'Book Basket' Project To Get Underway

Starting with the first day of final exams, there will be a large basket in the Doran Student House ready to catch textbooks as students leave the exams and head for the grill to reenergize themselves.

The Forensic Union has instigated "Operation Book Basket" as a means of aiding some of the area's schools in increasing their libraries. Every sort of book is needed and will be welcomed. Students are urged to hold a general clean-up in their bookshelves and help the Forensic Union gather books rather than the gather dust!

A letter from the American Speech Society requesting books to be sent to foreign countries sparked the idea of collecting books for the schools in the Morehead area whose libraries simply do not have the funds to supply enough reference books, non-fiction, and fiction to satisfy the needs of their students.

The books gathered will be sorted and catalogued to be sent to schools during the summer months. Since the campaign will

1922 Is Official

Many students and faculty members have asked why the MSC seal on the 1960 Reacounter was dated 1922 instead 1923.

The date of 1922 was entered on the seal because the Kentucky Legislature meets on even numbered years, not odd years. Thus in 1922 the Legislature met and passed an act to establish an institution of higher learning both in Morehead and Murray.

Bartlett Designs 'Inkpot' Cover

For the cover of the Inkpot, Pat Bartlett's imagination has taken full rein and in the art work of both her and Roy Moore, a fine indication is given readily to the talent that lies within this freshman publication.

The Inkpot is no new publication for the college, but is this year in a way revitalized and unique in that it is solely the work of freshmen writers, poets, artists, and translators. It represents the work of over 50 freshmen students under the direction of Mrs. Mona Combs of the English Department.

The publication contains primarily actual assignments and next year will enable the incoming freshmen to see the level that they, too, must attain in English. Yet, this is only a small part of it. There are translations of Latin, Spanish and French that makes it an all-conclusive language publication. For those who know the poetical urge, there is even space in the book for the best in poetry submitted by the freshmen.

One can see the possibilities inherent in such a broad publication. It opens up instruction for high school students who are planning to enter college and desiring to know something about freshman English. To facilitate this understanding, copies are to be sent to various high schools closely allied with Morehead State College.

It also opens up a measure of recognition for freshmen that possibly might not come until later. Recognition is both an important and difficult attainment on a college campus for many, if not most.

Finally, it gives freshmen a chance to submit their work, receive important criticism and encouragement, and work closely on a project they alone are responsible to make successful. This Inkpot is well representative of the hard work and desire of this year's freshmen.

As a form of introduction, there are two poems from the Inkpot staff:

Poem Without Harsh Sounds
By David Knack

Mellow winds blow dreams
Into souls in spring.
And tender melodies often bring
An omen of lovers' moonlit schemes.

The joy of love blooms supreme.

Spring
By Carolyn Applegate

Love warms my heart and makes me sing;
My soul is filled with laughter,
Golden days bring warmth, and breezes bring freshness.

Youth captures the song of birds.
Eyes are turned toward heaven.
Trees are budding with newness.
Winter has fled away.

The world is sprinkled with a thousand rainbows.

Grass is cool beneath bare feet;
Nights linger to await pink dawns.

Banquet Is Characteristic Of Roman Age—Even Dress, Food

Although Latin may be called a "dead" language by some, its students are very much "alive" at Morehead State College.

The MSC Home Ec Department was invaded last week by about 50 campus Latin students and visitors and all wore characteristic Roman dress. The costumes were varied and represented soldiers, gods, goddesses, citizens, barbarians and others.

The occasion for this gathering was the Roman Banquet sponsored by the Latin Club here.

As the "Romans" entered the room, they were met by slaves who took them to their seats. The slaves, portrayed by Martha Frye, Sabrina Tolliver, Marlene Messer, Pat Yonts, and Janice Long, kept the guests well supplied throughout the dinner with wine (grape juice to you).

All food served was known to the Romans and even the manner in which the meal was served was typical of the Age. There were no plates, spoons, forks, or knives, and two trays of food were placed on each table.

The finger bowls were again passed and the third course, Secunda Mensa, was served which included nuts, grapes, figs, dates, and apples.

Throughout the feasting, skits were presented by members of the Latin Department. The skits in the order in which they were given are: "The Adventures of Perseus and Medusa" by George McInyre as Medusa, Jimmy Kepley as Perseus, and Donna Harrison as Andromeda; "Ceres and Proserpina" by Mary Book as Ceres, Manerva Dunn as Proserpina, and Harry Haythorn as Pluto; "Daphne and Apollo" by Brenda Jo Snelling as Daphne, and Eugene Clark as Apollo; "Atlantis's Race" by Doris Mullins as Atlantis, and Dick Robinson as Hippomenes.

Other skits in the order in which they were given are: "Anthony's Funeral Oration for Caesar" by Frank B. Carver; "The Judgment of Paris" by Frank B. Carver as Paris, Anna Jean Gayhart as Venus, Eleanor Saunders as Juno, Mary Lee Ricketts as Minerva, Don Platt as Jupiter, and Lynne Hinton as Isis; "Pyramus and Thisbe" by William Davis as Pyramus, and Linda Tackett as Thisbe.

"An Incident in Gaul" by Frank Neher as Julius Caesar, Teddy Hall as the Barbarian, and Charles Moles as Labienus, his most trusted servant.

The three fates were presented to spin measure and cut the thread of life. Also lending much charm to the occasion were the Graces: Mirth, Laughter, and Song who were portrayed by Sue Johnson, Sandra Elin, and Jane Kendrick, respectively.

Guests at the event included Ann Carter, Mrs. Carolyn Platt, Miss Joan Kavanaugh and Mrs. Al Stewart, faculty members; Dick Robinson, Mrs. Gayle Stanley, June Robinson, Gayle Stanley, June Dohi, "Whetmore" students; Marie Dunn and Mrs. Robena Brown of Middletown, O.

Also attending was the seventh grade Latin class of Sandy Hook. They were: Ithel Wright, Karen Lewis, Connie Flannery, Key Lyon, Marcella Ferguson, Charlotte Atkins, Randy Green, James Legg, Harold Whitte. They were accompanied by Mrs. Ann Carter, Mrs. Georgia Green and Miss Gwendolyn Carter.

The program was concluded with the singing of songs in Latin led by Brenda Jo Snelling.

After seeing the great success of this event, Mrs. Ethel Moore, Asst. Prof. of Latin and sponsor of the banquet, said that she hoped it would be possible for high school teachers of Latin in the Morehead area to attend future banquets with their students.

Eagle 9 Loses By 9-6 Count To Middle Tenn.

The Blue Raiders of Middle Tennessee handed the Eagles of Coach George Cooke their first conference loss of the year by a 9-6 score in an extra-inning affair at Lexington on May 13.

The Raiders took advantage of four big errors in the eleventh inning to break three runs across for the victory. The Tennessee lads had only one base hit during this inning as all of the runs were unearned.

Morehead jumped to a one run lead in the second when first baseman Les Redmond poked an infield out and pumped home on an infield out. Again in the fourth, Ray Allen singled, Bob Daniels walked, Ben Ellis cracked a single and Danny Pierce singled to produce three more runs for the Moreheadians.

Then came the fatal sixth and seventh frames. The Raiders' shot across one in the sixth and in the seventh and tied it in the eighth with another pair. After that, everything went smoothly for couple of innings and then came the eleventh.

Pete Greig pitched some very effective ball and was able to cool most MTSC scoring threats, but his defense lagged and the runs poured in.

Redmond led all Eagle hitters with two bingles in five trips.

Another new club, "The Diving Eagles," has been formed at Morehead State College. The Diving Eagles are dedicated to the art and techniques of SCUBA diving. This involves scuba diving with mask, fins, and air tanks.

SCUBA apparatus was invented in France during the late thirties, and was popularized during World War II with the advent of the Frogmen. Interest in this activity has spread through the world, not only because of its military importance, but as an adjunct to scientific underwater research and as a sport in itself. The purpose for the club on campus will be to train interested persons in

Morehead Downs Eastern 5-2 In Non-OVC Game

The Morehead State College baseball team pulled one of the seasons biggest surprises out of their hats when they upended Eastern 5-2 here last Thursday in a non-conference contest.

Truly a team victory, the Eagles had to come from a 2-0 deficit, tie it up, and fight into the lead. Pitcher Jim Hastings went the route for Coach George Cooke's baseballers, yielding only six singles and whiffing five. His superb performance was topped only by the excellent assistance he got from his counterparts.

Eastern jumped off to a quick two-run lead in the first. After Brandenburg walked, two successive errors and a strike by Dunnaway landed a pair for the Maroons.

Morehead immediately retaliated when Eldon Secret scored a solid two-bagger and scored on Bob Daniels' sharp single to right.

In the fifth, Larry Wright started the pot boiling again when he walked, was sacrificed to second and romped home with the tying single. Les Redmond's knock.

After getting into somewhat of a jam in the fifth, the Eagles scored in the sixth on Eldon Secret's hit to take the lead 3-2, however they appeared groggy entering the seventh. Johnson lined a long drive into left-center only to see it plucked out of the air by a racing Ray Allen. Hayship followed with what looked like a sure bloop base hit, but went in second. Baseman Wright to make a beautiful over-the-shoulder catch. After that, the Maroons of "Turkey" Hughes offensive power melted. The Blue and Gold men caught fire and played brilliantly in the field the rest of the contest.

The MSC offense still had something to say however, as junior first baseman Les Redmond greeted relief pitcher Morgan with a towering blast over the

In the bottom of the eighth, Allen tied off with a liner to left for a base hit. He went to second on an infield out, was sacrificed to third, and romped home when Wright drove right fielder back against the foulhouse for his long shot. This ended all scoring as a non-conference meet.

Five Senior Sportsmen End Morehead Playing Careers

Five senior sportsmen take their laurels home to rest at the conclusion of this term.

Herbie Triplett, Wayne Chapman, Abby Dawson, Glen Ramsey and Norm Stark will bid their college farewells to Morehead State College as their careers are terminated by graduation. All of these men were standouts in their own particular specialty.

Upon entering MSC, Herbie Triplett immediately caused much controversy. Here was a mere 5' 8" half-pint trying to compete with some of the tallest cagers ever to don the Blue and Gold. Looking like a cat in dog pound, Herb made his debut against Villa Madonna. From then till now, Triplett has been the playmaker for Coach Bob Laughlin's charges. All he did that night was to score 18 points and lead Eagle fast breaks with Cousy-like precision, in his first varsity game.

The year Triplett hit his peak. He topped all Morehead scorers netting an average of 20.0 marks per contest. His best efforts came against Villa Madonna, Murray, Middle Tennessee and Eastern, which three were conference foes. Topping off his superb career, he was named to the Ohio Valley Conference first team at the end of his last campaign.

He also played on the first golf team ever fielded by MSC. The task team was coached by the late Dudley of Clark County High School fame.

The big tackle led Coach Guy Penny's linemen against many stronger and larger opponents last season, but always he seemed to provide the spark that held the line together and made it hold. Chapman was named to the All-OVC second team this year as his leadership qualities were recognized by conference foes as well as teammates. Wayne is a physical education major who like most athletes wants to coach after his graduation from MSC. The Barboursville, West Virginia native ran track last year as he participated in the high and low hurdles.

Alby Dawson

One of the few men on campus to participate in two major sports, Alby Dawson is a mainstay in the pitching department. This pitching is composed of tossing footballs and baseballs around with effective accuracy. "Buck" coined all of Morehead's baseball wins last year and has won a number of pitching contests. He is considered, along with lefty Pete Greig, the workhorse of Coach George Cooke's crew of brown hurlers. The Coal Grove, Ohio product is the lone senior on the squad.

Dawson's leadership qualities too, have earned him much respect for his opponents as well as his teammates. His leadership traits earned him the starting position on the Eagle grid squad his senior year. His fast passing and razzle-dazzle ball handling never ceased to amaze onlookers.

Alby is an Ohio State transfer who is married and majors in physical education.

Norm Stark

Every voice in Jayne Memorial Stadium is hushed. All eyes are turned toward a lone, lit figure, standing motionless. He is not just a pole vaulter, he is the pole vaulter. He carries Morehead's hopes for a victory in this event. The bar is at 12.5 and the vaulter lopes with an easy stride toward the Everest he must conquer.

The onlookers catch their breath as the pole goes down, and with a sudden lunge he goes up . . . and over the bar. For a moment there is awed silence and pandemonium breaks loose. A new Morehead State College record is set.

The holder of this record is Norm Stark, jumping Jack from Huntsville. Stark's leap was good in the pitching department. Mrs. Doran Elected By Women's Club

By Barbara Anglin

The new officers of the State Federation of Women's Clubs were elected yesterday at its 65th convention in Lexington. Mrs. Adron Doran was elected second vice-president of this Federation. Other officers elected were Mrs. C. B. Morgan, Litchfield, president and Mrs. L. T. Follett, Mount Sterling, fourth vice-president. Two-hundred and sixty-nine delegates and 213 registered guests attended the three-day meeting. The federation adopted a resolution endorsing a limited constitutional revision convention after hearing Governor Bert Combs speak in support of the proposal.

In his speech, Governor Combs said, "Before Kentucky can achieve its maximum potential in prosperity, it must remove the unreasonable restraints on government, courts, and commerce which exist in a constitution designed for the last century."

The women visited Ashland, the home of Henry Clay, where the federation was organized in 1894. Dr. Clyde T. Francisco, professor of Old Testament interpretation at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, spoke at the awards dinner in the convention hall.

The federation voted to hold its 66th annual convention next May in Louisville.

By Josh Lovelace

A new map showing the county distribution of Morehead State College graduates and alumni in the State of Kentucky has been prepared by a group of Geography students under the direction of Mr. John Gartin, professor of geography at Morehead State College.

The map is made of tracing cloth with outline and boundaries with India ink. The dots showing the alumni members are made of craft tint raised design.

The students working on the map are Patrick Arnett and Ronald Bivens and assistance was given by Mr. Billy Joe Hall, director of alumni affairs. The map will be displayed in the Alumni office located in the Department of Public Relations.

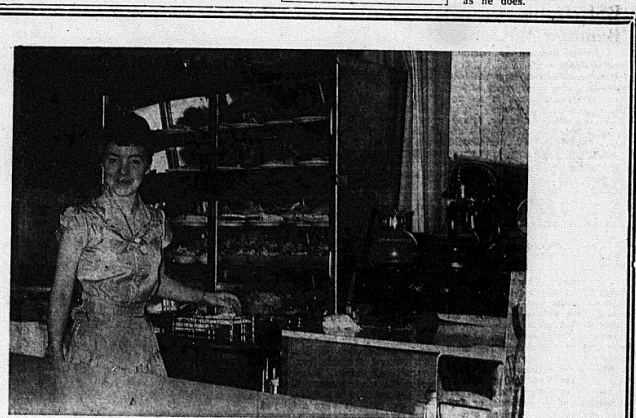

Mr. Gartin said concerning the map, "This map represents the type of training of the students in this cartography class and all students have completed similar projects. The class as a whole also worked on the map." Mr. Gartin added, "I feel this is a fine piece of work and that it represents the type of work in the Geography Department."

Campus Club Spring Formal Held May 14

By Wanda Pearce

The 1960 Spring Formal, an annual affair sponsored by the Campus Club, was held Saturday, May 14, in the Doran Student House.

This well attended dance featured the music of the Hal Scott Orchestra and an imaginative "Fantasy Land" theme.

The Campus Club transformed the MSC cafeteria into a world of fairy tale characters, including Alice in Wonderland, Snow White, and Cinderella.

Adding to the illusion of fantasy were pools of flowers which smoked and bubbled mysteriously and columns of brick, flowers and streamers.

This dance, which is the last formal dance of the year, was termed a great success by many who attended.

Bob Ed Rose, Campus Club President, had these comments on the dance: "The Campus Club is very pleased with the success of the dance. We hope that everyone had an enjoyable evening, and we wish to thank all those who helped for their cooperation."

Post Cards Depict MSC Campus Beauty

By David Masters
People have asked me, knowing that I go to Morehead State College, what I like about the college, where it is located, and all the other things that make it important to me.

Once I have said, after some few minutes of concentration, that it is located in an ideal setting in the Cumberland Mountains, that it has one of the prettiest campuses in the South, and is one of the most progressive colleges in the country. Yet these statements never completely show the true beauty of Morehead State College. Nor have I ever been able to describe sufficiently the campus buildings and the tree lined walks that make up this beauty.

Who can describe to a person who has never been here, the clean new lines of the Jordan Student House? The neat lawns, the pretty flowers, the modern facilities that make this an ideal Student House. Who can further describe Lappin Hall with ivy climbing to the top, the trees in the front, and the cool sharp features of the building.

Can it be described? Or attempt to tell of Button Auditorium and Fields Hall with tulips in bloom and flowering dogwoods nearby. These are beyond mere description.

Workshop In Resource Use And Conservation To Start June 13

A workshop in Resource Use and Conservation will be offered by Morehead State College beginning June 13 through July 1.

Several of the major problems of Eastern Kentucky are directly associated with the use of our resources and conservation. Accordingly, this workshop is being sponsored by the joint facilities of agriculture, biology, education, geography, geology, and Brockbridge Training School together with representatives from interested divisions of both the federal and state governments.

The workshop is open to juniors, seniors, and graduate students with the meetings arranged in order that students may schedule other courses and thus carry a full summer load.

Donald Martin, director of the conservation workshop, announced that the incidental fee for the workshop will be set at $18.

BSU Holds Annual Banquet May 6

By Elwood Miracle
The Baptist Student Union of Morehead State College held its annual banquet on May 6.

The BSU members are currently trying to beautify the BSU Center. Also, the budget and a calendar of events for next year have to be decided on. Another thing which will be done is setting up a council for this summer.

Next year's officers are: Janet Campbell, President; Mildred Ryle, promotional vice-president; Billy Westerfield and Bobbie Webb, co-listener chairmen; Barbara Anglin, secretary; Janet Hannum, devotional chairman; Forest Kelly, music chairman; Donna Hughes, missions chairman.

The BSU is now collecting money for the summer missions. Wayne Wade, this year's president said, "We have had our ups and downs, but all and all, this has been a real successful year for us. We have had the privilege to watch many young college students grow stronger with Christ. Also, this has been about the best freshman group that I can ever remember in my association with the BSU."

'Two More Hours'—A Story By Shank

By David Shank
I fumbled my feet out of the while Pontiac and placed them on the street, stood erect, yawned once and breathed the city's air. Then I drug my bag out of the back seat, said goodnight and goodby to the car's driver, yawned a second time and stepped out on the sidewalk.

Well, Kingston. What does everybody in this town go to bed before midnight? Same as back home. Like a ghost town at two in the morning.

Well, should take about fifteen minutes to walk through town, ten minutes to get a ride—maybe twenty at this time of night—then about two hours along the Hudson to New York.

Two hours! Two hours through the dark and there it is! Two hours to millions of people, good, bad, drunk, sober, beautiful, ugly people. The hours and I'll be in the Big City—while these people are still asleep and doing nothing.

Six days ago—or six weeks—yes, six days ago, I was in California sitting on Tin Can Beach and watching the waves and listening to myself "a week from now I'll be in New York City—New York City!" I'll see it in the Empire State Building and the highways and Greenwich Village and Broadway and Madison Avenue and everything that is anything—because that's where everything significant is. Three thousand miles away—on another ocean—and I'll see it in six days!

I threw a chunk of old driftwood at the waves and they leaped and tossed it and tried to drown it but it popped up and rode on top of the waves and laughed at me. I watched the dry clouds drift and change into stars and I felt the moist wind of the ocean cool my face and, as the moon came up and gave light for all of nature's forces, I slept.

Oh, six o'clock the next morning I pointed my right thumb away from Los Angeles and got a ride with a nervous punk in a fifty-year Hudson and we drove around Hollywood, very lost, until he ran into a red gasoline pump, I got out and looked at him like he was crazy, because he was, and I left him standing there looking silly because I had to get to New York.

That day I rode up the Great Valley and two miles in the sky over the mountains and for five days and nights after that I rode toward New York with every kind of thing that stopped at my right thumb's sign. At night, in the desert and on the plains I hoped for drunks and queers to drive to me out of the dark because sometimes they are the only people decent enough to help a fellow human.

The clicking neon colors of Kingston reminded me of the flushing Fourth of July I had known in Reno and the drunk moon I met there. So drunk he couldn't see over the wheel of his Chrysler and I drove him to Salt Lake that night, very fast because it was five hundred miles closer to New York.

The window of a hospital supplies store reminded me of the old one-legged man I had met in the rocks and snow on Pikes Peak. So odd seeing a one-legged man on top of a mountain. But I didn't stay there long. There are a lot of men and mountains but only one New York.

Seems like two lives since I left California—yet maybe only a day or two. Standing, walking, sitting, riding, day—and night. Nearly three thousand miles.

Two hours and it will all be over. I'll be there, actually be there. Wonder if I'll be able to stop? I don't know how to stop. Running, walking, riding, five days and nights. I'll stop though. That's where everything is. Millions of things. Corners, alleys, people, smells, sounds, soft things, hard things, underground things, ugly things, rich people, poor people, tall things, underground things, everything. Two hours and then that's it. I'll be there. Then I'll rest. I'll rest a whole damn week. I'll rest so much I'll feel perfect. I'll sleep so much I won't know what it's like to be sleepy. Two hours. If I were up high enough I could see the light of here. Millions of big, small, white, colored lights. Vast canyons of the light of New York.

I blinked and remembered the cop in Dumas, Texas that stopped me in front of me and examined my character with his flashlight.

"Watcha doin' there," as he shined the light in my eyes.

"Walking."

"Kind of late to be out walkin' ain't it?"

"Yeah, well, I just got in town."

"Where're you goin'?"

"To see my uncle, he lives here."

"What's his name? Where's he live?"

"Name's Howard Mitchell. Lives on Third Street. I lost his house number but I know the house when I see it."

"You got any money?"

"Yeah, some."

"How much? Five dollars? Ten dollars?"

"I blinked and remembered the cop in Dumas, Texas that stopped me in front of me and examined my character with his flashlight."

"Yeah, something like that."

He let me pass, finally. He didn't want to but he couldn't figure out any scheme to stop me. Why do people who don't have anything to do or anything to do stop people who do? That's what I don't know. It was the same way in Grand Junction, Colorado.

"We don't allow no hitchhiking in this town, buddy."

"I'm not hitchhiking. I'm just standin' here beside the road."

"That's hitchhiking, buddy. We don't allow any vagrants around here either."

"How can standing beside the road be hitchhiking? If somebody comes along and wants me to ride with them, then that's their business. I'm just standing here. And vagrants don't have any money. I do."

Well, that's all behind me now. The mountains, the desert, the reckless drivers, the mean cops, the sleep—all behind me. I'm in the back yard of the Great City and I'll be there soon and I'll rest and sleep.

Sleep? When did I sleep last? In Oklahoma, beside a road sign I slept in the early morning with my head on my knees. I slept for several hours and it was good because I couldn't feel all the weariness that was within me. But when I awoke, I was stiff and hungry. Then along whizzed that white Pontiac and it stopped down the road after it say my right thumb. North Adams, Massachusetts. When he told me where he was going I almost forgot he was tired because he would go through New York state and I would get out and get one more ride and be there. Be in the Great City. We took turns at the wheel for forty-two hours until we were to Kingston, the best place for me to get out.

Well. At last, somebody's up. One person all the while I've been walking. May be he can tell me where the highway leaves town. What? A cop? They have curfew in these northern towns. Juvenile delinquents killing people. Cops been cracking down in this part of the country. Probably will think I'm some hoodlum-vagrant being out like this. He's coming over. Well, can't tell him I'm hitchhiking. No. I'll be-uh-looking for the bus station. Yes.

"Hello, say, can you tell me where the bus station is?"

Big shoulders, about fifty-pistol, club and all. Don't want any trouble from him.

"Hello, lad. Where're you from?"

"I just came from Oklahoma City with a friend. Going down to

What do you plan to be, lad? Plan to be? You mean what am I doing here at two in the morning without any money.

"I plan to be a writer someday."

"A writer, eh? Well, I hope to read your books someday. I'm Bobby Burns. May be you'll write about meeting old Bobby someday, eh?"

"Yes, sir, I may do that."

How will I write about you, Bobby Burns? Will I write "This was the man that hauled me off to jail in Kingston, the man that stood between me and New York City after I had worked so hard to get there?"

Officer Burns stopped at the corner and unlocked his black call box. He took out the "phone" and, as he twirled his night stick, and,

"This is officer Burns. Send a car up here, will you? I have a little errand for them."

So. The time has come. I could run but I'd be caught. Wonder if he'd about me if I ran? Damn. Six days I've traveled to get stopped within two hours of everything I have things to do. He can't lock me up. Why? Why should I be stopped when I'm almost home? And what can I do about it? Nothing. I just do what they say. They'll take me down and question me, try to find out if I'm some criminal. Then, when they can't get anything on me, they'll follow me and keep me from hitchhiking. With no money that's the only way. I can get out of here. I can't leave and I can't stay here. Why did he have to come along? People with no place to go always trying to stop those that do. Well, here comes the squad car. Two more cops. Well, they ought to handle dangerous men. Getting arrested and for nothing. I should have ran when I first saw him.

"Boys, drive my friend here over to the bus station. It's a good walk and he doesn't know the streets. Davy, I'm glad to have met you. I'll be looking for your books and don't forget old Bobby Burns. Goodnight. I had a good time in New York."
