The School Teachers And Politics

There's an old saying that if you can't find anything else to do become a politician or teach school.

The last election should be ample evidence that if you're a school teacher you're not a politician. For if ever the strength of the teaching profession was put to a test it was in the August primary. The results found the school people's influence and vote in almost insignificant factor. Just as most of the professional politicians predicted it would be.

The teachers rightfully asked for increased salaries, and they had the support of most of the press of the state, and of the majority of the people. Few people question that the teachers' pay should be elevated, there is none who refute that the teaching standards of the state are declining and that many of the best teachers of the state, educated in our state supported colleges, go to another state because of better salaries.

The Kentucky Education Association, the spokesman of the teachers, proposed a program which two candidates for Governor—one a Democrat and the other a Republican—openly supported. But, when election day came you did not see the teachers out at the polls working for the man that favored their program.

Facts of the matter are that the KEA and the teachers have made a great deal through the press about their plight, but given the opportunity to do something about it, they did not use any fight for their own interests—and, in the opinion of this newspaper the interests of the educational system of Kentucky.

Politicians have rightfully labeled the teachers organization as an important factor in any election. Actually, they could, working for the right thing, be one of the most powerful organizations in the state.

Until the school people of Kentucky band together and actually get into politics with their shirts off, there is little hope for the state to do in order to keep its educational system. It is doubtful if the state government is doing it. It is probable that Kentucky will continue its low rating in the nation's educational system.

The Right To Marry

Quite an ecclesiastical discussion is going on in the ranks of the Protestant Episcopal Church over criticism directed against two clergymen who married divorced women.

The critic is Bishop William E. Manning, who does not believe that the hope for them to get other marriages and live in the words of the service, "So long as you both shall live, or 'Till death do us part," or "Those whom God has joined together, let no man put asunder."

The matter is one for the church itself to solve, but even a layman can see that the controversy arises around the age-old assertion of various churches that they alone have the right to marry human beings. In some countries, it should be noted, a civil marriage is not legal, and in many ecclesiastical atmospheres, a civil marriage is regarded as no marriage at all.

While we would suggest to young people, about to be married, that they use the services of the church of their choice, we do not recognize the right of any religious group other than Christ, Buddha, Mohammed, or Jehovah, to deny to individuals the privilege of marriage unless it comes within the rules and regulations of the church.

We are quite conscious of the fact that many devout people look with horror upon the practice of divorce, but so far as we are personally concerned, we are quite certain that divorce is justified in some instances. Moreover, we are equally certain that we have witnessed so-called marriages which, by no stretch of the imagination, could be attributed to the Almighty.

The Right To Read

The American people, according to an estimate, spent one and two-thirds billions of dollars for reading matter in 1946—for newspapers, books and magazines.

This indicates that the people of the United States are voracious readers but the important thing to remember is that each individual had the privilege of selecting what he, or she, desired to read. This is a privilege that is denied to the situation prevailing in Russia, where the government selects the stuff that the people read. It is different from what went on in Germany when Hitler took charge of the reading of the German people and set up the peculiar mentality that supported Nazism.

The important thing for every citizen of this country to remember is that nobody has the right to censor reading in the United States. This is a precious heritage of free people. It is the architect of intellectual progress and moral greatness. Let us Americans permit no authority to cramp or control what Americans can read.

Experts on insect control will be on hand at every state fair to advise farmers with their problems. We hope that the day they will be able to do something about the pest which has been in the theatre, devouring popcorn by the sack.

These Candidate Posters

State-wide candidates found that in many cities and towns in Kentucky there was a city ordinance prohibiting them from tacking up their signs inside the city limits.

In our city, they were allowed to tack them on any post or tree, and for months after the election we'll see Bill May, Harry Lee Waterfield, Eddie Clements and all the rest smiling down upon us.

Now we don't think that Mr. Waterfield or Mr. Clements or Eddie Clements, John Fred Williams or any of the others have such unworthy consciences that they'll resent their profiles staring at us in the face every time we round a corner or stand down an alley. Morehead's two local candidates in the primary, Dr. Lyon and George Cline, both have excellent features, and we're sure that Mrs. Lydia Canfield and Mr. Allen will do nothing but add beauty to the already amply filled telephone poles.

But, we will have to admit that the other cities have something on us. By prohibiting this sign tacking up they put all the candidates on an even basis and give the people a chance to cast their ballot on the merits of the man instead of whether he has a square jaw or gray hair. They do leave the natural beauty of their trees and their courthouse yard unmarred by printed promises of more pay for teachers, better roads and increased old age pensions.

A Pledge Of Citizenship

"That does your citizenship mean to you?" Because I came to you first, to you assume its rights and responsibilities. Citizenship is not a commonplace to be taken for granted. It is a badge of honor—a prize for which to strive to be earned day in and day out, not to be remembered only at election days. Many constitutions are only a piece of parchment, and are expressing the solemnity of magnanimity day by day using the oath which was taken centuries ago by the young men of Athens when they became of age.

To our way of thinking, that oath should not only be a brief summary of the duties of citizenship, but by every one of us. Yet on one day of the year, but in our daily life. Let us repeat it together.

"We will never, bring disgrace to our city or our state of Kentucky or our country or our race. We will be honest and courageous in all our dealings with our fellow men, regardless of class, creed, or color. We will not shrink—we will work and pray for the good of the whole nation and we will not allow prejudice or intolerance to do as it may wish in our city."

"We will fight for our ideals and sacred things of the city, both alone and with many." That is we will not only protect our nation from outside enemies but we will keep alive within its borders the sense of democracy, freedom for all—which is the guiding light of our republic. We will not compromise with our ideals.

"We will reverse and obey the city's laws and do our best to make a life of respect and reverence for the laws of the state and the nation. We will set them as an example." That is, we will not only keep the laws of our community in the letter of the word but in the spirit as well. We will keep our community free of those subversive influences which attempt to subvert against our national and state ideals. We will teach to the younger generation reverence for the high principles which govern our Constitution and which guide us as a nation.

"We will strive unceasingly to quicken the public's sense of civic duty." That is, we by taking our part in all activities for the preservation and protection of the community, will act as an example to others, encouraging them to join in work for themselves alone, but for all our people.

"And think in all our words we will strive to transmit to this city not less but greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us." Our duties as citizens are not only to ourselves and our neighbors, our community and our nation, but to those who follow. The only way we can pay our debt to those who bequeathed to us as free a way of life to pass on to subsequent generations is a free nation, united in devotion to the cause of liberty, better and more beautiful because of that unity. Thus it came to us.

Not Responsible

There are some Americans who believe that the government support given to agricultural commodities is responsible for the prices at which these commodities now sell.

It is interesting to note, in connection with action, that the support price of the government for the 1947 crop averages $2.34 cents on the bushel. The growers are receiving 35.38 on the market, as of July 15.

Obviously, if the market price is eight cents above the guaranteed price, no one is to blame for the surplus of corn. This is a true of other farm commodities.

It was 112 degrees plus in Yuma, Arizona, the other day. They probably sell ice cream in pails down there.

Garage owners, with tire stocks piled higher than a grain's neck, are wondering what happened to all those roaring motorists who swore they couldn't go another mile on "those old tires."

The average man, we read, is 39 around the chest, 40 around the waist, 96 around the golf course, and a nuisance around the home.

Swimming pools and beaches are popular places these days. Even if you can't swim, you can join the wading list.

Another youngster got into a mess of trouble recently. He was a bottle baby and grew up with the habit.

Young people of today are no different than they were fifteen years ago. Their ambition still is to have a home of their own—and a good automobile to get away from it.

For most of us, life is what we make it. For the pedestrian it's if he makes it.

come and get it as I sleep with my feet out in the front window and the bound sleep under my bed in the front porch. It awakens me every morning, jumping the bottom of my bed. This man is laughing and my wife awakes. She does not see that dog or please come and get this dog.

Have You Heard?

Snake Story

Mrs. Erma Thompson, who lives on Fifth Street, noticed an escaped house snake in her back yard. She picked it up and put it in a box. The neighbors trapped the snake and killed it. Mrs. Thompson considers herself a very lucky woman.

More Snakes

While on the subject of snakes we don't know of a more repulsive thing to write about Mr. and Mrs. Bartley Blanton had a "terrifying experience" at their camp last week on Park Lake.

It seems that a huge snake got into the cabin through a hole left by a broken window. The camp was wired. Mrs. Blanton was washing dishes when her husband entered the kitchen and spotted the snake coiled above the window where his wife was working. Mrs. Blanton went into near hysterics when her husband pulled it out.

Mr. Blanton killed the snake, but Mrs. Blanton was really in no danger since it was a black snake, which is not harmful or poisonous.

Democrat Plan Headquarters Local Democrats are planning to open headquarters in a downtown room soon.

The Democrats are eyeing victory in Rowan this year although they have not yet won a majority in a Governor's election since 1924.

Spoke Story Reports that Warren Shaffer, owner of the "Thrift and Mills" theatre, plans to sell his business to Mr. Shaffer. "None of my theatres are for sale," he said.

Anything But This While in the County Attorney's office this week your reporter saw a man who was a jury to appertain some land disposed by several heirs. We heard it Hogg County Attorney Elijah Hogg could say two more words.

An almost sure way to get your pants full of back-stitch is to make such appointments as this. No matter how fair you try to be you make every one of the heirs are at you from now on.

It may not be a bad idea to look out for yourself, especially when you deal with people who do.

There can be little doubt of the fact that some charitable and religious bodies desire to be closed as fire insurance.

THE RANGERS COLUMN

By Jack Hicks

Last week I made a trip through the south end of the district chiefly to check the timber sale possibilities in one of our county owned tracts in East and Powell Counties. I found relatively little timber which we would classify as merchantable.

The underlying timber situation of the district provides an excellent growing area for this type of timber. Many of the trees run 14 to 18 inches in diameter, and I thought it over, had the area been previously likely it might have been cut over these past few weeks leaving nothing out a wasteland for the future. Allow these oak and other ten year growth and the yield of higher grade material—flooring, cooperage, and the like—will increase remarkably. Then you can begin to cut selectively. Timber stands should be looked upon as a bank account: collect the interest, but leave your principal intact so that you can continue to earn interest.

Either my eyes must be failing me or I have missed something marking the reconnaissance in East County I covered some 15 miles on foot but never saw a snake. The local people told me plenty of copperheads and rattlers had been killed there this summer, but certainly the survivors kept out of my way.

The rainy season has encouraged a rank growth of poison ivy and poison oak, as it has more green things and I have heard of several cases of poisoning. Among them Joe Meek. There are several remedies, but the one Leola Hall recommends is the simplest sounding. He says use towels soaked in water as hot as you can stand it. Scrub it works for me. I am one of those fortunate people who rarely get poisoned, and usually, ten for I have to wash through ivy nearly every time I get in the woods.

Mr. Burden and Mr. Avelar of the Winchester office will inspect the district this week.

We heard from Jack Frazier, our former townman at Salt Lake, last week. He is still in an Army hospital being treated for a large infection resulting from a virus sustained in a parachute jump in Japan. We hope Jack will soon be as good as new and back home again.

Plans are being laid for the big Rowan County Harvest Festival to be held in October at the Morehead high school gym. It takes lots of entries to make a County Fair a success; how about all you boys helping in some of your fine garden or field produce to compete for those prizes.

One of the unforgettable characters I knew in my younger years was a country doctor named J. R. Sigler. "Finger" is right. He was present when I came into the world in a little log cabin in a back corner of Henderson county. When I first began to notice people of our neighborhood Dr. Sigler was passing our house every day or two to bring in some new patients. And even then he was functioning as a community leader, though I as a child, as well as most of the grown-ups, didn't know it.

Dr. Sigler may be called a snakehead. He made plans and by himself usually then talked them over confidentially with influential villagers and farmers, who for reasons I never could understand never blabbed until Sigler gave the word. And he never gave the word until he was convinced that he had a safe majority with him.

When the majority opened up it soon realized that a fight was futile. Dr. Sigler's biggest achievement was persuading tightfisted people to vote a rather heavy tax on themselves to build a first-class grade and high school. He planned the school, then spent several months working the voters to his idea. My recollection is that the tax was $1.50 per $100 of property, which was high for those times.

The school was built in 1887. A school board of Sigler's own picking was a good teacher. The school got off to a fine start with day pupils coming from other counties. It became known throughout the district that the building was going to make a snake out of a man.

And during the ensuing twenty years the school grew to a fine building, getting persons of his own choice elected to the board.

Graduated from the State dental school, Dr. Sigler was a successful business man.

Dr. Sigler's greatest achievement was the community's next greatest need was a church. The church at that time was a little one of log cabin from the village. Dr. Sigler raised the necessary funds, designed a new church and had it built. For a long time he paid the preacher, and did a good job naming them, always keeping himself in the background, letting others do the talking when decisions were to be made.

When, after twenty years in outside, Dr. Sigler moved to Corydon, a larger Henderson county community, Dixie began to slip. Unfortunately there was no one to take his place. Dr. Sigler's son, a physician instead of three, and now there are seven sons. Dr. Sigler's son, a physician instead of three, and now there are seven sons. Dr. Sigler's son, a physician instead of three, and now there are seven sons.

I am not offering Dr. Sigler's unobtrusive leadership as an example for others to follow. I am giving you the story for whatever it is worth.

The birthrate in the United States is declining from the high point set in the closing months of 1945. In that year an estimated 3,669,000 babies were born, the greatest number since the Civil War.

The fertility rate, which is the number of children born to a woman, declined gradually to 2.97 in April, the last month for which figures are available.

Sunday School Lesson

STRAIGHT THINKING ABOUT DRINKING
International Sunday School Lesson for August 17, 1947

GOLDEN TEXT: "Who is a mocker? drinking a beverage and whomever is deceived thereby is not wise."—Proverbs 20:1

The lesson text from Proverbs should be carefully read. It is the voice of antiquity speaking words of wisdom which are just as fitting in this modern world as they were at the time they were written.

In Proverbs 23:29-32, we are given a realistic picture of the woes and sorrows which come to those in the clutches of the alcohol habit. "Who hath we?" who hath sorrows? who hath contentions? who hath contumacious? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes," the writer asks. Anyone who has ever come in to contact with a drunken man or woman can testify to the accuracy of the picture drawn.

Warning of the consequences of partaking of such beverages the writer says, "Look not, thou, upon the wine when it is red in the last stages of fermentation; when it sparketh in the cup, when it giveth down smoothly," for "at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder." Wine and similar intoxicating beverages may delight the palate and "lighten" the feelings for a while but the pleasure and delight are short-lived.

In his book entitled "Alcohol," its Effects on Man," Professor J. H. Emmerson states that there is a general agreement among students, teachers, doctors and scientists on the following points:

1. Alcohol is a narcotic, which by depressing the higher centers removes inhibitions.

2. Outside of the nervous system and the digestive tract, alcohol, used as a beverage has little demonstrable effect.

3. It is a food, utilizable as a protein, but it is such only to a very limited extent.

4. The therapeutic usefulness and value of alcohol are slight.

5. It may be a comfort and a psychological aid to the aged.

6. It does not increase and it sometimes decreases the body's resistance to infection.

7. By releasing inhibitions, it makes for social ease and assurance, and hence has one of its greatest dangers.

8. Its effects are best studied by changes of conduct.

9. It impairs reason, will, self-control, judgment, physical skill and endurance.

10. It may produce situations from which crime and social disgust result.

11. It is a frequent destroyer of health, happiness, and mental stability.

12. Its use commonly lowers longevity and increases immorality. The lesson, which will be taken in many classes as the responsible policy to the alcoholic evil, is much simpler and the individual who thus attempts to limit its usefulness will meet much of its grandeur. In the phase of man's daily activity the implications of the education should exert its influence. Life should be expressed temperately and this warning thought should be with us all as we translate our personalities in to depth and words that give us contact with other human beings.

There are many that teach temperance by stressing its restraint upon what some of us are inclined to call the "things upon the implications that temperance reflects upon some of the things that we associate with goodness. Temperance in life means balance. It negates indulgence just as much as it denies evil. If temperance in life means balance, then the extremes that lead us to either side of the narrow path are evil. The fanatical zeal that shows a "holier than thou" attitude toward man, and may, possibly, do the ultimate purpose of God as much harm as some excess of lust habits. Certainly it will obscure the search for truth and the working of truth by the individual, which is a great damage to the development of the spirit. The individual, seeking the development of perfect character, and its expression in life, which seems to us to be the goal of religion, must not lose sight of ultimate truth in the presence of things that accompany our interpretation of truth. It is not religious to earnestly seek to distinguish the Divine from the Human, and to look with faith toward the Light of God that shines upon mankind, but must pursue the finalities of human flesh. Undoubtedly appetites, passions, ambitions, aggressions and other human forces tend to obscure our vision of God and our understanding of his purposes. The very teachings of Christ have been "interrogated" by human beings into many varied and diverse meanings, both in the world today and the years that have passed. To divorce our beings of this human handicap it is necessary to be temperate in regards to the things of evil. It is also necessary to be "on guard" against the errors that spring from human nature itself if we expect, eventually, to express it in our characters.

DISLOYAL EMPLOYEES

An estimated 811 Federal employees, found disloyal to the United States, have been dismissed, according to the Civil Service Commission. A great majority of those discharged in the period from July 1, 1946 through March 31, 1947 were civilian workers of the War Department.

CRY BABY

When children cry, are upset and fretful, with a contented tongue, they may need a lozenge. Triena is the child's own lozenge—effective, gentle to soothe—easy to take because it's flavored with grape-juice. TRY TRIENA. Lozenges are only as good as the child likes them. The large size, 25¢.

Do you hope he gets away with it?

Suppose it were an automobile he was taking; would you still want him to get away with it? What the boy is doing is very human, isn't it? But is it right or wrong?

All through our lives we have to think whether it is right or wrong to underlie a compromise, use power politics to hold back some of the truth, to... well, to do a thousand different things. Those who want to build a better world are constantly concerned with the problem of right and wrong.

The Church, too, is vitally concerned with that problem. Its leaders and its followers have spent long hours studying, praying, living, to find the best and truest answers. The Church has good, realistic answers to the questions of right and wrong, answers all men need, answers that, if followed, will build a better world.

This advertisement, one of a series published under the auspices of Rowan County Churches, is sponsored by these patriotic individuals and merchants who are interested in a fine and progressive community—

YOU can help

The regulations which forbid the sale of alcoholic beverages to minors are important.

Kentucky's Alcoholic Beverage Industry is wholeheartedly in favor of such regulations.
Nobody wants a return to the unwholesome conditions of Prohibition days.

During Prohibition nobody asked:

"How old are you?"

Then, the only question was:

"Do you have enough money?"

We can best protect our young people by preserving our present Legal Control set up. Victims of control regulations should be reported to authorities.

Legal Control is a law-abiding system. Let's keep it that way.
