The University of Michigan

The University of Michigan Heopital reports the successful removal of a funire blade, which had rested for 23 years in the middle of a man's spinial column. According to hospital authorise, the blade was plunged into the back of the natient in a fight with a friend 23 years ago. It lodged in the spinal cord, between the shoulder blades, in a position which, ordinarily, would have produced partial or complete paralysis. The patient, not knowing the nature of his injust, continued working full time but, four years ago, began to have difficulty in walking. Through X-ray examination, the blade, covered with rust, was removed, along with a mass of scarred tissue and the patient relevenced. 23 Summit
