milton Caudill, who has just completed his M. D. training has volunteered in the same organization. Both have commissions.

Speaking of young Morehead physicians and "will-be" doctors, bring to mind that distinguished Freddie Francis is now doing extreme work at St. Joseph Infirmary. Then there is Louise Caudill, who seems to be completing her internship. Harold Holbrook, for whom we have always predicted a bright future, will soon be a dentist.

Oddly, all received, or are now getting their training in Louisville.

Picked Up Around Town

Talented Ruth Lappin has been chosen to play the Hammond organ, which was installed this week at the Morehead Christian Church. The church has been redecorated and renovated, which will make the inaugural of the organ Sunday even more pleasing. Motorists are slow this year in purchasing their Federal stamps, now on sale at the postoffice. These must be secured by July 1, unless a sewage disposal system (or septic tanks) can be installed, and Morehead's water system (always inadequate during a drought) residents on U. S. 60 of Morehead, have little hope of getting city water, for which they have been clamoring. Publicity advocating the passage of the amendment to give the state highway sufficient money, unencumbered by legislation or politics, so that Kentucky can make the proper advancement in road building and maintenance after the war has now been started. Either this week or next the correct address, with street number, will be placed on all copies of the News in Morehead. Postmaster Claude Clayton has repeatedly requested Moreheadians to have their mail addressed by street and number, to avoid delay. We pity Moreheads, poor butchers... as soon as they bring out a quarter of meat, they are surrounded by housewives.

A Letter From Farmers

The News is in receipt of a letter, signed, "Citizens of Farmers, Ky.," which in a condensed form reads:

Dear Editor: There is a den of hell here in Farmers (name omitted by the editor) operating a beer joint, saloon, and a house where women and men gather and commit all kinds of crimes. Yet, the law does nothing to stop it, though it goes on night after night after night. We thought that such things would be stopped by the law, but they are doing nothing.

In answer to the letter, the News checked the records at the courthouse and found that the last grand jury indictment against the place in question. The case was continued until the November term.

However, if such a place exists as described, it is the duty of law enforcement officers to ascertain what is going on, and to clean it up without waiting for the next term of court. If the proprietor is operating a legitimate business he would welcome an investigation—if he is conducting a place, such as described above, there are laws to prosecute him—to close the business and protect the morals of the Farmers community. If such a place is being maintained openly and high-handed as is indicated, it should not be difficult to secure ample evidence.

The Garbage Disposal System

—It seems to the News that a better understanding between members of the Morehead City Council and civic organizations who have for months pleaded for a garbage disposal system, would result in considerable good and the possible installation of the plan.

The Morehead Board of Trade, other civic clubs, and the City Council, have been at loggerheads over the proposition for months. Members of the Council say they favor the garbage plan, but their hands have been legally tied—the Board of Trade, which has taken the lead in behalf of all the civic organizations, has contended the majority of the council, and instead of trying to find means to put it in operation have gone the opposite direction to ascertain everything possible to keep it from being established.

It is not our purpose to criticize the civic organizations or the Council. No doubt, they are both sincere in wanting to do the right thing. The Board of Trade, composed of business men of the community, unquestionably have the progress and advancement of Morehead at heart. The members of the Council serve in a thankless capacity, with little or no remuneration, and it has always been our opinion that anyone who accepted a place on the Council was doing so as a civic and community contribution.

But, two facts are paramount to every clear-thinking citizen. First, the garbage system is a vital community need and necessary, and second, the vast majority of people (the Jim Smiths and the John Does) of Morehead, want their garbage disposed of, and Morehead made a cleaner and more sanitary place to live.

All American government is based on the rule of the majority—on public sentiment. With a realization that Morehead needs and deserves a proper garbage disposal system, and with the knowledge that the majority of the citizens of this community want it, the News goes on record as favoring its installation and maintenance.

We dresary that as much as taxes are disliked that if a vote were taken today of the citizens of Morehead whether they would accept a tax increase if the garbage system would be established, that it would carry by the mandate of the people.

In connection with garbage plan, two interesting developments occurred this week. First, the city has been offered a dumping ground for the garbage, without cost, where the practical landfill method could be used. Second, the Board of Trade secured from the Attorney General's office an opinion that the city could legally spend money from the gas fund for the operation of the garbage system.

We, therefore, find ourselves in the position today of having the truck already purchased and on hand, an offer of a free dumping ground... and the Attorney General's opinion that the city could use money from the gas fund for this purpose.

With these facts at hand, we cannot see any reason why the garbage disposal system should not be put in operation.

Don't Make Their Task More Difficult

We have heard many criticisms of "this or that merchant." For example, we overheard a woman say the other day that "I've never wanted to buy another dime's worth at such and such a store because I know he got some bacon this morning and then lied to me about it."

Honest AGGRESSIVE OPINIONS

win the respect of THE TIMES readers

TOM WALLACE, for fifteen years editor of THE LOUISVILLE TIMES, has his roots deep in the soil of Kentucky. A fifth generation Kentuckian, he was born at Hurricane and moved to Shelby County when he was a boy. Still a farm-dweller, at Prospect, he gets up each morning at 5:00, personally tends his poultry flock, confers with his tenants and brings the milk from his Jersey herd into town. By 8:30 he is at his desk starting his prodigious output of editorials and articles.

Wallace started out as a bookkeeper but quickly realized that his interest lay in the news world. In 1900 he began his career at The Times. Five years later he joined The Courier-Journal as editorial writer and drama critic under "Marse Henry" Watterson. In 1923 he was made chief of The Times editorial staff. In 1930 Times editor.

Concerned with conservation since he was twelve, Wallace has championed by speech and editorial the preservation of our natural resources. Almost single-handed for a time, he fought to save Cumberland Falls for the state, which won him the Pugsley Silver Medal. The annual Tom Wallace Forestry Award is named in his honor.

A world-traveler, he has for the past few years pointed his trips toward South America, especially Mexico... writing keen, sympathetic articles south of the border. This month he flew to Caracas for a meeting of the Inter-American Press Association of which he is U. S. vice president.

The Wallaces have two children, a daughter, Mrs. Leo Handel, whose son Tommy is named after his grandfather; and a son, Henry, an officer in the Merchant Marine, somewhere in the South Pacific.

Two Moreheadians Return To Civilian Life

T/S Gilbert of Route 3, Morehead, and Pfc Glen C. Logan of Route 2, have scored 85 points or more under the Army's adjusted service rating plan, and have been released from Army duty according to notice received from Camp Atterbury, Ind.

Many men who have the required number of points, and men over forty years of age, are being released daily from the Atterbury Separation Center, and are returning to civilian life.

2,000 Waves Needed Each Month Till V-J Day

"The terrible and heroic experience of the USSF Franke with the Japanese suicide attack planes and the loss of several more fighting ships in the Okinawa area emphasize the Navy's formal announcement that 2,000 Waves are needed every month until V-J day," stated Lieutenant A. J. Hardy, Officer in Charge of Wave Recruiting for Kentucky, recently.

In the interview Lt. Hardy stated that each week one thousand of these Waves would go to the Hospital Corps where they would care for sick and wounded from the Pacific area, which are returning to hospitals in increasing numbers as the fighting approaches the heart of Japan's empire.

"American women—Kentucky women—are needed at the bedside of these men at this very moment," the Lieutenant concluded earnestly. "I believe that this appeal will be met by Kentucky women and met now."

Women 20 through 35 are urged to join the nearest Navy Recruiting Station for full details of enlistment in the Waves.

Behind Your Bonds Lies the Might of America

When farmers were appealed to for greater efforts during the first year of World War II, Iowa produced the greatest tonnage of hogs and feed in its history. Its hay, grain and hogs in 1941, led by the record yield of 61.3 bushels of corn per acre, the highest main grain crops totaled 20,627,000 tons, 21 per cent above the nearest high point so far in the history of the state. The crop and feed of America represent but a fraction of the real wealth of this rich land of hogs backing up your War Bonds.

actual fire and baptism to battle. On November 2nd, our Rear Echelon was organized and we organized our administrative units into one unit at Brussum, Holland. Here we met the most hospitable people. Thanks so much for their beds which they gave so freely and their coffee for our tulip bulbs. For nothing they gave us our first home in Europe.

On the 29th of November, after our troops had broken the impregnable Siegfried Line, we took a position in the Carolus Magnus mines in Palenberg, Germany, in the middle of the West Wall. We spent the winter here and got back to Brussum occasionally, as well as to Heerlen and Maastricht.

During December heavy artillery constantly shook our building in Wiescheer on the Roer River. On December 16th while Von Runstedt was pushing the bulge south of us, we were bombed in several times, but never received a direct hit. When two planes came in for bombing and strafing, our 50 caliber brought them down in flames. A third burst in flames in mid air and the pilot hit the silk. So picturesque was a tumbling plane and a drifting chute-enemy—not in a movie. Our knock-out were high for this day.

One day we were bombarded with Hitler's secret weapon, the V1 and shot, we might say, with his V2, which buried our vehicles and men alive. In mid January I got an opportunity to visit the front with my friends and the 99th Division that I left in July, 1943. They held the bulge and a tour showed me the remains of German, horses, cows, hog-guns, tanks, trucks. All was destruction.

On February 23rd, our Division crossed the Roer River and on the 27th we moved to Linlich, Germany on the Roer. Here I saw my first dead American and I can't forget. This was the most beaten up town I had yet seen—the once German resort; now rubble. Bombs fell everywhere, trying to knock out the supply route to the troops, the only bridge across the river. On the 2nd of March, we moved to Viersen, Germany, under cover of darkness and remained on the 17th when we again moved under night skies for Krefeld on the Rhine. This time we utilized a Hitler Youth Camp for our billets. When the move across the Rhine was well started, we crossed the Rhine at Wesel at midnight on the 8th of April. Here we expected a blackout, but Brooklyn Bridge and the Golden Gate was never brighter. Men worked under flood lights completing railroad bridges and laying bridges for vehicles. On the 9th after an all night ride, we arrived at Minden and stayed for four days in a German Barracks.

On the 12th we moved to Hannover and were billeted in a modern school of music with pianos in every room. Hannover, the once historic city for English kings was now a rubble pile with narrow passageways in the streets. On the 16th of April, we pulled the stakes once more and departed for Stendal on the Elbe. This time we found ourselves to be the forward elements and twice we were alerted for attacks against tanks and Werewolves. Enroute, I came with the Ad-German Party and we encountered German tank and small arms fire, but none of us were in great danger. While here at Stendal (a German airfield), in early May, German PWs streamed across the Elbe surrendered to the "good" Americans to avoid the "ruthless" Russians. So soon they have forgotten the thousands of Poles their own SS men have burned and machine-gunned in Gardelegen, the next city which is near-

All was not bitter. We had our good times; we learned to laugh at dangers. But war is all that stokes once more and departed for Stendal on the Elbe. This time we found ourselves to be the forward elements and twice we

In over 650 servicemen's hospitals scattered throughout the 48 states lie thousands of wounded soldiers and sailors. These boys are now returning at the rate of over 1,200 a day! They've given their best—for you! Their convalescence often takes weeks...

To make this time seem shorter, little luxuries can build morale and cheer a disabled man... such things as long distance phone calls home, musical instruments, games—or the leather, clay, wood and tools for handicraft work, that will help restore torn muscles and shattered nerves. Many organizations collecting waste paper are using some of their funds from waste paper sales to buy "extra comforts" for those wounded servicemen.

ADOPT A HOSPITAL! If you belong to a club, church, school or organization collecting waste paper, suggest that some of the funds be used to help these veterans. Adopt a hospital! It may be one nearby or at a distance, and far from any town. Find out through hospital chaplains or the local Red Cross Camp and Hospital Committee what gifts can be used.

And do it now! The gratitude of these wounded boys will make you glad you backed the Double-V Program.

Haldeman Soldier Says Nazis Want To Be Friends Now

The following letter by Corporal Riley E. Cline, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Cline Haldeman, is a graphic portrayal of what a soldier in the German campaign feels about the war. Corporal Cline has been overseas 18 months.

Stenzel, Germany... On the Elbe May 20, 1945... With the lift of censorship, everything can be told. I'll begin with the dear old U. S. A. which takes me back to August 28, 1944. The week prior to the 28th, our Advance party came from Fort Dix, New Jersey, to Fort Hamilton (lower Brooklyn) New York, where we received our last minute courses such as training against chemical attack and abandoning ship in case of emergency. Every other night we received passes to New York City and I made the most of it.

On Sunday night, 27 August, we weighed ourselves like pack mules with GI equipment and awaited a barge. At midnight we tugged up the Hudson and received our order No. 8 in Brooklyn about two o'clock on the morning of the 28th. With a band playing to our departure and the Red Cross girls handing coffee and doughnuts to us, we struggled with our heavy loads and filed onto a large ship which we found later to be the Queen Elizabeth. In the early noon Queen Lizzy slipped out of port and we all scrambled on deck to take a last glimpse at Staten Island and that

Riedel Joins Army Overseas Teaching Staff

Dr. and Mrs. F. Altherton Riedel left this week for Washington and New York where the former will embark for England. The couple will first visit with their son, Lt. James Riedel and their many friends in the Capital.

Dr. Riedel was appointed at Morehead College three years ago to fill the vacancy in the chemistry department left by Dr. W. Keller on leave and serving the government in defense research at Iowa State College.

The chemistry professor came here after a long and varied teaching career. He was educated in New York, Ohio and Colorado, and achieved a technically incomplete and a finished Ph. D. He taught mainly in Colorado, Kansas and Washington, D. C. In the latter place he was for six years head of Science and mathematics in the city's Teachers College. His main ambition has been the preparation of teachers in science.

The new position places Dr. Riedel in the army with a simulated rank commission. He will instruct G. I.'s in chemistry while they await embarkation to America and the Pacific. Ten other chemists selected on the basis of their training and rating in Men of Science will be sent overseas about July 1.

"AT YOUR SERVICE" INFORMATION ON G-I MATTERS Below are Questions and Answers on G-I Matters furnishing such information many desire.

Question: Does the navy require sea or foreign service for all personnel after two years of service in this country? Can they serve longer than two years here? Answer: Navy personnel serve where it is needed they are best fitted to serve. No definite period of service will determine where the man will serve. Naval personnel who are placed on "special assignment" may never be assigned to sea or foreign duty, no matter how long they serve in the navy.

Question: An 18-year-old boy has written from an Infantry Replacement Training Center under 19 weeks of basic training he will be eligible for overseas duty. Is that all the military training he will receive? Answer: There is a law or regulation governing the amount of training they should receive.

Question: Eighteen-year-olds are now being sent overseas as infantry and armored force replacements. Are they insufficiently trained or physically unfit to be sent overseas? Answer: The army policy that no infantryman would be sent overseas until 19 weeks of basic training has recently been revised. There is no law providing any special length of training before a boy can be sent overseas.

Question: Can a soldier be transferred to a quartermaster? If so, how and where can he apply for the transfer? Answer: Soldier should apply through channels through his commanding officer.

Question: I visit my son at the base hospital at El Paso, Texas. M.F.H. Answer: You will be permitted to visit your son while he is in the hospital if the government will not pay for your trip.

Question: My husband enlisted in the Army in 1942. He signed up for the duration and six months. When the war is ended will he be discharged in 18 months or 18 months and up? Will he have to depend upon the points in the four factors for demobilization? Will there be a distinction between the two, drafted and enlisted? Mrs. C. L. S. Answer: All men now serving in the army of the United States are being discharged in 18 months plus six months. There is no distinction between persons drafted into the service and those voluntarily enlisting for the duration. After the defeat of Germany all personnel will be given "point scores" under the four factors accordingly, unless they are needed for service in the Pacific war, or for occupation troops, or are specially needed and cannot be replaced.

Question: I was discharged from the National Guard before the war. Am I entitled to a service pin? W. H. G. Answer: You may not wear the service pin signifying honorable military service in the armed forces of the United States by reason of your connection with the National Guard, since at the time of your discharge, they were not in active service for the Federal Government.

Question: My brother, who is in the navy as a machinist 2/c intends to take a course in Diesel engineering after the war. Will he be able to take a mail order course such as the I. C. S. at the government expense? M. L. T. Answer: Take matter up directly with the director of education and vocational rehabilitation, Veterans Administration, Washington 25, D. C. Some or other correspondence schools may be approved under certain conditions.

Question: I am a G. F. R. S. pool. Am I an army man? I have a son in that and I would like to know. D.F.S. Answer: Ground Forces Redistribution Station, Replacement Pool.

Question: My son is in the army and I am receiving a dependency allotment of $68 for myself and 17-year-old daughter. If my daughter secures employment, will that affect would that on my allotment? Answer: It probably only reduce the allotment from $68 to $50, if you are otherwise dependent on your son for chief support. That portion of $18 would be reduced for your daughter. If receiving for your daughter, if your daughter is physically able of withholding tax. His pay would depend on his job in the Merchant Marine. Write to the Commandant, United States Maritime Service, War Shipping Administration Training Organization, Washington 25, D. C. for the latest complete information covering regulations.

Question: I have a boy who will be 18 next month. He will have to register for selective service but he has another year to go before he will finish his high school work. Is it possible to get him deferred to finish his school work? If so, how do we go about it? Mrs. L. N. Answer: The boy's local draft board will have to answer that question for you.

Question: The payment of National Service life insurance discontinued in the event that the beneficiary remarries? Mrs. E.M. Answer: No. Question: Does a had conducted discharge come under the GI Bill of Rights? E.A.M. Answer: The Veterans Administration will have to decide whether the discharge will make you eligible for the GI Bill of Rights.

College, Council Eye Water System As Grave Problem

 range from less than 200 ft. to 600 ft. We often find some water in the Ohio Black Shale; it too is salty, excepting, perhaps, when the water is found in the shale in the surface "Ground-Water" zone. We have even found salt water at approximately the Wier Sandstone my offhand observation is correct about the only fresh water we ever find occurs from 10- to 50 ft. in depth, usually less than 30 ft. I have no information which would horizon at only 80 ft. in depth. If I had me to believe that there is a "clean" potable water in this locality.

I have a very high regard for the opinion of Mr. Eyl and it seems to me from his and our own observations, that it would be a rather hopeless matter to anticipate the finding of any potable ground water in that area by the drilling of deep wells.

We then sought advice from this body of engineers as to best possible source from surface waters supplies. A rather extensive study was made by them and suggestions made as per copy of report which follows. At the request of Mr. W. H. Rice, Superintendent Building and Grounds, Morehead State Teachers College, through Mr. D. J. Jones, State Geologist, Department of Mines and Minerals, Lexington, Kentucky, a brief investigation of the water-supply situation for the Morehead area has been made. During a visit to Mr. Rice on August 31, 1944, the entire water-supply problem was discussed, the present works and surrounding area were inspected, and several possibilities for increasing the supply were discussed. A previous report by Mr. D. J. Jones of the State Department of Mines and Minerals and Mr. W. F. Guyton of the U. S. Geological Survey establishes the probable impossibility of obtaining any substantial increase in the supply from ground-water sources. The following report briefly covers the conditions now existing, the prospect for increasing the supply from surface waters, and recommendations for further steps to be taken.

Morehead is situated in the valley of Triplett Creek (tributary to Licking River) and the present source of the water supply is from Triplett Creek. About 3,000 people are served by the water-supply system in addition to the State Teachers College. About 2,000 people living in the immediate surrounding area obtain their water from other sources. The present total average consumption is about 200,000 gallons per day but for future consideration a consumption of about 500,000 gallons per day is contemplated assuming that the 2,000 people in surrounding area will be supplied and that there will be a natural increase in the population of the town and college.

The flow of Triplett Creek results from run-off from the 47.5 square miles of drainage area above Morehead. Near the north edge of town there are located two 100-foot long concrete dams separated by a small built-up island held in place by a retaining wall. The depth of water immediately above the dams is about 9 feet and when the reservoir is full water is backed up for a distance of about 1,800 feet. The first dam was built across the natural channel of Triplett Creek and later when a second dam was built, the pool above the dams has been dredged a number of times to increase the storage capacity. It is estimated that the total storage available in the reservoir created by the dams is about 10,000,000 gallons. This represents a 30-day supply at the contemplated future rate of consumption. Leakage through the ground around the concrete dams, through the island and perhaps underneath the dams reduces the total actually available; however, occasional run-off from the drainage basin replenishes the storage. Water is diverted from this reservoir, passed through rapid sand filters, is treated, and is then pumped into the distributing system.

In the normal year, that is, a year with average run-off during the summer months, there is an adequate daily flow in Triplett

Creek to take care of even the proposed future consumption with the present storage. The year of 1942 could possibly be considered nearly a normal year based on a study of the discharge records collected in the Licking River Basin during the past twenty years. During 1942 the daily flow of Triplett Creek, as measured at the U. S. Geological Survey gage located downstream from the water-supply dams, was below 1 second-foot only a few days during the year and the minimum daily flow was 0.7 second-foot or about 450,000 gallons. However, during the winter when the rainfall is deficient in the summer months Triplett Creek will become entirely dry for long periods during the late summer and fall and most of the supply would be obtained from storage. During such conditions all run-off is conserved by storing in the Triplett Creek reservoir. In August of 1943, from the latter part of August to the latter part of November, there was no flow past the U. S. Geological Survey gage below the dam on Triplett Creek indicating that all run-off was intercepted. During 1944, except for a few days during the summer, there has been no flow past this gage since the middle of July. At one period in recent years, it was necessary to go to an abandoned quarry in the head-waters of Christy Creek (tributary to Triplett Creek) and pump about 30 million gallons of water, which had collected in the quarry into the Christy Creek drainage basin, allowing it to flow by gravity to the reservoir.

Of the several possible methods for obtaining a permanent additional supply, only two are considered feasible in one or more respects, and either one will require the expenditure of a considerable amount of money. These methods are: (1) to install a pipeline one or 8 or 9 miles long to Licking River with a pumping station located there, or (2) to construct a large storage reservoir in one or more of the small tributary valleys adjacent to and above Morehead.

Other suggested solutions which are not believed to be practicable are as follows: To raise the present dams and create a large storage reservoir in Triplett Creek. The principal objection to this proposal is the damages to property owners upstream; also, the additional head at the dam might cause the leakage condition to become a serious problem. To raise the dam to sufficient height to produce adequate storage might also cause greater future flood damage. It is considered that the method by which this method would be the most feasible solution.

To go to North Fork of Triplett Creek and pump water over the ridge this would require a pipeline three or four miles long, a storage reservoir on North Fork, and a pump of considerable size to raise the water over the ridge. The cost would probably be relatively high. Unless a great deal of storage was provided it would supplement and not replace the present supply inasmuch as run-off of North Fork is considered to be very little different from that of main Triplett Creek. This method of improving the present supply is also thought to be impractical.

Before a comparison can be made of relative value of the two feasible projects (the pipeline to Licking River vs. the storage reservoir) there are several factors that must be evaluated, i. e., the adequacy of supply at source, the feasibility of constructing a reservoir, and the relative cost of construction and operation of the two projects.

From the standpoint of the adequacy of supply at the source Licking River at Farmers' Ken-tucky, which is the unusually dry year of 1930 the daily flow reached a minimum of about one second-foot (650,000 gallons) during the 20 days in October. This flow would provide 500,000 gallons per day without providing storage and would still allow factor of safety. Water to fill a storage reservoir in one of the tributary valleys would be obtained from Triplett Creek by pumping during the months when the flow of Triplett Creek is adequate, generally from December to June. The flow of Triplett Creek is about 10 to 15 to 20 second-foot (10-13 million gallons per day) during these months, which is greatly in excess of any pumping rate which might be considered.

In order to properly evaluate the cost factor it will be necessary to do some preliminary investigation of the reservoir site. From a study of the topographic map of the Morehead area it appears that the most desirable and practicable location for such a reservoir might be in the valley just north of the college. This area was inspected on August 31 with the Triplett Creek gage. A preliminary inspection appeared eminently satisfactory for the purpose. However, before any real consideration is given to this project a full survey should be made and a map drawn showing the topography of the valley from about elevations 740 to 800 feet above sea level. There are several fairly good locations for a dam across narrow points in the valley and necessary should be made to obtain the opinion of a competent geologist as to the location of a dam and possibility of retaining water in the reservoir.

There is probably 10 feet of fill in most of the valley, judging from the depth of the creek bed, and as this material appears to be very porous, there probably would be a large volume of storage space within the reservoir for use as the reservoir was drawn down. Such storage could be considered a good safety factor.

It is believed that with a dam 20 to 25 feet high creating a reservoir about 1,500 feet long with an average width of about 100 feet, a usable storage in excess of 50 million gallons would be obtained which would be the minimum storage provided for future consumption. This amount of storage combined with the estimated amount available in the present reservoir would represent about 120 days standby supply which should with proper operation of the system come adequate to provide almost any amount of water during almost any period. It is expected that evaporation from the reservoir may be an important factor, possibly amounting to as much as two million gallons per month during a 4 or 5 month period in very hot dry summers. However, as local snow in the immediate Morehead area even during drought periods, it is believed that run-off from the proposed storage basin above the proposed reservoir site would be at least partially compensate for evaporation.

Possibly the water supply system could operate directly on the proposed reservoir using the present reservoir in Triplett Creek as a source of supply. This method of operation during dry periods would be to maintain the highest possible elevation of water in the upper reservoir in order to provide storage space in the lower reservoir for the interception of run-off from the Triplett Creek basin. Assuming the proposed reservoir to be located at one of the two narrow points in the valley inspected on August 31, run-off from a drainage area of slightly less than one square mile would be collected in the reservoir. In the normal year this run-off would average about 500,000 gallons per day or equivalent to the contemplated average daily consumption. On this basis during most years the reservoir would be very nearly self-sustaining and pumping costs over a period of years would be very small as compared to the proposed Licking River project or even present pumping costs. Also, it is believed that the impounded water in reservoir would require much less treatment than Licking River water or Triplett Creek water as used direct from the stream. Before even any preliminary investigations are made of the reservoir site, it is suggested that rough estimates be made of the comparative original and operation costs of the two methods of solution. These estimates should provide a basis as to the advisability of further investigations. As a considerable expenditure will be necessary for either project, it is highly desirable that all facts available be known.

F. F. Scharder, Assoc. Engineer, U. S. Geological Survey, Louisville 2, Ky., September 5, 1944.

Since January, 1937, the college has been furnishing water to the city of Morehead at a flat rate of 10 cents per thousand gallons. Attached is a four-year study of the cost of producing this water. The foregoing report covers a subject which should be given careful consideration. It is the writer's opinion that before Morehead and M.S.T.C. can grow to their maximum capacities, additional storage or supply will be necessary in our water works system.

Respectfully submitted,
