New Chapter of Flannery/Cox Saga Unfolds

By JOE LAMB

The sometimes fiery controversy between County Judge Executive W. C. Flannery and County Attorney John Cox was given more fuel this week when Judge Flannery issued a written, public statement about allegations made by Cox in response to earlier statements made by Flannery. All those claims and charges were made in articles appearing in The Morehead News.

In the statement released Wednesday, Flannery said his experience and long residence in the county made him more qualified to serve as county judge/executive than a person "who has not had this opportunity." Cox is not a life-long resident of Rowan County.

Flannery continued, "It is a proven record that Mr. Cox has missed numerous Fiscal Court meetings, well as being late to meetings. Also at times he has excused himself and left meetings before he would write a letter to me and the Fiscal Court telling us what he thought went wrong at the meeting, but before I received my letter, he presented the news media a copy of said letter, which in turn they (the media) would bring to me to read and comment on."

Flannery called that "harassment," a charge which Cox had denied last week in a public statement he had written. Flannery added, "We could not Mr. Cox cross the hall and talk to me personally. Why does Mr. Cox not attend all meetings of Fiscal Court or stay until they are over to properly advise the Fiscal Court? He draws $833.33 per day for one meeting a month, which is approximately $104 per hour, along with a free office for his private practice."

In his statement last week, Cox had said that if the Fiscal Court feels the same type harassment as Flannery, it should suggest that he (Flannery) consider retaining other counsel to represent Fiscal Court. Flannery expounded upon that, saying, "This would permit him (Cox) to devote all his time to private practice and District Court. The Fiscal Court could advertise for an attorney and instead of paying $10,000 per year might get one for less and save the county money."

Flannery continued, "In Mr. Cox's absence I must seek legal counsel from other attorneys in Rowan County at my own expense or call the attorney general of the state of Kentucky for legal opinions and advice, which I have on many occasions, and most of the time I have received a writing, which I have on file in my office to prove my point."

Crash Claims 12-Year-Old Rowan Girl

A 12-year-old Rowan County girl is dead and her mother and a sister are in St. Claire Medical Center following a two-vehicle collision four miles west of Morehead on Kentucky 22 Tuesday afternoon.

Tammy Jo Adams, a seventh grader at Tilden Hogue School, was killed when the car her mother was driving reportedly veered left of center on the road and was struck broadside by a car being driven by Dwight L. Brown, 48, of Rt. 2, Morehead.

Brown and Judy Adams, the girl's mother, were admitted to St. Claire Medical Center. Brown was later released but Mrs. Adams was listed in satisfactory condition at the hospital yesterday. Cheryl Adams, a passenger in the Adams vehicle, suffered for a moment but was not injured and was sent to the intensive care unit at the hospital.

According to the state police report of the accident, the Adams vehicle was southbound on KY 22 when Mrs. Adams attempted to brake to avoid hitting another slower moving vehicle in front of her. That car had swerved for a moment into the eastbound lane and was struck in the side by the Brown vehicle. Tammy is survived by her parents.

He added, "The attorney general's opinion is quite often contrary to Mr. Cox's advice to the Fiscal Court. I have a feeling Mr. Cox does not approve of me seeking outside counsel as he has referred to it but I do not know where I would receive any better advice than Burial will follow at the Adams Plank Cemetery.

City Poses Questions To HUD

By JOE LAMB

The city of Morehead, in a letter to Fred H. Porterfield, state director of Housing and Urban Development, has outlined its position on the proposed "Divide Hill housing situation."

In the letter, which was a follow-up to a meeting held with Porterfield in Morehead last week, the city poses four questions to HUD. The first is whether housing on the site would jeopardize the grant already approved for the Carl D. Perkins Community Facility Building on the site. The second is whether the number of housing units on the site from 71 to 50 would endanger that grant. If doing either of those things will hinder growth, would jeopardize any future grants the city might apply for, and if changing the housing designation from income to elderly housing, would it be more equitable to the present building.

The letter, signed by Mayor Travlon Jackson, says that since the council had to take a hard look at the site plan, it became apparent to us that the plan was completely untenable as a result of crowding. The plan did not have sufficient parking either to the housing units, or to the continuity of the building. The building was allotted only approximately 30 parking spaces, and the parking spaces allotted to the housing units were insufficient to meet the zoning requirements under our city ordinance.

The mayor said in the letter that the facilities building was in danger of becoming "white elephant" because it is not to serve from 250 to 300 people and would have been left with only 25 spaces under the site plan.

The mayor said that realization led the city with three alternatives, either eliminate the housing element, eliminate the facility building, or eliminate part of the housing development in order to provide more parking. The letter said that the city's first choice would have been to eliminate part of the housing, but concluded that it would not be economically feasible for a developer to reduce the number of units below 50. As to eliminating the building, the letter concluded that the building would be "of great benefit" to the low income and elderly housing occupants as well as the community in general, even if no housing is built. On the other hand, the letter stated that the city did not feel that eliminating the housing on the site altogether would be an "unreasonable consideration." The mayor said in the letter that the city's not building the housing would "not" eliminate other occupants from making applications for HUD housing funds.

Mayor Jackson ended the letter by saying that the city believed that the council had taken into account the needs of the existing site in any way change its priorities in desiring to have more low income and elderly housing in the city. We simply feel that both ends can be achieved without devoting all of the usable land on our present property to both a community facilities building and low income and elderly housing. But the mayor qualified that by saying that the city wanted to protect the grant for the community facilities building and would do "everything possible" within reason to protect that investment.

Mayor Jackson said in the letter that he had instructed the engineering firm of Maves, Sudberry and Eberhard to delay the bidding process for the facility building until next week.

Man Disrupts Court, Jumps Out Window

Think you got a little out of hand last Monday in Rowan District Court when man became distraught at the thought of being placed in detention?

According to District Judge James E. Clay, the man, Gary Carter, became upset when he ordered him to spend some time in Eastern State Hospital for psychiatric observation. Carter, who was before the court on charges of possession of a controlled substance and a public intoxication charge, reportedly became vulgar and profane in the courtroom. He then jumped out a rear window of the courtroom.

Carter was apprehended and placed in the hospital for observation at Eastern State. After 48 hours, the doctors said that he was fit and he was transferred to Meta's Detention Center at Lexington.

Judge Clay said he and the prosecutor, County Attorney John Cox, did not think the man was "in a state of mind" to appear before the court Friday because he had cut his wrists the night before, while in jail and he recommended that he be given psychiatric evaluation.

The man now will also face Circuit Court charges which were under probation on a 12 month sentence.

Tourism . . . What Will Morehead Offer?

By JOE LAMB

Near its 10th year of existence, the Morehead-Recreation, Tourism and Convention Commission has begun to move up for the ambitious task of promoting the city and the area. . . . Commission Chairman Gatty Bishop said that the commission had been criticized in the past for not doing enough. He said that what the commission was actually doing was accumulating enough money to do some worthwhile things.

Bishop explained that the first few years the commission did not really have enough money to do some of the bigger things, so the commission members decided to let the money build up until they had enough.

Among those bigger things is a list of several projects the commission would like to accomplish. That list is broken down into short-range and long-range projects that the commission "definitely wants to do" and projects that are still in the preliminary "thinking stage."

The biggest long-range project is a proposed "tourist center" or facility. Bishop envisioned that the site will be near the interstate and will house numerous pamphlets and maps about sites in the area. He hopes that the facility eventually will have a full time staff and perhaps a miniature museum or display on Morehead. The idea is still in the beginning stages but the commission has designated a sinking fund or reserve in its budget for the building.

Among the short-range ideas is a full color brochure on the area that is already at the printers. About 100,000 of the leaflets will be distributed through very selective means in an effort to reach those people who would be most influential in bringing additional visitors to the area.

Bishop points out that tourism is one of the leading industries in the state of Kentucky and that Morehead has just as much to offer as any other part of the state. If it is competitive enough to try to draw people to the area.

In addition to the brochure, maps and guides to the city and surrounding attractions are also being developed. Those maps will be smaller than the brochure and will be only two color instead of full color. Bishop said that the maps would be available, particularly in telling people where to go once they get to Morehead.

Other short-range projects include a car litter bag/travel packet which will contain a variety of information about the area. Bishop said that the litter bag will do a dual purpose, first of all, it will be an advertisement itself and, secondly, it will be a vehicle for distributing the brochures, maps and other pamphlets of information. Again, Bishop said those materials "would be placed in the hands of the people who will do something with them." He said that the materials would be circulated at travel shows, which attract travel agents and at motels, hotels and other outlets.

Other projects are already well into the planning stage and should become a reality before summer. One of those is an Outdoor Writers Conference which is expected to draw writers from across the state and the country to show them what Morehead has to offer in the way of outdoor recreation. Fishing and hunting, that conference is scheduled for May 18-19-20. Bishop hopes that the writers will be very influential in bringing people to the area. About that same time, the commission hopes to capitalize on an annual fishing clinic at Cave Run spring.

Among the things which are still in the preliminary thinking stage are an outdoor theatre and a sound/slide program with pictures and narration about places to visit and narration area. In addition, a Morehead State University art class and Dr. Bill Booth have been working on a logo for Morehead. Once that is developed, Bishop hopes to use it on everything pertaining to promoting the Morehead area.

As would be expected, most of the projects are beyond the scope of a one-time basis. In order to help implement the programs and see them through, the commission had taken on a contract with Reed Buchanan, a real estate agent and long-time salesman who has had experience in promotion. He is also a member of the commission.

Bishop explained that Buchanan would be responsible for seeing that projects are followed through and will act as director for the commission, even though he is on a six-month service contract and is not an employee. The other members of the seven-person commission will each work on various projects and report to Buchanan.

The commission itself operates on an annual budget from the city. The money comes from the city's transient room tax or hotel-motel tax which traditionally has been shared on 55-45 percent basis by the city. Presently, the commission has about $4,000 which represents an accumulation of funds over the three years it has been in existence as well as interest obtained from investing the funds.

Bishop believes that the anticipated growth in tourism that the commission will spur will benefit the area as a whole and the industry would. He is an avid angler.

Council To Hold Third Meeting Of Week Tonight

The Morehead City Council is to meet today (Friday) for the third time this week in an extraordinary session.

The first two meetings were held for the purpose of interviewing applicants for the position of city administrator, a job which had been vacant since Don Evans resigned the post in January.

Due to what was called a misapprehension, the first of the meetings, held Monday night, was called with less than three hours notice to members of the council. As a result, the gathering was called as an informal session with the council taking no action and the members not getting paid, because no attendance record was made by the city clerk. During the course of that meeting, the City Council interviewed a total of four applicants for the position of city administrator. Two more applicants were interviewed in the second session held Tuesday night. Notice of that meeting was given to the press at 7 p.m. Monday night.

During the Tuesday night session, the council set the third meeting of the week for tonight (Friday) at 6 o'clock. During that time, the council members will interview any remaining applicants for the position, decide on a bid for the city's new fire truck and discuss the Divide Hill housing situation. If a response is received from Fred H. Porterfield, state director of Housing and Urban Development, to a letter sent him by the city, use additional story, this page.

CRPI Meets, Pays Bills

Making use of a $124,000 check received from Gov. Julian Carroll's office through Area Development Fund, the City of Rowan Properties Inc. voted Tuesday night to pay the December mortgage payment to the Martindale Building.

The payment was for $17,500.66 which represents $91,000 in principal and eight percent annual interest. In another funding matter, the corporation members voted to pay Budget Lewis Insurance Agency a bill for $338, which represents a binder for two months written by that company.

The corporation, which is the holding company for the Martindale Building, had postponed payment of the bill at an earlier meeting because of a mistake in whether or not it had actually requested a policy from that insurance agency. Another insurance policy with a different company has now been taken out.

In other action, the holding company voted to meet with Associated Designers of Lexington, the architects for the renovation of the building, and discuss plans for getting it ready to house county offices. The meeting will be held next Monday night at 7 p.m. Part of the balance of the $124,000 check will be used to pay the architect's fee.

Morehead Men Arrested In Burglary Incident

Three Morehead men have been arrested and charged in connection with a Sunday night break-in at the Richard White Lumber Co. on Rowan Street.

The trio appeared before District Judge James E. Clay Wednesday and were ordered to return for an examining trial on Wednesday, March 22. Two of the men, Jimmy Whit, 18 of 175 Creek Road, and Marlon Norris, 21 of Triplet-Ave., were charged with knowingly receiving stolen property and the third, Danny Norris was charged with third degree burglary.

The men are accused with entering the lumber company office either Sunday night or Monday morning through a window and taking a chain saw, a lumber binder and tool box full of tools. The items were valued at over $200.

According to Morehead Police Chief

Mike Hall, Danny Norris was stopped on drunk-driving charge Monday night and the discovery of some pills on the floor of the car lead to a search of the car and the locating of the alleged stolen property.

The men were lodged in jail in lieu of $2,300 bond with $300 cash terms Monday night. On the advice of counsel, Judge Clay reduced the cash requirement to $100 during Wednesday hearing.

Cowed? Who? Me? Never! I'm leading the boy's resolution to eradicate that word from the English language. It's pure discrimination against a proud and noble species — not easily overruled by anything — especially a camera. If it weren't for these bars, I'd get a closer look. (Staff Photo)

Title I Changes To Be Discussed

FRANKFORT — Changes in the Elementary and Secondary Education Act and how these changes affect Title I programs will be the subject of meetings held by the Kentucky Department of Education during February.

The meetings are being held to give advance notice of the changes in the law which do not go into effect until July 1, according to Don Hart, Director of the division of compensatory education.

Workshops will be held in April to help local school districts facilitate the changes in Title I programs.

Local school district superintendents and Title I coordinators are asked to attend the meeting most convenient to them to discuss present advisory council requirements and state verification information and regarding needs assessment, evaluation and target areas.

Meetings begin at 9 a.m. Monday, Feb. 26, at Lake Barkley Lodge near Cadiz. Tuesday, Feb. 27, at Barren River Lodge near Lucas and Wednesday, Feb. 28, at the Kentucky Horse Park near Lexington.

Title I is the largest federal aid to education program and provides approximately 10 percent of federal funds to local

To All Rowan County Property Owners

The tax rolls will be open from Jan. 1, 1979 to March 1, 1979 for the purpose of listing your 1979 Tax Liabilities for the year of 1979. It is your Responsibility and Privilege to list your property K.R.S. 132.96(1).

If you have added improvements or new construction or made a change of any kind during 1978, we need a current update as of January 1, 1979.

You need to list all your Mobile Homes, Watercraft, any commercial or Intangibles, etc. that apply to you.

This is to prevent possible omitted bills and penalties being levied.

If you will reach your 65th birthday during 1979 and own and inhabit property as your personal residence, stop by the office and file an application to see if you qualify for the Homestead Exemption. This must be done during Jan. 6 & Feb. 1979.

Thanks for your cooperation

Give 'em a shot in the arm.

Children can still get such serious preventable childhood disease as polio, measles, whooping cough, lockjaw and diphtheria. Yet, many children have not been getting the shots they need to be protected from them.

What about your children? Have they had all their shots? If not, don't you be sure, check with your doctor. Letting your kids go unprotected is an unnecessary risk to their health.

At Blue Cross and Blue Shield and Delta Dental of Kentucky, we're concerned about giving health care costs. That's why we're working with community doctors and hospitals to find ways to hold down costs down.

You can help by taking care of yourself! Saving health is the best kind of health care—and the least expensive.

Write us for information on enrolling in quality health care programs. Plans for a free booklet on childhood (that's you, too!) "Childhood Booklet" at the following address: Blue Cross and Blue Shield and Delta Dental of Kentucky, 9001 Leno Station Rd., Louisville, KY 40223.

How To Read And Understand The Bible

This is one of a series of chapters from the 16 volume "How To Read And Understand The Bible" by William C. Clay, Jr. Mr. Clay is a member of the board of directors of The Morehead News, Inc. The author is an attorney and a corporate executive in banking, communications, manufacturing, land development, mining and oil exploration. He is a graduate of Dr. Phillips College and Yale Law School and holds an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Transylvania University in recognition of "his leadership in church and community, his accomplishments as a legal profession, his dedication to education of youth, and his useful service to Transylvania as its counsel and as a member of its Executive Committee."

He explained that after losing his arm he realized that he would have to go to school and learn an occupation to support himself. After losing his boys he had begun to take an interest in scouting and in the end had found himself with hundreds of boys instead of two. As for losing his money in a bank failure, that, too, had a purpose.

"When I lost my money, I learned who my friends were, what a wonderful wife I had and how much I loved her."

"And the cancer, how was this turned into a blessing?"

"In a way this was the hardest blow of all, he said. "One of the greatest joys of my life was to sing. . . . Then the grim news - no more singing, ever. I came very near giving up."

"I can't see how this laryngectomy has been turned into good. I have taught this same voice procedure to others."

How did he obtain this kind of faith? He and his wife both remember the passage from Hebrews: "For whom the Lord works He chooses." "Almost as in answer," he said.

"I would see the suffering in Jesus' eyes as He looked down on [His] tormentors from His Cross. And then I began to see that I was through His suffering that Jesus means so much to the world. And as He did in His big way, so could I learn to do in my small way."

Well, after a while I stopped feeling sorry for myself. My prayers began to focus more on others. Roger began to take more of an interest in the church. And I was thrilled to discover the great reservoir of faith power he had. Without it, we never would have made it together."

How can you achieve this indomitable faith? The Book of Hebrews had the answer:

God has said:

"I will in no wise fail thee. Neither will I in any wise forsake thee."

We, therefore, can confidently say:

"The Lord is my helper, I will not fear. What shall man do unto me?"

William C. Clay, Jr. Member of the Board of Directors

Delta Natural Gas Rates Increasing

The Kentucky Public Service Commission has approved an increase in rates for Delta Natural Gas Co. of Winchester because of the rising cost of wholesale natural gas. The increase, effective Jan. 1, amounts to $1.17 annually. Under the new monthly rates, customers will pay $4.99 for the first 1,000 cubic feet of gas, $2.74 per 1,000 cubic feet for the next 9,000 cubic feet and $2.47 per 1,000 cubic feet for all over 10,000 cubic feet.

GADD Monthly Meeting Slated

New Offutt Novel Coming Next Month

A new book should be on the shelves by the end of March from local author Andrew Offutt. The novel, "The Iron Lords," is the first in a three-part series entitled, "The War Among The Gods On The Earth." The book will be published by Jove Books (formerly Pyramid) and will be paperback. Offutt said that, although he has not started writing it yet, the second book should be ready for publication by December of this year. Offutt said that the novel is a heroic fantasy, combining science fiction and fantasy. He said that it was "a bit ambitious because I used some heavy characterizations." He added that the protagonist, Jarik, had an associative or split personality. The book will contain five illustrations by a 21-year-old artist, Rod Whigham, from Thomaston, Ga. Offutt said that after he met the artist and saw his work, he carried some of it to New York with him and helped Whigham land his first professional assignment. Offutt has written 17 novels and says that he now has contracts for seven unwritten books. He said that his latest novel probably will be carried locally by Larry's Book and Read and the Drummer Boy, both in Morehead.

Drama Festival Stated Saturday

Morehead State University is hosting a regional junior high and high school drama festival Saturday, Feb. 23, beginning at 9 a.m. at the Little Theatre in the Combs Building. Nutrition Education Funds To Be Offered

FRANKFORT - More than half a million dollars in federal nutrition education funds will be made available to local school districts in Kentucky over the next two years, according to Wendell Cave of the bureau of instruction to the Kentucky Department of Education.

The funds are being made available through the Child Nutrition Act upon approval of the department's annual program plan for nutrition education by the U.S. Department of Education.

In order to be eligible local school districts must send a delegation of personnel to one of several nutrition education workshops planned for July, Cave said.

Each group will consist of two elementary teachers, a middle school teacher, two school food service directors and a school administrator.

Members will receive two graduate credits or continuing education units for attending the workshops, as well as mileage, tuition and per-diem expense.

About 150 persons will receive training in promoting nutrition education in their schools.

A workshop will be held at each state university and local school district personnel may select the workshop they want to attend.

Deadlines for applications are March 15, but priority will be given to earliest applications. For applications or further information, schools may contact Wendell Cave or Mickey Harrison, Bureau of Instruction, Department of Education, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Workshops On Elderly Services

One-day workshops on services for the elderly are being conducted by Morehead State University in West Liberty, Mt. Sterling and Morehead.

Workshops are scheduled from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 27, at the West Liberty Senior Citizens Center, Wednesday, Feb. 28, at the Mt. Sterling Senior Citizens Center and Thursday, March 1, at the First Christian Church in Morehead.

Dr. Howard Nesbit, professor of health, physical education and recreation will be the instructor.

The programs presented by MSU's School of Social Science and Center for Aging Studies, are open to persons interested in developing skills to serve the elderly.

HEW Policy Could Alter College Athletic Programs

Ambiguous Guidelines Cloud Title IX

By MARK PEARSON Sports Editor

Five years ago, the United States government, whose regulations touch on virtually every aspect of our life, decided to regulate intercollegiate athletics and eliminate sex discrimination. Today there isn't an athletic director or college president who understands exactly how to comply with these regulations, or how they will affect college athletics as they are today.

What has college administrators alarmed is the movement toward budget-cutting for women's sports according to Title IX. In 1972 Congress passed an amendment making it clear that Title IX applied to intercollegiate athletics.

The 1974 amendment also said that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the federal agency in charge of making policy in this area, should make "reasonable provisions" considering the nature of the particular sport. College athletic directors look that to mean that football and basketball were exempt because in most cases they are the only revenue-producing sports.

Under an interpretation last December, however, HEW ruled that was not the case, and per capita expenditures for female athletes would have to be increased next fall to levels virtually equal to those for men.

In addition a number of NCAA institutions have joined together to organize an effort to alter personally HEW Secretary Joseph Califano to modify the regulations or persuade Congress to change the law. Schools such as the University of Kentucky, Notre Dame, Purdue and Ohio State have hired Ed Dellhart, a Washington public relations man, to be their representative.

Dellhart said in the Courier Journal on Feb. 20 that the policy as drafted would force colleges to choose between adding men's minor sports or scaling sports, such as football and basketball. Morehead State University athletic director Sonny Moran agrees with Dellhart's statement of some of the college presidents thought they might have to do to eliminate some of the men's minor sports and I think that's the choice they are going to make over scaling down the major sports that bring in all the revenue.

1. More state funds, which is unrealistic because most of us are fighting budgetary problems already and I think that the state is going to step in and be the cure-all is unrealistic. 2. More state receipts. All of us at this level of competition have done as well as we can possibly do to try to improve gate receipts, because obviously we need the money and for years we've had promotions anything that would help.

3) Increase student fees. MSU is doing all it feels it can give to athletics out of big student fees. Some schools are considering raising the student fee, but that would open another can of worms because there are always some students on every school who don't go to the events and even resent having to pay in the first place.

4) Raise outside money. We are doing that through the Eagle Athletic Foundation but there is a limit on how much you can raise in a town under 10,000.

The most logical way is to water down the men's program. MSU's women athletic coordinator Laraborn Brown also agreed with Dellhart's statement to a degree. I think that's what some of the college presidents thought they might have to do to eliminate some of the men's minor sports and I think that's the choice they are going to make over scaling down the major sports that bring in all the revenue.

5) Brown thinks a great number of schools have been making a big effort to bring their women's programs up to compliance with discrimination. She believes that most of the colleges that are negative about the regulations are the big football schools. I feel like because improvements have come so far in such a short period of time that I think we are within a span where they can include a transfer student who is sitting out a year and establishing eligibility. And what about people who are redshirted because of injury? Moran feels that at the present time, and unless HEW changes the policy it is up to the individual institution to determine what its constitution is.

6) The intercollegiate government is, in the proposed policy interpretation, permits higher education institutions to measure the number of participants in intercollegiate athletics by any non-discriminatory method.

7) Possible consequences. During last month's NCAA convention, Moran called out a 77 page document was written from a round table discussion with athletic directors. When asked what the bottom line was, he said that the athletic directors want to know what would happen if a year from now somebody reports a college as being out of compliance with Title IX, what the next step would be. The lawyers could only speculate, but he felt that HEW and the office of civil rights would come in and look at the violations. If that had been an oversight, or a misinterpretation, they might grant a number of years to come under compliance. If they thought the violations were a blatant attempt to circumvent Title IX, they would be more severe.

8) Women's Scholarships Started in 1976. Moran likes to think that MSU was ahead of its time in appropriating money for women's sports. The first year came here in 1974, the total operating budget for women athletics was $2,500. The budget was always prepared for the next year before.

9) Moran said that was the first time scholarship money offered and it represented an increase of nearly 700 percent from the year before.

10) The point I'm trying to make continues Moran, as we don't need the federal government, HEW or anyone else to tell us what we rightfully should be doing for our women. Now there are some schools in our conference which I don't mention, who wanted until they were forced to do something, and they took the attitude that they weren't going to do anything until they were forced to. Well, I think it's obvious that for the past four years we have been improving our women's athletic programs.

11) We like to think we are ahead of our time. We have written a position paper asked HEW to stress that point. We are asking HEW instead of demanding certain things, to please look at those of us that have been conscientious attempting to do what is fair all along.

12) We certainly didn't need federal funds. The way he does coming off the field. Trent also showed a lot of respect for the "improving Eagles." It was a tough encounter, he understated. They are getting used to the big kids. The officials tell 'em play, and it was like Muhammad Ali against Ted Spivey.

13) Trent played his starting five from wire to wire in a top of endurance. May was the scoring leader with 19 points. Moore poured in 14 Tony McKelvey added 12. Havenscraft had 14 and Braugher ended with eight.

14) Braugher again put up a valiant effort, but faltered in the fourth quarter and Tony McKelvey poured in 14 points by deceiving 65.4 percent. The Eagles led Fairview 18-9 at one point in the second period, but the Eagles returned back in the last two minutes of the first half to beat them since they gave us only eight points.

15) The Lady Eagles have another riveting game in Wednesday night's game. Soberly missing from the MSU line-up was senior forward Michelle Stoney, who did not make the trip due to the death of her father. More than anything else, the Lady Eagles wanted to win for their absent teammate.

16) We're like a family and when there is a death in someone's family, it affects an entire family and everyone looks up to her. We played this game for her. The Lady Eagles, on the other hand, were out to prove their last victory was no accident.

17) For most of the first half, it seemed as if the Lady Eagles were pulling ahead by as much as eight. But MSU came back at the end of the half and took a 38-35 lead at 1:30. The Lady Eagles held the advantage most of the second half and were seven points up at the end of the game.

East Carter Wins; W. Carter Upsets Fleming

By TED SLOAN Sports Writer

East Carter has won a pair this week. In preparation for its contest tonight against Rowan County while Lewis County fell twice to strong opposition, and West Carter, upending Fleming County in a thriller.

The Raiders defeated Menier County Tuesday night, then eked out a 30-33 win over Lewis County Wednesday in a game that didn't leave East County barbie haker too happy. "We didn't play that well," he analyzed. "We were not that enthusiastic at all. Lewis County had something to do with that. They played hard. Lewis County was 19 out of 25 on free throws, because we were just standing around and hunking. We didn't do a good job on the offensive rebounds, and we were outshouted throughout the season."

East Carter now stands 11-12, and tonight will play a game on University Basketball. The Eagles have been troubled by youth and inexperience this season, but Coach Coach Jimmy Webb refuses to write tonight's game off as a breather. "We respect Breck. We're not overlooking them one bit," he said. "They have two or three boys who are coming along, and they have some size. It'll be a challenge to us."

They have a young team that has taken 21 games this year," he went on. "I know Breck will be a rebound in the next year or two."

Both County met with powerful Mason County last night. Powell County provides the opposition for Gary Taylor's club tonight. "They're young and they're playing pretty decent lately. Taylor said about Powell County. They just don't tap two corners, so they're in a rebuilding year. Anytime you go to Powell County, it's tough. It's a survival, if it's all right."

"Playing back-to-back may take some out of us," he continued. "It'll be interesting to see how we adjust by tournament time."

percent, as obviously we didn't do something right defensively. You have to give West Carter all the credit, though. They did what they had to do to win. We gave them some help in the last few minutes."

Although Fleming County guarded every bit as accurately from the field as the Comets, Gold had some home to pick about his offensive game. "I was not pleased with the way we shot the ball, but there's always room for improvement. We didn't go inside the key, we could have. We hit only three of seven free throws, while they were 13 of 16. That's a big difference, and that's partially because we didn't go inside like we could have."

Southgate David Kiser led the Comets with 22 points. Jack Mitchell paced the Panthers, also with 22. Fleming County's visit to Lewis County will be broadcast on WKYC via FM 3.20 airtime.

MSU's Charlie Clark held himself in an unusual position after a slam dunk last Saturday night, but had no place to land. This was called for charging into Trent's Pat Kunnappel after the shot. The play came with 1:33 left in the game won by Morehead 109-79. Staff Photo

Powers E. Carter And Rowan Square Off

By TED SLOAN Sports Writer

Rowan County's matchup with East Carter at Hillsboro tonight figures to be the area's most interesting contest.

Both are rated in the top five in the 13th Region this week. Fairview and Ashland are led for first. The two have split a pair of previous meetings, the Vikings edging East out in the final game of the Eastern Kentucky Conference Tournament in December before, the Raiders turned the trick on Rowan County in Morehead a week later. And both teams are just a little hungry.

East Carter has dropped off a bit lately, while Rowan County has been on an up-and-down year long.

In a chat earlier this week, Vikings coach Ted Trent expressed his respect for the Raiders. "They're getting their big kid back," he said, referring to a senior Rick Tackett, who was injured in the last meeting between the two teams. "They've really improved since the last time they beat us."

The Vikings' 71-70 victory over Morgan County Wednesday night left Trent with superlative praise. "It was a bruiser," he said. "It was a slants. We fought all night. It was a beautiful game. As physical as I've ever seen."

Trent says general as usual in handing out praise, but he did concede to two particular individuals. "Bart Braugher's floor play right now is super," he said of the junior guard. "His leadership is real good. He's doing so much on defense and running old offense. He's a big difference."

"John Stimpner has personally won two games for us with his play. He's got 23 to go. Braugher led out, so we brought John up off the bench, and he came up with a six-point play. I've never seen anything like it out of a player."

Nutrition Education Funds To Be Offered

FRANKFORT — More than half a million dollars in federal nutrition education funds will be made available to local school districts in Kentucky over the next two years, according to Wendell Cave of the bureau of instruction in the Kentucky Department of Education.

The funds are being made available through the Child Nutrition Act upon approval of the department's annual program plan for nutrition education by the U.S. Department of Education.

In order to be eligible local school districts must send a delegation of personnel to one of several nutrition education workshops planned for July, Cave said.

Each group will consist of two elementary teachers, a middle school teacher, two school food service directors and a school administrator.

Members will receive two graduate credits or continuing education units for attending the workshops, as well as mileage, tuition and per diem expenses.

About 1,000 persons will receive training in providing nutrition education in their schools.

A workshop will be held at each state university and local school district personnel may select the workshop they want to attend.

Deadlines for applications is March 15, but priority will be given to earliest applications. For applications or further information, schools may contact Wendell Cave or Mickie Hudson, Bureau of Instruction, Department of Education, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

HEW Policy Could Alter College Athletic Programs

Ambiguous Guidelines Cloak Title IX

By MARK PERRINS

First In Series

Five years ago, the United States government, whose regulations touch on virtually every aspect of American life, decided to regulate intercollegiate athletics and eliminate sex discrimination. Today there isn't an athletic director or college president who understands exactly how to comply with these regulations or how they will affect college athletics as they are today.

What has college administrators alarmed, is the movement toward budget parity. In 1982 Congress passed a law banning sex discrimination in federally financed programs. Two years later, Congress passed an amendment making it clear that Title IX applied to intercollegiate athletics. The 1974 amendment also said that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the federal agency, should make "reasonable provisions considering the nature of the particular sport." College athletic directors look that to mean that football and basketball were exempt, because in most cases they are the only revenue producing sports.

Under an interpretation last December, however, HEW ruled that was not the case, and per capita expenditures for female athletes would have to be equal to those for men. Critics say this will drain athletic budgets, thereby endangering men's sports programs. The two major associations regulating intercollegiate athletics at four-year institutions are the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) and the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA). The AIAW has not yet taken a formal position on the interpretations, but the association appears to be prepared to accept the interpretations with additional specificity. Quite the reverse is true with the NCAA, which has adopted by an overwhelming vote at its recent annual meeting, a resolution that opposes the per capita equality principle. In addition, a number of NCAA institutions have joined together to organize an effort to either persuade HEW Secretary Joseph Califano to modify the regulations or persuade Congress to change the law. Schools such as the University of Kentucky, Notre Dame, Purdue and Ohio State have contributed $5,000 each to the effort. They have hired Ed DeHart, a Washington public relations man, to be their representative.

DeHart said, in the Courier-Journal on Feb. 20, that the policy as drafted would force colleges to choose between ending men's minor sports or scaling down expensive, but profitable major sports, such as football and basketball.

Morehead State University athletic director Sonny Moran agrees with DeHart. "I think at most schools it's going to require some adjustment in the men's program," he added. "What if the bulk of it were five ways to comply with Title IX?"

"I have state funds, which are unrealistic because most of us are already fighting budgetary problems already and to think that the state is going to step in and be the cure-all is unrealistic."

"More gate receipts. All of us at this level of competition have done this all we can possibly do to try to improve gate receipts, because obviously we need the money and for years we've had promotions, anything that would help."

"Increase student fees. MSU is going all it feels it can give to athletes out of the student fee. Some schools are considering raising the student fee, but that would open up another can of worms because there are always some students on every campus who don't go to the events and even resent having to pay in the first place."

"Raise outside money. We are doing that through the Eagle Athletic Foundation but there is a limit on how much you can raise in a town under 100,000."

"The most logical way is to water down the men's program."

MSU's athletic coordinator Laranabee Brown also agreed with DeHart's statement, to a degree. "I think that a what some of the college presidents thought they might have to do to eliminate some of the men's minor sports and I think that's the choice they are going to make over scaling down the major sports that bring in all the money and I think that would be unfair because it would mean that women would be within a school where the men couldn't," Brown said.

Brown thinks a great number of schools have been making a big effort to bring their women's programs up and do away with discrimination. She believes that most of the colleges that are negative about the regulations are the big football schools. "I feel like most schools will be able to comply because improvements have come so far in such a short period of time that I think we can win a situation where we can comply," she added.

Women Scholarships Started to 1976

Moran likes to think that MSU is ahead of its time in approving scholarships for women. The first women's year 4 game here in 1974, the total operating budget for women's athletics was $2,500. The budget was already prepared for the next year before I arrived and it was $3,000. For the 1975-76 year, the women's budget jumped to $4,500," Moran said. That was by the time scholarships were offered and it represented an increase of nearly 70 percent from the year before.

"I'm trying to make the federal government, as we didn't need the federal government, HEW or anyone else to tell us what is rightfully should be for our women. Now there are some books in our conference, which I won't mention, who waited until they were forced to do something, and they had the attitude that they weren't going to do anything until they were forced to. Well, I think it's obvious that for the past four years we have been trying to bring our women's athletic programs

"We like to think we are ahead of our time. We have written a position paper to HEW trying to stress that point. We asked them instead of demanding certain things, to please look at those of us that have been conscientious about Title IX and that we've fair all along, and we certainly didn't need federal legislation to give us an incentive to be fair with our women. Our bone of contention comes in that the government has asked us almost overnight. Moran notes that it was really three years, but three years is a relatively small amount of time when one considers that Morehead is a young school to give our women programs equal funding. Look how long it's been to build our men's program up."

Actually the new Title IX interpretation doesn't require dollar for dollar equal funding but equal, dollar equal per capita basis. That means for example if a college has three times as many men athletes as women, it can spend $100,000 on the men and $30,000 on the women and be in complete compliance.

Vague Interpretation

According to Moran, even the updated Title IX interpretation is "very, very vague." The formula for calculating budget parity is: take the men's budget and divide it by the number of participants for the men. The men's per capita figure is then multiplied by the number of female participants that bring in all the dollars, the college has to come up with the money to equal it. Moran estimates that Morehead would have to come up with between $100,000 and $125,000, and he says the question arises where a college president could come up with that kind of money.

"The problem begins with the definition of 'participant.' Does it mean just the players on scholarship? Is it the NCAA squad list, which includes all athletes? Does it include a transfer student, who is sitting out a year and establishing 'eligibility?' And what about people who are redshirted because of injuries?"

Moran feels that at the present time, and unless HEW changes the policy, it is up to the individual institution to determine what constitutes a participant. The terminology the government uses is, "the proposed policy's interpretation of 'participant' is the number of participants in intercollegiate athletics by any non-discriminatory method."

Possible Consequences

During a last month's NCAA convention at San Francisco a 77 page document was written from a round table discussion with athletic directors. When asked what the bottom line of the report was, Moran replied, "The athletic directors wanted to know what would happen if a year, which is not in compliance with Title IX, what the best step would be. The lawyers could say the office of civil rights would come in and look at the violations. If they felt it had been an oversight, or a misinterpretation, they might give us a compliance. If they thought the violations were a blatant attempt to circumvent Title IX."

MSU - Eastern Tip-off Changed To 1:30

The tip-off time for tomorrow's crucial OVC game between Morehead and Eastern has been changed to 1:30 because of television. The Eagles need a victory Saturday in order to qualify for the OVC tournament next week at Eastern.

East Carter Wins; W. Carter Upsets Fleming

By TED SLOAN
Sports Writer

East Carter has won a pair this week in preparation for its contest tonight against Rowan County while Lewis County had to lose to strong opponent West Carter suspended Fleming County in a thriller.

The Raiders defeated Menifee County Tuesday night, then edged out 70-63 in a game that didn't leave East coach Charles Baker too happy. "We didn't play that well," he analyzed. "We were not that enthusiastic at all. Lewis County had something to do with that," they played hard. Lewis County was 19-0 at 25 on free throws, because we were just standing around and backing. We didn't do a good job on the offense rebounds, and we were outrebounded 33-23. We just are not concentrating here in the latter stages of the season.

Two players provided almost all of the Raiders' scoring. Ted Carter edged in 28 points, and Eric Shulerberger followed with 17. East Carter will enter tonight's game against the Vikings with a 14-0 mark. The Lions clinched a tough week of basketball tonight with a game against Fleming County. The East Carter legend an 80-65 defeat at the hands of Maxwellville Lewis County stand 7-14 on the season.

The Panthers have seen the Lions already, and Coach Joe Dan Gidd of Fleming County expects a pretty tough matchup. "We beat them by 18 or 19," he said. "But the game was a lot closer than that. Anyone you go on the road, it's a tough challenge, at least for us in Lewis County is a big rivalry for us. We're not good enough to just show up and win. We have to play hard."

The Panthers will take a 12-7 record into action after a heart-breaking 71-69 loss to West Carter. Tuesday evening, Gidd pointed to his team's defense as a weak spot in that game. "I felt like from our standpoint, I wasn't pleased with the way we played during all night," West Carter shot 84 percent so obviously we didn't do something right defensively. You have to give West Carter all the credit, though. They did what they had to do. We gave them some help in the last few minutes.

Although Fleming County gambled every bit as accurately from the field as the Panthers, Gidd had some bones to pick about his offensive game. "I was real pleased with the way we shot the ball, but there's always room for improvement. We didn't go inside the way we could have. We hit only three of seven free throws, while they hit 13-0. That's a big difference, and that's what we have to do. We're not particularly because we didn't go inside like we could have."

Southgate David Kiser led the Comet charge with 22 points. Jackie Mitchell scored the Panthers, also 22.

Fleming County's visit to Lewis County will be broadcast on WKYC on F.M. 7 in a 9:30 p.m. broadcast.

West Carter now stands 11-12, and tonight will play a call on University track infield. The Eagles have been troubled by youth and inexperience this season, but Comet Coach Jimmie Webb refuses to let tonight's game off as a consolation prize. "We respect Brock, we're not overlooking them one bit," he said. "They have these boys who are coming along, and they're having some size inside. It'll be a tough test for us. We haven't played very well on the University level."

"They have a young team that has taken its lumps this year," he said. "But I know Brock will be an rebound in the next year or two."

Both County last night Powell County provides the opposition for Gary Taylor's club tonight. "They're young and they're playing pretty decent lately," Taylor said about Powell County. "They lost their top two scorers, so they're in a rebuilding year. Anyone you go to Powell County, it's tough. If we survive, it'll be all right."

"Playing back-to-back may take some out of us," he continued. "It'll be interesting to see how we adjust by tournament time."

Powers E. Carter And Rowan Square Off

By TED SLOAN
Sports Writer

Rowan County's matchup with East Carter at Hillsboro tonight, January 10, will be the area's most interesting contest.

Both are rated in the top five in the 13th Region this week. Patriots and Oakland also tied for first. They two have split a pair of previous meetings, the Vikings edging East out in the final game of the Eastern Kentucky Conference Tournament in December before the Raiders turned the trick on Rowan County in Morehead a week later. Aid-both teams are just a little hungry. East Carter has slipped a bit lately, while Rowan County has been up-and-down all year long.

In a chat earlier this week Vikings coach Ted Trent expressed his respect for the Raiders. "They've been getting their big knock-back," he said, referring to 6-6 senior Rick Tackett, who is injured in the last meeting between the two teams. "We're vastly improved since the last time they beat us."

The Vikings' 75-70 victory over Rowan County Wednesday night left Trent with superlative praise. "It was a brouser," he said. "It was a dandy. We fought all night. It was a beautiful game. As physical as I've ever seen."

Trent was generous as usual in handing out praise, but he did concentrate on two particular individuals. "Gary Braugher's floor play is not a super," he said of the junior guard. "His leadership is real good. He's doing so much on defense and running our offense. He's a big difference."

John Stamper has personally won two battles in the four quarter and Trent claimed. "We were down by four with 2:23 to go. Braugher fouled out, so we brought John in off the bench, and he came with a six-point play. I've never seen anything like it out of a freshman."

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — As far as the standings are concerned, Morehead State University's women's basketball team really didn't need the win over Louisville.

The Lady Eagles have already clinched first place in the Kentucky Women's Intercollegiate Conference going into the state tournament, but the 82-76 victory was an important one for other reasons.

MSU's record in the KWIC is 10-1 and it was recorded for the Lady Eagles, only once, 75-74 in the first meeting this season. "We needed to prove that we're the type of team that could come back and beat them since they gave us our only defeat in the KWIC," said Mickey Wells, KWCU. "It should help give us the momentum we need going into the state tournament. The team going into the tournament with the most momentum will probably win it."

Freshman, the way he does coming off the bench.

Trent also showed a lot of respect for the improving Cougars. "It was a tough encounter," he said. "They were very improved. They were getting the ball inside to the big kids. The officials let 'em play, and it was like Muhammad Ali against Tommie Stone when the Cupo (Cullen) Lumpkins and Jim Moore went toe-to-toe. Not by coincidence, they were the game's top two scorers, the 6-6 Tommie Stone with 25 points, and the 6-5 Moore with 25 points and 13 rebounds. Joe May followed Moore with a 19-point outing, and Allen Ravenscroft, who played superb according to Trent, added a dozen."

The win made the Vikings 14-11 Tuesday night, Rowan County topped Russell 76-64, as Trent played his starting five from wire to wire in a feat of endurance. May 4th the scoring leader with 19 points. Moore poured in 18. Tony McKinnis added 17. Ravenscroft had 14, and Braugher ended with eight.

Braugher again put up a slant effort but lacked in the four quarter and lost to 103 Region power Fairview by a decisive 65-48 count. The Eagles led Fairview 48-41 at one point in the second quarter, but the Eagles started back in the last two minutes of the first half to beat them since they gave us our only defeat in the KWIC," said Mickey Wells, KWCU. "It should help give us the momentum we need going into the state tournament. The team going into the tournament with the most momentum will probably win it."

The Lady Eagles had another motivating factor in Wednesday night's game, going into the state tournament, but the 82-76 victory was an important one for other reasons.

MSU's record in the KWIC is 10-1 and it was recorded for the Lady Eagles, only once, 75-74 in the first meeting this season. "We needed to prove that we're the type of team that could come back and beat them since they gave us our only defeat in the KWIC," said Mickey Wells, KWCU. "It should help give us the momentum we need going into the state tournament. The team going into the tournament with the most momentum will probably win it."

take a 29-24 lead at intermission. Fairview pulled out to a 34-30 advantage at the third stop, and they exploded with 28 points to Brock's 19.

Eagles' coach Dinzel Dennis was pleased with the strong three periods against one of the region's favorites. "We played a real good game until the second half, but the bottom line is, I thought that everything considered we played real well for three quarters. We played with a lot of intensity, and we played a lot smarter than we've been."

The young Eagles will finish up the regular season tonight with another of the stonier region teams, West Carter, coached by Werberly Gyle. They're rated first in one poll in the region. Dennis pointed out. "It'll be the fourth time we've played them. The first time we beat them by 15. The second time, they beat us by two. The last time, they won by 30 or 35. They've been an interesting matchup over the year, and we've had three meetings so far. I hope they haven't improved that much more."

The young Eagles still make a 4-22 record into action this evening. West Carter is 11-12 on the season. The last second victory over Fleming County Tuesday night.

Skitch Henderson Directs UBS Students

Skitch Henderson

These students from University Breckinridge are members of the Central Kentucky Youth Symphony Orchestra (CKYSO) which will be conducted by Skitch Henderson in its benefit concert in Lexington on March 18.

This students are Jan Bigham, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Bigham; Anne Harris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David L. Harris; and Stacey Bessie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Bessie.

Henderson is former Tonight Show orchestra conductor and will conduct the CKYSO in the benefit concert at 7:30 p.m. March 18 at the Opera House in Lexington.

Proceeds from the concert will help fund the CKYSO's summer concert tour of Romania and the USSR.

"We are honored that a celebrity so widely known and so musically skilled as Skitch Henderson would donate his time to us," said Gloria Singletary, Mrs. Singletary, wife of the University of Kentucky president, is chairman of the Central Kentucky Youth Orchestra, Food Drive.

"We need $60,000 to reach our goal of funding all the regular operations of our youth orchestras and the summer concert tour," she added. "We are counting on our benefit concert to bring in a large part of it."

Henderson's background qualifies him to conduct both popular and symphonic music. A list of his musical associates over the years is ample illustration: Frank Sinatra, Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, Bing Crosby, Arnold Schonberg, Ernst Toch, Albert Coates, Arturo Toscanini, Fritz Heiner.

Since his departure from the Tonight Show in the early 1960s, Henderson has concentrated on classical, symphonic music.

Composing and arranging now occupy a major portion of Henderson's time. His "Caraco," written for the Boston Ballet, received rave reviews and his film scoring can be heard on television almost any night of the week.

Along with conducting nearly every prominent American orchestra, Henderson has conducted leading orchestras in Canada, England, Germany, France, and Australia.

The CKYSO comprises 23 musicians between the ages of 13 and 18 from Fayette and nearby counties. In the past, the 30-year-old orchestra has performed at Carnegie Hall and the White House along with its annual area concerts.

This summer, Director Charles E. Bontrager and orchestra members are scheduled to perform nine formal concerts in Russian and Romanian cities.

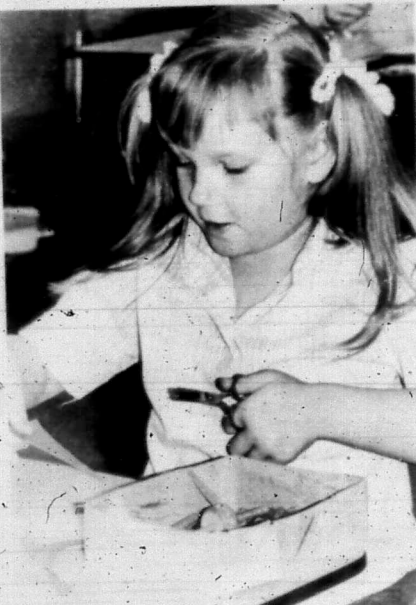

The tour is scheduled for July 9-29. Parents of orchestra members have provided $51,000 to cover half the cost of the trip. Orchestra members must raise $65,000 for regular operating expenses and the overseas tour.

The Romania-USSR concert tour is sponsored by Friendship Ambassadors, a New York-based non-profit tax-exempt cultural/educational exchange foundation.

The CKYSO Benefit Concert with Skitch Henderson replaces the "Tree Concert" previously scheduled for March 18. Benefit concert contributions of $100 or more will entitle the contributor to two concert tickets for preferred seating, pre-concert cocktail buffet, and participating in the concert program.

General admission tickets may be obtained, beginning in late February, at Hildt Music Co., Fred Moore Music Co., Shackleton's, and all three local Foodtown Markets.

Opera House Fund Priority Ticket-Holders should contact the Youth Music Society between Feb. 20 and Feb. 28 to obtain tickets. For ticket information, write Youth Music Society, P. O. Box 7813, Lexington, Ky. 40502 or call Morehead, 794-7711.

The Hilden Hoag award-winning cheerleaders will perform at halftime of the Morehead State Eastern Kentucky game Saturday afternoon at Wetherby gymnasium. Game time is 1:30 p.m. The junior high cheerleaders won first place in state competition and third in national competition.

SEVENTH GRADERS AT BRECKINRIDGE have been engaged in a project designed to make history come alive. Under the supervision of Mrs. Husing, students have created impressive replicas of scenes and events from Kentucky's past. Increased Funding Approval Given Mt. Sterling Project

OWINGSVILLE — An increase of $50,000 in the proposed cost of a new Mount Sterling Nursing Home was given approval last week at the Gateway Subarea Health Council meeting held here.

McKinley "Dick" Walker of Mount Sterling had been granted approval by the local health body several years ago for a $30,000 structure, but inflation caused Walker to ask for the additional approval.

Walker says he is still working on getting funding in order to build the nursing home. The health council approval on the increased cost application now goes to the East Kentucky Health Systems Agency in Winchester for their consideration and then will be submitted to state agencies.

The Health Council took no action on a HURA (Health Underserved Rural Area) supplemental grant application by the Gateway District Health Department. Health Department acting administrator Harold Belcher said he had been told by HEW in Atlanta that the grant request would not be funded, as approval was not deemed necessary.

In other business, Health Council chairperson Amanda Varber issued a challenge toward those capable of helping to implement the two major areas of health concern in the Gateway area — health education and primary care. The board also discussed the possibility of having a health fair later in the year and discussed the election of new board members, which will take place at the April meeting.

The Council also gave "favorable comment" to a Physician Assistant Training Program grant application in the amount of $146,411 submitted to the University of Kentucky. The program would use federal funds to train persons to become physicians' assistants to enhance primary care services.

The Gateway Subarea Health Council serves five counties area comprising Bath, Menifee, Morgan, Montgomery, and Rowan Counties.

Kentucky Winds Up Regular Season

The Kentucky Wildcats will host the Vanderbilt Commodores at Rupp Arena Friday in their Southeastern Conference season finale and then close out their season Sunday at South Carolina.

The Vandy game, which took off at 7:30 p.m. EST, will feature the last home appearance of senior co-captains Duane Casey and Truman Claytor.

Sunday's game at Columbia tips off at 3:10 p.m. EST and will be televised on an NBC-TV regional network.

By virtue of their splendid 8-7 win at Georgia Monday, the Wildcats advanced their overall record to 14-10 and assured themselves a winning season. But of more immediate importance is their place in the SEC with a 4-4 record.

Kentucky is close on the heels of fifth place, Mississippi State, which is 9-7 in the conference. State finishes its season on the road at arch rival, Mississippi and league-leading LSU.

Should a tie prevail among all conference teams, the SEC tournament selection procedure calls for the following: 1) Reversal of the tied teams to games against each other; 2) Record on the tied teams with other league teams starting with the champion and working downward. It still will be a coin toss who made it home to keep alive its hopes for a No. 2 seeding.

The Commodores were placed by coach Charles Davis 33 points junior for guard and benched from 37.1 per cent shooting. Vandy worked its last post-offense to perfection as Davis said it will from opponents hitting 73 of 113 shots while the Wildcats could manage only 23 of 38 for a 59.7 mean.

The Wildcats avoided a disastrous road trip by whipping Georgia after playing poorly and losing 101-84 at Tennessee. The 17-point margin was the worst defeat the Cats have suffered since Indiana beat them by 24-points in 1974.

"What our mistakes were at Tennessee and started running our offense the way it should be run," said UK coach Joe B. Hall following the "Cats' smooth effort at Georgia."

He applied pressure on them at every possession and controlled the tempo of the game.

Georgia coach Hugh Durham agreed.

"When you let Kentucky run its offense, you can get a clinic on the floor," he said. "That's what we did and you saw what happened."

The win was only the third one on the road for the Cats, who have suffered seven losses.

"This only proves what I said before the season, that we are a young and an experienced ball club," said Hall. "But we are getting there."

News Report From

Rowan County Extension Office

Mrs. Ernest Beza, Montgomery County, and Ferrell Taylor, Taylor County, participated in the Licking River Extension Area at the annual Kentucky Extension Advisory meeting in Lexington. With them standing are Howard Baker (left), president of the Kentucky County Agricultural Extension Agents Association from Bracken County, and Mason Morrison, Area Extension Director.

Gardening

Have you made plans for putting out a garden? It's time to be looking for your seed, especially those early-warm weather crops - I was in a greenhouse the other day and saw tomato plants that were three inches tall.

If you haven't signed up for the garden contest for this year don't forget to call the Extension Office or stop by and do so.

We have a supply of 1979 seed catalogues if you want to look at them. Also, if you plan to put out strawberries this year, this should be done in March. We have some addresses of nurseries that put out certified plants. If you need this information call the Extension Office.

Corn Production Meeting

Corn producers in the county are invited to be guests of the University of Kentucky and a clinical company at an area meeting in Mt. Sterling on Wednesday, March 7, at 6:30 p.m. at the Mt. Sterling Elementary School, located on Massville Street.

Many phases of corn production (including no-tillage and conventional tillage) will be discussed by production specialists: Dr. M. J. Bitzer, Extension Grain Specialist, University of Kentucky, College of Agriculture and Charles Bennett, Chemical Specialist will discuss tillage methods, weed and insect control, fertilization, double cropping, small grain silage and other aspects of corn production and pasture improvement.

Also there will be a discussion of results of research in corn variety tests. In order to provide dining arrangements it is important that you call the Extension Office no later than Friday, March 2. The phone number is 784-5457 or 784-8416. If you plan to grow corn in 1979 (and like to eat!) think you will find this meeting of interest.

Cranston Improvement Club

Charles Craig, President of the 377 Community Improvement Club informs me that Dr. David Hensley, Extension Specialist in Horticulture, University of Kentucky, located at the Quickstart Substation, will be guest speaker at the meeting of the 377 Club Tuesday, Feb. 27, at 7:30 p.m. Meeting place is at the TGT Community Club room located on the hill just beyond the Rock Ford Road on 377. Everyone is invited.

Pepper Meeting

There will be a meeting for pepper growers Wednesday, Feb. 28, at the Rowan County Farm Bureau building.

MSU Women Win Six Events But Finish Second

MOREHEAD, KY. — Sometimes good is just not good enough which appeared to be the case in Morehead State University's women's indoor track meet against Kentucky and Louisville.

The Lady Eagles won six of 13 events but lost to the Lady Kats in the overall point total 79-92, with U.K. at 141.

The Lady Eagles took several "firsts" in distance and field events but UK's sprinters collected enough points to counter the Eagles.

Sophomore Alanna McCarthy took first in the mile run of 5:06.2, the two-mile run at 11:11.3 and the one-mile running sprint medley relay team with junior Karen Ross, sophomore Terri Walker and freshman Barf Ferris.

Running in three distance races, first I need to tire the Charlottesville, Va. native.

"It may seem like running in three long races would wear someone down,

An automatically plowed was a regular feature of your cradles of the 1930s. The first automatic plow to vibrate the string with a wire, the vibrator was electrically operated and controlled by air flowing through a mouse roll performance.

NOTICE

Due to the high inflation Rate of Real Estate in the past few years, it is necessary and imperative that there be a small percentage increase in the value of interest-bearing properties which have no current activity or recent changes in value.

You don't want to miss this meeting if you plan to grow peppers. Contracts will be available for those who want to sign up that night. In talking to John Wills, County Extension Agent for Agriculture in Bath County, if which the pepper station is located, he tells me that acreage is being signed rapidly and they may be cutting off the sign-up, as they reach the capacity of the station. He says that the capacity is around 400 acres and acreage is being signed up rapidly. If you want to grow peppers this year don't wait too long since they might close the acreage sign-up.

A Young Life Taken

Tragedy struck a Rowan County family Tuesday evening and that same tragedy has touched the hearts of local residents, especially those who knew the families involved or who had children of their own.

A head-on collision on Ky. 32 north of Morehead resulted from a bump in the road, which many residents claim had been there for several months.

As the result of the accident, a 12-year-old Rowan County girl was killed, a sister, her mother and a young man were seriously injured. During the past few years, the treacherous stretch of pavement has resulted in numerous auto accidents, many of them fatal.

We feel that any heavily traveled road, such as Ky. 32, should have constant repair, and not just signs posted warning of "bumps", etc. No defect in pavement of such roads should go any length of time without repair.

When a problem is detected, repair it that same day if at all possible. Don't just post signs and procrastinate or make excuses.

Facility Building Should Stand Alone

The Morehead City Council appears to have shifted directions slightly and has indicated preference not to pursue a housing development on its Divide Hill property if there is any danger that it will damage the proposed-Carl D. Perkins Community Facility Building.

Common sense would indicate that this is a step in the right direction. There are two reasons, in particular, which to use a HUD representative's words, make it "folly to proceed" with the housing development. First of all, if the housing project is to be big enough to make it profitable for a private developer, there will never be ample parking for the Community Building, unless a parking lot is built away from the building on some of the ground which is not suitable for building purposes. Secondly, no matter how you look at it, a housing project will diminish the aesthetic beauty of the building.

Admittedly, the purpose of the HUD Community Development Block Grant, under which funding for the building was provided, is to benefit the low and moderate income families in the area. To not build more housing in the area to benefit that group will be a blow to that commitment.

But we can safely assume that a private developer can seek another site on which to build the housing, especially since one of the developers who is interested in the Divide Hill site has pointed out that it is one of the worst housing sites in Rowan County. That same developer has also told the council that two other private developers are now preparing to seek HUD money for developing low and moderate income housing elsewhere.

If the commitment to housing can be met elsewhere, the inevitable question would be: Why build it next to a nice building and potential community center area, especially when nobody really wants it there? From what we can gather, the housing was tacked onto the original preapplication for money for the building to make it more appealing to HUD. Surely, HUD would not hold the city to a half-hearted commitment like that when it is clear that the benefits of not building the housing at the site clearly outweigh those to be gained by proceeding.

Councilman John Holbrook pointed out last week that most of those seeking low and moderate income housing in Rowan County were from out of the county. He said he did not want to see Morehead become an "oasis" for low income families. Of course, HUD's view is that federal money should not be limited to benefit just the people of Rowan County and Morehead. But why pollute the best well in the oasis when there are other, more viable alternatives which would benefit everyone.

The needs of the underprivileged should be met and it is certain that the housing needs will be met just as well elsewhere. The Community Building will serve another need: that of having a nice place to go for meetings and performances and many other functions that the building will provide — functions that will be reduced if the housing smother the space around the building.

POW Tale Revived

Once again the story of American prisoners still alive in Vietnam prisons has surfaced. This time the source is less reliable than usual. An American who was taken prisoner by the Vietnamese during the war and elected to remain in Vietnam rather than come home reportedly has passed the word that he is ready to come home now.

The turncoat, former Marine Robert Garwood, reportedly also said there were 35 other Americans living in a labor camp with him. The information cannot be confirmed unless Garwood is returned to the United States and can be questioned about the story.

Repeatedly over the years since the American withdrawal from Vietnam in 1973, reports have surfaced that the Vietnamese did not release all the prisoners under their control, as they have said they did. Efforts to uncover any missing Americans who might still be alive, including trips to Vietnam by relatives of missing men and congressional delegations, have failed to turn up a single man.

Given the nature of the Vietnamese rulers, that does not necessarily mean all the reports have been false. But the cruel fact is that no recent evidence exists that any of the missing Americans is still alive. The latest suggestion could be nothing more than an attempt by a disillusioned individual to apply leverage to escape from a predicament no longer to his liking.

Agree Or Not...

FRANKFORT — One of the pressing problems of Kentucky that the 1980 legislature needs to correct is its workmen's compensation law.

It is hindering the attraction of new industry to the state and may have been the reason for some industry leaving the state.

Both labor and industry are willing to pay injured workmen a fair amount for job-related injuries, but present laws permit a transgression that keeps compensation insurance rates higher than surrounding states.

The real problem as viewed by business and industry is the law that provides for partial permanent disability. Even some labor leaders agree that the law is unfair.

Take a hypothetical case. A man loses a portion of a finger or hand. He is allowed permanent partial disability for life. He receives a weekly or monthly payment from workmen's compensation insurance, a fund that all business must contribute to according to its number of workers and the established risk in its type of business. No one is exempt.

Now, this man returns to his job, or a similar job, and makes the same amount of money, or the going rate at the moment, as he made when he was injured. Yet, he continues to receive the disability payment although it is not hindering him from holding his job.

Unfortunately, Kentucky has two of the highest industries risks in the country — coal mining and the timber industry. These rates are high. In some cases the insurance rates amount to about the same as the weekly wage the employee draws.

Black Lung has also brought on high costs in workmen's compensation. Many coal companies have long been out of business that employed persons who won Black Lung compensation. It is to explain that current business and industry must pay the compensation for those who are long out of business, and this makes the present rates high.

There has been some discussion that some more economical system should be set up to pay the claims. Even the federal government shouldered part of the load.

Many of the larger corporations have been self assured and others have looked into the matter, but sometimes their costs can run as high or even higher than the state fund, depending upon their experience record. Permanent partial injury award is responsible for this, or at least part of it.

In what many believe was an effort by Governor Wendell Ford to reduce the cost of workmen's compensation insurance, a law was passed during his term that took in all business that had one employee. Prior to this, a business had to have three or more employees before it was required to carry workmen's compensation insurance.

A lawyer with one secretary, a doctor with a receptionist, or any business with just one employee now has to pay workmen's compensation insurance on that employee.

Admittedly, the cost may not be high. In the case of the one employee where injuries on the job seldom occur, it is a business cost that many resent. Of course, this cost must be passed on to the consumer.

Business and industry have the feeling there must be a better and a cheaper way to compensate the injured worker. No one wants to leave him unpaid, but all want to reduce the cost.

The Special Fund may be one of the culprits. For at one time or another all covered firms must pay into it if the special fund gets below being able to cover the injured.

No one has come up with a solution yet, but the 1980 legislature ought to make an effort to solve the problem.

Letters Welcome

Our "Letters to the Editor" column has, in the past, occasionally carried letters of a "thank you" nature. This type letter no longer will be used in the column inasmuch as we are of the opinion that "thank you" notes do not have general reader interest and only provide an easy way out for what should be a more personalized, sincere note of appreciation by organizations to those who help in their projects.

The Morehead News "Letters to the Editor" column will be reserved for those wishing to express opinions on subjects upon which they feel strongly and have other means of disseminating their thoughts.

We welcome your letters for publication in the column. They should be addressed to The Editor, The Morehead News, 722-30 West First Street, Morehead, Ky. 40351. They should be typewritten if possible and signed. Include your address and telephone number for verification.

Tighter Burley Rules

Strict new limits of burley produced in excess of farm quotas would be placed in effect on the upcoming 1979 crop, if pending regulations are adopted.

The change in federal regulations is aimed at cutting down on carry-over tobacco grown and marketed in excess of quotas. This has amounted to an estimated 20 million pounds a year, in each of the past two years.

The new ruling would require that any burley above 118 pct. of quota be left on the farm, and not stored through dealers or marketing agents.

Also a report on excess-quota tobacco would be required by the grower at the end of the marketing season, in addition to supplemental reports by dealers and marketing agents.

The proposed new ruling was given immediate endorsement by the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association, which operates the price support program in Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and Missouri.

Directors of the co-op in meeting Feb. 14, shortly before the proposed order came through from Washington, had passed a resolution asking that the USDA tobacco division place a ban on all marketing of excess tobacco.

If not banned completely, it was proposed that such tobacco "be contained in the pool, or kept on the farm where grown."

Joe McDaniel, president of the burley co-op, said:

"Excess tobacco selling has had a depressing effect on the current market. It has taken a lot of buying strength away from the auctions since Christmas."

He added that such tobacco is "hard to police" and that "much of it might be finding its way into the trade irregularly, if not illegally, and in violation of production control laws."

Besides the new carryover rules, the USDA proposal sets up added restrictions on lease and transfer practices. A farmer would no longer be allowed to transfer a quota both from and to it within the same year with a few exceptions.

Comments on the new rulings should be made before Feb. 28, sent to Acting Director, Production Adjustment Division, USDA, ASCS, G. Box 2411, Washington, D. C. 20012.

OVER A BARREL

ADAY LATE — Some people claim that the state transportation department was a day late and perhaps a life short because they did not repair this bump along Ky 22 earlier. A traffic accident at this spot took the life of a 12-year-old girl last Tuesday evening, Wednesday, however, the transportation department work crews were on the scene and did some work to repair the bump. James Brown, district engineer with the KYDOT in Flemingsburg, said that the bump was "a significant factor" in the crash and that the department already had plans to repair it. (Staff Photo)

Letter To The Editor

The Editor: It is unfortunate that in order to get our state roads repaired lives must be taken, not to mention serious injuries. On Tuesday, Feb. 20, a vehicle carrying three people came across an area of broken pavement on Ky 22 North which caused their vehicle to go out of control and cross into the other lane and get hit by an on-coming car. One 12-year-old child was killed and three other persons were seriously injured. This eruption in the road had been there for three months and was obviously dangerous to motorists. Today, Feb. 21, I traveled the same highway and our state road crew was repairing the break in the road, after one death and three injuries the night before. There were no signs posted "Warning" or "Slow" indicating danger to motorists. The pavement protruded from the surface of the road at least eight inches all the way across. Our road crew needs to be looked into. What are our tax dollars going for? Darryl Mabry R. B. 3 Morehead, Ky.

Firemen Flush Gas From Sewer

Morehead firemen flushed out the sewer system on Railroad street Tuesday afternoon after residents and mechanics in the area complained of gas fumes.

According to Fire Inspector Danny Mabry, gasoline was dumped into the system at the Shell Station on that street.

Police are investigating the possibility of arson in connection with a fire which gutted a storage building behind the Church of the Nazarene located on U.S. 60 East Monday morning. Flames damaged several cottages inside the building that had no likely source of fire, according to Fire Chief Glen Terrell.

Members of the volunteer fire department were at the scene for 45 minutes.

Kentucky Hills Weekend Planned At State Park

Square dancing, mountain crafts demonstrations and a bog-calling contest will highlight a Kentucky Hills Weekend at Kentucky's Cumberland Falls State Resort Park, near Corbin, March 16-18.

The weekend opens with a folk concert Friday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. by Dick and Anne Albin, Kentucky musicians and song writers. The Albins, who live in Stanton, have recorded five albums and represented Kentucky at the National Folk Festival.

Saturday's activities include a wilderness survival walk led by John Terney of Carter Caves and a talk on edible plants by herbalist E. J. Carr, who will point out the plants during a walk through the park.

Crafts demonstrations, a quilt sale and a movie on quilting are planned Saturday afternoon, followed by sack races and a bog-calling contest in which the prize will be a live pig. Square dances are scheduled Friday and Saturday nights.

Spring lodge rates will be in effect. Reservations may be made by contacting Cumberland Falls State Resort Park, Corbin, KY 40701, telephone: 606-538-4121. The 1979 free number from any point in Kentucky, is 1-800-372-2961. Persons in surrounding states can call toll free 1-800-626-2911.

Further information can be obtained by contacting Jeannie McConnell, park naturalist, Cumberland Falls State Resort Park, at the above address.

On Task Force

Phil Conn, vice president of the bureau of University and regional services at Morehead State University, and Connie Anzures, economic resource specialist at MSU's Appalachian Development Center, have been named to the 1979 Governor's Task Force on State Park Development.

The task force will study existing facilities at state parks and the potential for expansion and addition of new facilities.

Manpower Council Sets Meeting Date

OWINGSVILLE — The Gateway Manpower Council meeting that was cancelled Jan. 31 because of the weather has been rescheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 28, at 1:30 p.m. in the Gateway Area Development District offices here.

Main speaker at the meeting will be Richard Hughes, executive secretary of the State Manpower Planning Council, who will speak on the changes in the CETA program.

Lady Eagles

79-72; with 2:11 left.

By the 1:32 mark, A.L. had up the lead 79-78, and it looked as if history might repeat itself.

In the first MSU-UL combat, the Lady Eagles blew a seven point lead with two minutes remaining and that memory came to mind.

Wells called timeout.

"I reminded them of the last game during the timeout," Wells said. "We had almost the same situation only this time we play patiently."

Freshman center Diana Stephens led scoring and rebounding with 26 points and 16 rebounds. Junior forward Donna Murphy followed with 21 points and 15 rebounds in what Wells considered her best performance since missing ten games due to an ankle injury.

Freshman guard Robin Harman added 13 points and ten assists, a team high.

Freshman Irene Moore hit for 19 points, sophomore Loreta Hummeldorf for six, freshman Frances Moore for four and sophomore Dorothy Burk for two to round out the Lady Eagle scoring.

MSU is now 24-3 overall and will carry an 11 game winning streak into Saturday's match-up with Kentucky. Game time is 8 p.m. in Wetzelbets Gym.

Tourism

Local tourism tends to have "a snowball effect -- it breeds on itself." He added that with just a small amount of maintenance, the industry would continue to grow every year. "We can expect an influx over the years of tourist dollars which will stimulate additional business and income for the county," he said, "and it should help generate jobs."

Bishop added, "Morehead has been without a tourism commission for a long time and it's something we've needed."

Bishop said that the commission is continually searching for new ideas to help promote the area as well as attractions which it can promote. He invites residents to submit those ideas to the commission in care of Post Office Box 81, Morehead, Ky. 40351.

the attorney general of the state of Kentucky who gives the entire state opinions on law and his opinions are held valid until proven different in a court of law.

Flannery said that Cox could greatly improve his image if he would only advise Fiscal Court on legal matters instead of making speeches and issuing opinions as to day by day operations of the county which are strictly the Fiscal Court's duties and his duty as county judge-executive.

Flannery accused Cox of wanting to be judge or fiscal officer of the county, but in his statement last week, "I Cox said in his statement last week, "I have no desire to run the county government, but would ultimately stand responsible if those elected to run the county government were doing so without adequate legal counsel."

When questioned by The Morehead News about Flannery's latest comments, Cox would only shake his head and say that he was "sticking by his earlier promise of refusing to respond to future comments involving the situation.

Title IX

ignore the regulations they could have all the federal money the college receives withdrawn.

As for the ramifications of Title IX, Moran could only speculate. "If I'm a men's coach and I find out that I have to give up five scholarships and $3,000 of my travel money for women's athletics, I might have to be pretty Christian to accept that."

"I haven't reached that point yet," Moran said. "But each year the women's program grows, the men are going to have to be cut back. Dr. Nurfleet doesn't want it, the athletic committee doesn't want it, the coaches don't want it and certainly I don't want it. If it is done it will be only because it has to be done as an absolute must, the last thing we'll do is cut back on the men's programs. Some programs are inclined to keep basketball and football at a high level and let the others drop. Tennessee Tech eliminated all athletic scholarships except for football and basketball."

Dr. Nurfleet is for a broad based philosophy and so is the NCAA. How long we can continue that is questionable, we may be forced to do what other schools are doing and decide what sports to put our money in. For MSU it might be basketball and football, for some other school it might be football. Those are decisions that may have to be made down the road. But if we make those kinds of decisions it will be because we have to, not because we want to. We would like to keep our golf and tennis at the same level and even increase it, but there are only so many dollars and they only go so far."

In our next issue, The Morehead News will take a detailed look at the 1979-80 athletic budget, including an account of our experiences, we each sport, both men and women as well as the difference between men and women scholarships.
