New TV Station Run By Students

A joint effort of the Division of Communications, headed by Dr. Fredrick Voigt, and Instructional Media, directed by Dr. Norman Tant, has resulted in a television cable station at MSU. TV 2 has a staff of 30 university students who deal with the everyday TV work. Besides the programs listed on the schedule, the station also broadcasts all Breckinridge school home basketball games live.

The station was established to give the students additional practical experience in the use of TV equipment and procedure.

Bob Hensely, who formerly worked with TV 2, is now a newsman with WKYT, a Lexington television station. TV 2 can be seen in action on the third floor of the Education Building.

Nitty Gritty Dirt Band Performing Here

By TIM WALDEN

Take one old man who plays harmonica and banjo, add a dog named Teddy, blend these into a tear jerking story, set it to music, and don't forget to include the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band. After putting all of these ingredients together, you have one of the most popular records of 1970.

The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band consists of five members: Les Thompson, Jimmie Fadden, Jeff Hanna, Jim Ibbotson, and John McEwen. Each member of the Dirt Band plays at least three instruments.

The group was formed in 1966, but didn't have a hit record until 1967 when they performed "Buy For Me The Rain".

Some of their other hits include "Candy Man", "Some of Shelly's Blues", "The House At Pooh Corner", and their biggest record "Mr. Bojangles". The Dirt Band has appeared on numerous TV shows, in the motion picture "Paint Your Wagon", and recently completed a tour with Bill Cosby.

This Thursday night they will be performing at the Laughlin Fieldhouse along with singer Dennie Brooks as part of the Student Government Concert Series. Students will be admitted on their I.D. card and tickets for nonstudents are $2.50, available at the Student Government Office in the University Center.

THE NITTY GRITTY DIRT BAND - will be in concert Thursday night.

University Debaters Win At 'Mardi Gras'

Kathy Crutse, a Lyndon, Ohio, junior, was cited as "outstanding debater" in the recent Mardi Gras Invitational Tournament at Tulane University, New Orleans. Miss Crutse and her partner, Ron Mather, a Hodgenville junior, advanced to the semi-final round before losing to McNeese State University, placing third overall in the three-day tournament.

MSU's other team of Pete Marcum,

Louisville sophomore, and Susan Washburn, East Monroe, Ohio, sophomore, had defeated McNeese in preliminary competition. The Washburn-Marcum team won five preliminary rounds but lacked enough speaker points to advance to the octafinals.

There were 64 teams represented in the tournament with Sanford University

SGA Transfers Funds And Hears Reports

A transferral of funds was the major business carried out by the Student Government Association at its first regularly scheduled meeting of the year last Wednesday.

Announcements were made by President Mike Mayhew concerning the motorcycle proposal, dormitory intervisitation, and the replacement of Congress members who did not return this semester, and a committee was formed to plan activities and events celebrating this year as MSU's 50th Anniversary.

Vice President Wendell Myers introduced a proposal to transfer $800 from the Administrative Fund to the SGA Emergency Fund, and the motion was passed with none opposed.

Members absent from the Jan. 26 meeting were Mark Kennedy, Janice Leasure, Elgin Murphy, Stephen Phelps, Kathy Hocler, and Sonnie Overholser.

A LONG WAY - Gideon Hailemasket pauses from his work in the University Store to find his hometown on a globe. He is a business major from Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Student From Ethiopia Recruited By Dr. Leroy

Many University faculty and staff members recruit students from Kentucky and neighboring states, but Dr. Perry Leroy, a history professor, goes much, much farther.

While visiting Africa last summer, he met Gideon Hailemasket, who was working in a bank in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Dr. Leroy told him about MSU. The young African applied for admission soon afterward.

Gideon arrived in the United States in January and registered for MSU's spring semester. He plans to major in business.

"I had written to many colleges and universities in the states," Gideon said. "Morehead State sounded the best to me and I decided to come here. So far I am well pleased with my decision."

The Ethiopian explained that he could have received a free education in his own country but didn't stay because of a shortage of well qualified teachers.

books and supplies. "Although I have to pay for my education here, I am receiving a higher quality education," he said.

Asked about the language barrier faced by most foreign students, the campus newcomer said:

"Speaking English is easier for me than speaking Amharic, the official language of Ethiopia. I learned English in elementary school."

He was active in high school activities, serving on his high school's student council. After graduation from high school as the youngest member of the class, Gideon worked in a bank for two years to earn the money to come to school in America.

He is working in the University Store part-time and hopes to work during vacations to earn more money for his tuition. "My job in the bookstore gives me more opportunities to meet people and practice my English," Gideon said. He is impressed by the friendliness of students and related that most Ethiopians are very friendly but some are growing less so as they become more Westernized.

Gideon plans to return to Ethiopia after receiving his degree. "I could probably be more successful here, but my country needs well educated people in all fields," he said.

Organizations, clubs, or individuals interested in working with the University Younger Woman's Club in a Community Service Project for the Kentucky Heart Fund Drive on Feb. 27, can get in touch with Mrs. Claude Meade, Route 2 Pine Hills, Phone 784-9683 by Feb. 16.

WMKY To Broadcast Senate Hearings

WMKY is broadcasting Senate hearings concerning "Freedom of the Press." The second broadcast will be tomorrow at 10 a.m.

Testifying will be Edith Efron, author of "The News Twisters;" Bill Monroe, NBC News; Dr. Clay T. Whitehead, director, Office of Telecommunications Policy; and representatives of the Liberty Lobby.

This morning the first hearing was held, and scheduled Daniel Schorr, CBS News; Aryeh Neier, American Civil Liberties Union; Charles Perlik, president, Newspaper Guild; and representatives from the National Newspaper Association.

The hearings are being transmitted to WMKY live via National Public Radio network.

The subcommittee has been carrying on investigations of freedom of information and freedom of the press for approximately one year. Included in the testimony is the FBI's investigation of CBS newsmen Schorr, and administration policies in the areas of public broadcasting and CATV (cable television).

During the session Wed., administration spokesman, Dr. Clay T. Whitehead, director of the Office of Telecommunications Policy will testify on those policies.

The funding legislation for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting is pending at the present. Due to an apparent disagreement between the Nixon administration and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting in regard to future funding, the administration has not as yet introduced its bill.

The development of cable television is being viewed at this time by the Federal Communications Commission. It is expected to adopt regulations soon which will affect the CATV industry.

Confused Students... Why Can't We Vote?

Last spring's election in Morehead concerning its wet - dry status caused much controversy, pertaining to students' right to vote where they attend school. With the ratification of the 26th Amendment allowing the 18 year old right to vote, many other college towns have been faced with this same situation.

The 26th Amendment states, "The right of citizens of the United States, who are 18 years of age or older, to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of age. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

No one has questioned the 18 year old's right to vote, but the problem arises when they try to register in the town where they live while attending school. The question of permanent residency seems to be the catch.

Kentucky's residency requirement is that a person must live in the state one year, the county six months, and the precinct 60 days preceding the election. Also, according to Kentucky Revised Statute 117.610, a voter's residence shall be deemed to be at the place where his habitation is, and to which, when absent, he has the intention of returning.

Most students who live on campus fit the requirements, but when they go to register here they are questioned on their intent to make Morehead their permanent residency. They are questioned more intensely than any others registering.

A recent court ruling by District Court Judge Mac Swinford of Lexington, stated that students should not have to fill more rigorous domiciliary requirements than are imposed upon other voter registration applicants.

In the opinion of some people, students should register where their parents live. The difficulty of traveling to another city during a school week to vote or correctly completing detailed absentee ballot procedures would keep many students from voting.

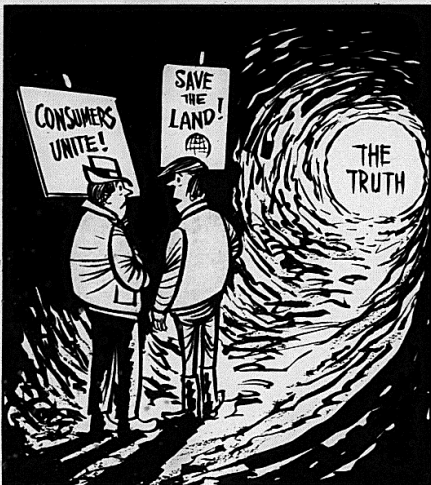

States which now erect barriers to registration of college students may abridge the fundamental right that all persons of 18 years of age have - the right to vote.

It would seem that the only appropriate standard to determine residency for voting purposes should be 1) whether the person is physically living in the community and 2) whether he has intention of remaining for an appreciable length of time. However, this is not the standard.

It appears that the student is being confused in an effort to keep him from voting. No one has said he definitely can or can not vote.

If a student fits the federal age limit and the state residency requirement, why shouldn't he be allowed to register in the town where he attends school? If students cannot legally register to vote where they attend school, why doesn't someone make it "perfectly clear"? All the questions about residency seem to be a last minute effort to stop students from voting - a right which they have just recently acquired nationally and wish use.

This tactic seems particularly peculiar in Kentucky, which went ahead of the nation a number of years ago to allow 18 year olds to vote.

'LOOKS LIKE THE WAY OUT...'

Bussing Is Impractical And Expensive Solution

The idea of bussing has long been an item of extreme controversy, but a recent landmark decision by U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige has brought it to a virtual head, at least in Richmond, Va., and two surrounding counties.

The decision orders Virginia state officials to consolidate the increasingly black school system of Richmond with two surrounding suburban districts that are 91 per cent white. It set an unofficial precedent for the merging of black cities with white suburbs. Similar rulings are expected in Detroit, Indianapolis, Grand Rapids, and Wilmington, Del.

According to this plan, a new superdistrict will start operation next fall. It will bus 78,000 of the 101,000 students up to 55 minutes each way to achieve a racial mix with a 40 per cent black maximum in all schools. This solution may seem ideal if the only purpose is to produce an integrated school, but it ignores what the cost would be to the school children trying to adapt to it. Almost two hours a day, every day, on a bus is a grueling experience for anyone.

It also ignores the cost to the taxpayers - black and white alike - who would bear a huge burden in buying and maintaining a fleet of busses.

Furthermore this will not even guarantee that each school will sustain a 40 per cent maximum black enrollment, since further population shifts in the area, and other developments, could soon make this impossible. To carry

Judge Merhige's solution to the logical extreme, the school district would have to continue to expand until it took in the whole state, a whole region. Children would soon spend more time on school busses than in classrooms.

Judge Merhige writes that integration is "essential to equality of education, and the failure to provide it is violative of the Constitution of the U.S." However valid this may be, there are limits to how large an area may be created in which one school system may operate in order to carry out the idea of racial balance.

Both whites and blacks have spoken out against this bussing plan, but as for popular sentiment, overwhelmingly opposed to the decision, the judge says, "Community resistance to change affords no legal basis for the perpetuation of racial segregation."

The real crux of the problem is financial - inner-city schools all over the country have been becoming poorer as the more affluent people have moved to the suburbs, where their high-bracket taxes support better schools. Thus a more effective, and more economic solution, would be to consolidate school boards within that super district, and to order that funds be so distributed as to make facilities and faculties equal in both inner-city and suburban areas. Some bussing may still be necessary to avoid racial isolation, but to consider bussing as the end-all solution to this very painful problem is highly impractical.

Political Redistricting Hurts Commonwealth

Redistricting has become a sticky issue in the Commonwealth. Last year's special session of the state legislature passed a remap bill, which was later struck down in a Federal district court, in line with the Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote ruling of 1970.

The legislators are back in Frankfort now and again they're struggling with the problem of redistricting. As could be expected, the legislators are split along regional lines on how to handle this population figures. The Ford plan, of Owensboro, favors a plan which splits two northern Kentucky counties. The northern representatives would like to move a district east of Louisville, west, keeping northern Kentucky intact.

To further complicate matters, the opposing groups are using two different population figures. The Ford plan is based on the 1970 census figures, which placed Kentucky's population at 3,218,706. The northern Kentucky group, headed by Arthur Schmidt, a Republican from Cold Springs, bases its plan on a revised census total of 3,319,311.

Although the Ford plan has been reported favorably out of committee, if it passes, the courts may once again strike down Kentucky redistricting. At least Schmidt thinks so. A similar situation arose in Missouri in 1969. When figures used was an older population count than those in another plan, the court ruled against the adopted plan.

Supporters of the Ford plan, as should be expected, held most of the key positions in the House. More than likely his plan will pass, and the courts could very well strike it down. If this happens, it is possible to foresee at least one and possibly two more years of unequal representation in the Commonwealth.

How long the Federal courts will tolerate this inequality remains to be seen. The easy way out would seem to be for the General Assembly to pass the Schmidt plan, which provides little or no basis for a lawsuit against it. The people have the right to expect their lawmakers to forget regional and party interests for the good of the state.

If something isn't done soon to rectify the unequal representation in the state, the entire Commonwealth will suffer until the legislators do what they should have done in the first place; pass an equitable plan.

The exposure of the Anderson papers was not nearly as startling as the details of the Administration's decision-making processes in the India-Pakistan crisis. The disclosures were based on classified minutes of meetings of the Washington Special Action Group (WSAG) called together by Dr. Henry Kissinger. Columnist Jack Anderson said "I got the goods by prying the documents from U.S. government informants." According to Anderson, some of the boys in the Administration were also involved in leaking the information.

The exposure of the Anderson papers was not nearly as startling as the Pentagon papers, but they enforced the argument that the public should know what the president and Dr. Kissinger are up to. After all, they were the sole forces in favor of "tilting" U.S. influence in favor of Pakistan.

Embarrassment

The papers have been more of an embarrassment to the Administration than a security leak, because the government failed in its attempt to mislead the public concerning the India-Pakistan dilemma, something the government has done so often in the past. For the past year, the Administration has deceived the American public, the Indian government and numerous government officials and diplomats with a well publicized policy of neutrality regarding the India-Pakistan situation.

When Indira Gandhi, prime minister of India, visited the U.S. last Nov., she was received as an honored guest and was assured that the Administration "deeply understood" the problems her country faced.

Kenneth B. Keating, U.S. ambassador to India, was equally fooled by the What's Tricky Dicky Up To... No Good?

The old game of scooping a story right from under the noses of competing newspapers was replayed earlier this month when "The New York Times" began printing the Anderson papers well before any other paper. Perhaps the most surprised was "The Washington Post," the paper which carries Jack Anderson's "Washington Merry-Go-Round" column every day.

The Anderson papers are in short, detailed documents, classified "secret sensitive" (this designates that the information falls between secret and top secret) which provide some fascinating

Three Plays Scheduled For This Semester

Three plays are scheduled for the spring semester. A variety of types are in the offering for the productions will include a comedy, a children's play, and a musical. The first two plays will be directed and designed by students.

Neil Simon's "The Odd Couple", one of the most popular comedies of recent years, will be presented Feb. 17-19 and 22-26, in the Little Theatre in the Combs Building. The play concerns two recently divorced middle-aged men - one a fastidious neatnik, the other a devout slob - who share an apartment to economize.

Their personality clashes have been enacted by Walter Matthau and Art Carney on Broadway in 1965, by Matthau and Jack Lemmon in the 1968 movie version, and by Jack Klugman and Tony Randall in the current television series.

MSU's production of this comedy is being sponsored by Morehead Players and directed by Suzi Kinnison, who was seen last semester in "The Tempest" and "The Boy Friend".

"E" Rated Plan

The next production enters into the realm of fantasy. "The Unwicked Witch", to be seen March 9-11, tells the story of three wicked witches who capture a mortal girl and try to convert her into a witch. This play was written by Madge Miller and is being directed by Ruth Rase, a speech and drama major from Minford, Ohio. Ruth says that this show's appeal is not limited to children, that everyone will enjoy it regardless of age, that it is rated "E" for "Everybody".

Musical

The season will close with a show that has been heralded as "an enthralling, exquisite musical play." "Man of La Mancha" will be presented in Button Auditorium April 27-29. It concerns Miguel de Cervantes, an aging poet and playwright who assumes the identity of Don Quixote, a character whom he created in an unfinished novel, so as to explain himself and his attitude toward life to the Inquisition, and the judges, who are conducting a trial for his alleged offence against the Church. The show's score includes the popular "Impossible Dream". Dr. William J. Layne will direct, and Douglas Engelhardt will conduct the orchestra.

STUDY, STUDY, STUDY - Cathy Erwin doesn't let anything or anybody distract her as she studies.

Various Moods Created By Cincinnati Symphony

Concert Review

By GERRY BURCHETT

"I'd like to teach the world to play in perfect harmony." This might well be an appropriate theme song for Carmon DeLeone and the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra who gave an outstanding performance in concert Wednesday evening in Button Auditorium. Their show was perfectly harmonious from the presentation of their first selection to the last.

Among selections played were Mozart's "Overture to the Marriage of Figaro," Wagner's "Siegfried-Idyll," and a Ravel pavanne - a slow and solemn dance for "any dead child."

Although it is not accurate to say that the program consisted solely of mood or functional music, the audience did find themselves being carried through various moods. Many of the melodies were gay and spirited in mood while others, especially the pavanne, were at times sad and slow.

Along with the harmonious sound of the orchestra, the program was well organized and flowed smoothly from one selection to another.

Marie Speziale, trumpet player, deserves special recognition for her trumpet solo in Haydn's "Concerto for Trumpet and Orchestra in E-Flat Major." This is a delightful concerto and was superbly played.

A large crowd attended the concert and was warmly responsive to the selections played. As an encore the orchestra played a selection from Leonard Bernstein's "Fancy Free Ballet Suite."

'Fifty Prints ...' Exhibit On Display Through Feb. 27

An exhibit of "Fifty Prints by Fifty Printmakers" is on display in the Claypool-Young Gallery.

The prints are from the collection of William C. Estler, a native of West Virginia. The exhibition, organized by the Huntington Galleries of Huntington, W. Va., will be on display through Feb. 27.

The exhibit will be on tour throughout West Virginia, Eastern Kentucky and Southern Ohio this year.

Included in the collection are etchings, drypoints, lithographs, engravings, serigraphs and woodcuts. Artists of several nationalities are represented, including Picasso, Rodin, Grosz and Renoir.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m. through 5 p.m. weekdays and 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. The gallery is also open from 7 to 10 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday.

Tricky Dicky

Administration's so-called neutrality until mid 1971 when his recommendations regarding moral support for India were refused by the President. When Keating attempted to campaign publicly against the Nixon Administration's stand in favor of Pakistan, he was advised by Washington to keep silent.

Seeking Re-election

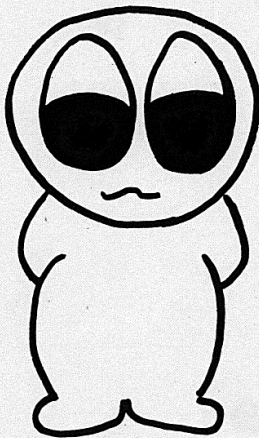

What was the Nixon Administration up to last year concerning India and Pakistan, and what is it up to now? The answer in both cases seems to be a concern that nothing interfere with plans for the upcoming trip to China, hoped to be the diplomatic coup that will help assure Nixon another term in the White House, since China also has opposed India in the Pakistan dispute.

No one can blame a man for wanting to be a two-term president. There is a certain amount of distinction attached to the title. You simply have to question the methods of dealing with international problems. Since the beginning of his term in office, Nixon's goals have continually fallen short of his promises for "a generation of peace," shown quite clearly in our recent loss of influence in India, the world's largest democracy.

Now that the people in this nation and other nations have a clear picture of how the Nixon Administration thinks, it will take some reassuring and skillful diplomacy to prove Richard Nixon's efforts are truly directed toward "bringing us together."

BOUNDING BUBBA - Bubba Abell leaps for a shot against Illinois State in a game won by MSU, 104-94. Abell, a 6-2 junior who plays guard and forward, is averaging six points a game as a valuable reserve for Coach Bill Harrell. "Bubba makes things happen out there," Harrell says. "He's a key man for us." The Eagles take their 5-4 record to Murray State this Saturday night.

Varsity Falls To Tech: Frosh Win Tournament

The MSU Basketball Eagles went down in defeat for their third conference loss Saturday night, as Henry White pumped in a last second jump shot which gave East Tennessee a 83-81 victory. This game left the Eagles tied with Austin Peay, Murray State, Middle Tenn., and East Tenn. with records of 3-2.

In Saturdays action the leading scorer was Leonard Coulter with 24. Following close behind was "Leaping" Eugene Lyons with 21. Other scorers were Howard Wallen 15, Bill Dotson 7, Ron Nicholson 6, Bubba Abell 6, and Lowell Ashby with 2.

In other conference battles Eastern swapped Tenn. Tech 101-93, Murray defeated Middle Tenn. 73-64, and Western topped Austin Peay 106-73. The Eagles next contest will be on their home grounds as the meet top ranked Eastern Ky. at the Laughlin Fieldhouse.

Frosh Team

A spirited rally on Friday night and a strong second half on Saturday night carried the MSU freshman basketball squad to the championship of last weekend's El Hasa Shrine Tournament. The Little Eagles, now 8-3 on the year, defeated Eastern Kentucky's frosh Friday, 87-80, and dropped Alice Lloyd in Saturday's title tilt, 105-93.

Arch Johnson, a 6-5 sharpshooter from Breathitt County, paced MSU with 34 points in the final game and had 23 in the first round. He also came up with 20 rebounds in two nights.

Johnson, Glenn Turner and Gene Frye were named to the all-tournament team. Frye, a 6-5 forward from Luray, Va., scored 30 points in the tourney and Turner, a 6-2 guard from McDowell, added 29.

Mark Hudson, the tallest MSU cager at 6-10, had 14 points and 13 rebounds against Eastern and 20 points and 12 rebounds against Alice Lloyd.

Coach Jack Black said he was pleased with the tournament championship but added that his yearlings did not play "as good as their potential." "We had a lot of ragged edges and our players know it," he said. "However, they had great courage and made two fine comebacks."

The win over Eastern came mainly on the strength of a late surge triggered by Larry Brown, a 6-1 guard from Hazel Green. He scored six points during MSU's 12 straight outburst which carried the Little Eagles from an eight-point deficit to a four-point lead in the space of three minutes.

A big factor in the championship game was the playmaking of 6-1 guard James Washington of Frankfort. He recorded nine assists, the team high for the year.

Steve Hamilton Returns To Pros Will Join Cubs

Chicago Cubs lefthander Steve Hamilton probably has the most unusual spring training reporting date in the major leagues.

Hamilton, a MSU faculty member in the off-season, recently signed for his 11th year in the majors.

The lanky southpaw originally was scheduled to report to Scotsdale, Ariz. on Feb. 22 but the Cub management gave him permission to wait until after the stock arrives in Morehead.

Mrs. Hamilton is expecting the couple's fourth child about Feb. 28.

Wrestlers Now 2 - 5 After Quadrangler Meet Rzymek Undefeated

By VERNON STAPLETON

MSU Wrestlers were unsuccessful in a four team meet at Dayton, Ohio, last Saturday. The team lost their first bout to Dayton by a 21-15 margin, and was defeated by Eastern 35-5. Their one bright spot in the three bout tournament was a 36-12 victory over Cedarville College.

Individual efforts were highlighted by Mick Rzymek, who won two bouts to remain undefeated in the 134 pound weight division. Vince Aiello won all three of his bouts in the 126 pound division, while Dave Bostleman and Steve Morgan won one of two bouts each.

The wrestling team expects to get stronger as the season progresses. Considering that four of the eight wrestlers on scholarships are disabled, they are holding their own. They now have a 2-5 record overall.

The wrestling team will be engaged in the Anderson College tournament at Anderson, Indiana this weekend.

49 Counties Involved In Evaluation Program

The School of Sciences and Mathematics is conducting a statewide evaluation and dissemination program with a grant from the Office of Education, part of the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

"Dr. J.F. Howell, Jr., director of the program says it is to "determine the needs of the people of Eastern Kentucky in evaluating education and to determine the level of satisfaction of knowledge."

The grant, OEG-0714590, started last July and will run 12 months. The program consists of four steps:

First, giving high school students the equivalent to an environmental awareness test.

Second, asking principals and superintendents in Eastern Kentucky what their needs are and what they are currently doing in environmental education.

Third, to conduct interviews with select citizens.

Finally, to mail out questionnaires to citizen groups about their attitudes and needs concerning environmental education.

"Once these facts have been gathered and evaluated, it will give the government a basis to plan further programs along this line," said Dr. Howell.

Assisting Dr. Howell in the program is John Drake. Drake received his Masters from Morehead State University and is the full-time field worker, conducting all the interviews. Martha Schafer is a research assistant.

The program includes 49 counties in eastern and south-central Kentucky and 911 schools within this area.

Alpha Beta Alpha Sponsors Book Drive

A book drive is being sponsored by Alpha Beta Alpha, the library science fraternity at MSU.

Books collected will be given to needy young people of Eastern Kentucky. The drive scheduled for Feb. 7-18 is aimed at collecting books for the 6-17 year old age group.

All books, no matter what condition, can be used. Collection boxes will be placed in dorms. The Education Building, Combs Building and the Adron Doran Student Center will also have collection boxes.

Debaters

the eventual winner after 12 rounds.

Morehead, the only Kentucky team in competition, was power-matched and power-protected after the first four rounds of debating. Miss Crusie and Mather defeated the tournament favorites enroute to the semi-finals. They debated teams from LSU, Rice, Henderson State, St. Bonaventure, Dartmouth, West Georgia, Georgia State, Dayton, Tennessee Tech, Southeast Louisiana, and Michigan State.

Asked about the most important aspect of the tournament Mather said "We put Morehead on the map. During the preliminaries people would ask us where we were from, but after that they quit asking and just cheered us on."

The results of this tournament should assure the team a berth in the VI regionals to be held this spring. The team, which has won three tournaments this year is coached by Mrs. G.C. Webb, assistant professor of speech. They were accompanied to New Orleans by Dr. John Kleber, history instructor at MSU.
