Norfleet To Be Among Education Delegation To Israel

Morehead State University President Morris Norfleet will be among eight American university presidents who will travel to Israel this week on an international educational mission, sponsored by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) and Israeli Ministry of Education.

That was one of several announcements made Friday afternoon during a press conference in Dr. Norfleet's office.

The president also announced the university's plan to support the state Council on Higher Education's recommendation that faculty and staff salaries be given the number one priority in the state budget request and the university's plan to establish a new blue ribbon committee to study the general education requirements of the school.

Dr. Norfleet said that he would be leaving Tuesday for the 10-day junket to Israel. He said the educators making the trip will study the educational and cultural linkages between the two countries and make recommendations based on their studies.

He said it was an honor for MSU to have been chosen to participate and he said the institution of higher education can be "a powerful force" in international relations.

The president said he and the other university presidents would look at various levels of the Israeli educational system and comparing them with what they're trying to achieve and how the American universities can help.

Dr. John Bernhard, president of Western Michigan University, and chairman of the AASCU, will head up the delegation.

While on the trip, Dr. Norfleet will also visit Cairo, Egypt where he will meet with representatives of the Agency for International Development and review the university's contract with Egyptian businessmen who have been studying at Morehead State.

Norfleet announces his trip Friday.

Many of the Egyptians who completed a similar course here one year ago have returned to their villages to establish loan programs similar to the United States Farmers Home Administration system.

The president will spend two days in Cairo, following his visit to Israel.

Emphasis On Salaries

Dr. Norfleet reiterated the university's strong endorsement of the Council on Higher Education's recommendation that faculty and staff salaries at state universities be made the number one priority.

The president noted that the council sent the budget request to the Office of Program Management (OPM), the governor's budget office, with the request that salary increases of 9 1/2 percent be approved for each year of the biennium.

Norfleet said Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. has endorsed the recommendation but has not specified a percentage increase for salaries. Dr. Norfleet noted that salaries have been increased only five percent annually for the past eight years and called that detrimental to maintaining qualified employees in view of what other states and even some Kentucky agencies were able to pay.

The university president urged every member of the faculty and staff who supports the budget recommendation of 9 1/2 percent to sign a petition currently circulating on campus. That petition asks support from the governor and the legislators for approval of the salary increases and will be sent to the governor when it is completed.

Norfleet admitted that all state higher education institutions were circulating similar petitions but called it a "semi-formal endeavor" between them. He said, however, the MSU petition was different from those at others in its totality. He said the main distinction was that others were just asking faculty members to sign.

Norfleet said he felt the petitions would have "more significance if each person had an opportunity to indicate their support" of the budget request.

The university president also said he wanted to clear up some "confusion due to misinformation about a letter sent to the council staff by Gov. Brown."

He said the governor has simply requested that the universities take a hard look at their budget requests to find ways to "conserve in a period of austerity." He emphasized that the governor did not request the universities to make a percent reduction in faculty and staff. "He asked that we do all we could," Norfleet said.

Norfleet said the university has taken "no additional initiative" in examining the budget after the governor's letter because he said, "We had already done that."

He expects the General Assembly to make its budget decision the last of March and said, "We've done all we can in terms of providing information."

When asked if he would consider instituting a freeze on hiring personnel, similar to that at Murray State, Norfleet pointed out that "under guidelines" (Continued on back page)

Thrown To The Dog

Warm-weather scents like this were common last Friday as the temperature climbed near the 60-degree mark for the first time this year. Kelly Williams, a student at Morehead State, took advantage of the afternoon weather to go to teach Pax, a Doberman, how to play Frisbee. Pax, who is owned by Mike Foley who also practiced with Kelly, seemed interested, if somewhat shy, in the entire affair. (Staff photo by Joe Lamb.)

Rowan Band To Participate In Kentucky Derby Parade

The Rowan County High School band is one of four bands from across the state to be invited to participate in the 1980 Pegasus Parade.

The parade is held prior to the Kentucky Derby as part of the Derby Week celebration. This year's parade will be held May 1.

Band Director Phil Shepherd said that "the band members are quite honored as they should be. To be selected, involves having a statewide reputation of being top."

In order to finance the trip, band members will start a fund-raising campaign at the beginning of March. Band students will be going door to door to sell summer sausage and Wisconsin cheddar cheese.

Those wishing to attend the nationally televised event can call the band room at the high school for more information.

Map shows location of new bridge.

New Bridge Slated For Farmers-Sharkey

Design approval was given last week for a new bridge over Triplett Creek on Farmers-Sharkey Road (KY 801) near Farmers.

The two-lane structure will replace an existing one-lane bridge on the road, about one-half mile off U.S. 60.

Mark McDaniel, an assistant transportation secretary, said all the design work, right of way acquisition and utility relocation work had been completed and that the project would be up for bid-letting on April 18.

McDaniel said an estimated cost for the bridge and approaches and completion date could not be released until after the bid letting. Similar bridges, however, have cost as much as one-half million dollars to build.

District Highway Engineer James

Brown said the new bridge is designed to be 34 feet wide and over 190 feet long. He said it would be located about 90 feet south of the existing bridge. Traffic would be maintained on the present bridge until the new one is completed.

Brown said the new bridge most likely would be constructed of concrete with pre-stressed steel. It would include three spans of about 65 feet each.

McDaniel said the decision to replace the existing one-lane bridge was a combination of weight factors, safety factors and general overall improvement of state roads. He said, "Any time you have a one-lane bridge there are safety factors to consider."

Funds for the project will come from either the state bridge replacement program or a similar federal program.

the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1974, or a combination of both sources. Plans for replacing the structure have been in the works for years, but funding for the project became available only recently.

New Weekly To Begin In Montgomery

Mt. Sterling and Montgomery County will soon have a new weekly newspaper.

The first edition of The Montgomery News will roll off the presses, Wednesday, March 19, Kentucky Publishing Company, the parent firm, announced today.

The new newspaper, which will carry a Wednesday morning date line and will be delivered to mail subscribers Wednesday morning, is an outgrowth of Kentucky Publishing Company's popular Shopping News.

Present subscribers to The Shopping News in Montgomery County will begin receiving The Montgomery News instead of that paper, beginning with the first edition on March 19.

The new newspaper will continue to carry the weekly items now in The Shopping News but will also offer a comprehensive blend of Montgomery County news and features.

Robert McNemar, a veteran newswoman with more than 20 years experience, has been named managing editor of the paper. McNemar has served as managing editor of The Advocate-Messenger, a daily newspaper in Danville, Ky., for the past nine years. Prior to that he served on publications in Ohio for more than 20 years.

McNemar has extensive knowledge in all phases of news work and also is a skilled photographer. He and his wife, Katherine, will make their home in Mt.

Sterling.

Elda Gabbard, a former advertising salesperson with the Mt. Sterling Advocate, will be the newspaper's chief advertising representative, serving as director of advertising and promotion.

The newspaper's office at 11 East High Street will open March 3.

The Montgomery News is a member of the Kentucky Publishing Company group which includes, in addition to The Shopping News, The Morehead News, Menifee County News, Grayson Journal-Enquirer, High Hill Times, and The Greenup News.

Mt. Sterling attorney William C. Clay Jr. is president of Kentucky Publishing Company and R.J. "Gaudin" of Morehead, is executive vice president.

Concern About Oil Shale Leases Prompts Legislative Hearing

Concern about strip mining of land for oil shale has sparked a complaint in some part of the state that those signing broad-form mineral leases may have been misinformed about how the company which bought the leases plans to develop the resources.

Two state agencies have begun studies of the leases and a legislative subcommittee has scheduled a hearing on the matter next week.

The Consumer Protection Division of the attorney general's office has begun an investigation of the procedures used by Addington Oil Co. which has leased tens of thousands of acres of oil-shale property across the state.

And the state Department for Natural Resources has begun to study oil shale as a top priority. It will be held in Frankfort on Wednesday, March 6, according to State Rep. Pete Worthington (D-Ewing), who is chairman of the Special Oil Shale Subcommittee of the House Committee on Natural Resources and the Environment.

Addington Brothers, through Triad Research Corporation of Grayson, has leased the mineral rights to nearly 6,000 acres of land in Rowan County this year alone. Several people who signed such leases said last November they were aware that strip mining might be one of the methods used to remove oil shale from their lands; but others across the state have alleged they were told strip mining would not be used. The leases, however, give the companies the right to remove oil shale and many other minerals through "any conventional methods."

In Casey, Marion and Nelson counties many of the lessors said the purchasing agents for Addington, who as they were here were well-known trusted people in the community, led them to believe the leases were similar to two-year oil drilling leases.

The leases in Rowan County can be renewed year-to-year with payments at one dollar per acre for the first five years, providing the land is not developed. After five years, the company will pay three dollars per acre per year. Upon signing the leases, the land owners were given one dollar per acre in advance.

A Marion County man told the House Committee on Natural Resources and the Environment on Jan. 31, "I am a full-time farmer. I do claim to know what's on top of the ground, but very little, evidently about what's under it. I'm not so much concerned about the leases as the way I feel we were absolutely tricked into leasing our land."

The man, who leased 200 acres to Addington Oil, said he was approached by the county tax administrator.

County-wide movements have been organized in Marion County to fight any attempts by Addington to strip mine their land.

Rep. Worthington, in announcing the subcommittee hearing next week, said, "Mining of oil shale is not a problem in Kentucky right now. But the potential is there and I think we need to get all the information we can so we can keep it from becoming a problem."

Among state agencies to be represented at the public hearing (March 5, at 8:30 a.m. in Room A of the State Capitol Annex) is the attorney general's office, which will discuss the board form leases which property owners have signed. In addition, the Kentucky Geological Survey will send someone to the meeting to discuss the location of oil shale in the state.

Representatives of companies which are interested in Kentucky's oil shale also have been invited to attend the hearing and discuss the issues.

One Nelson County landowner has sued Addington, alleging that he was deceived. But most attorneys have said that the leases are binding and that the lessors have little recourse.

At a gathering of about 50 Marion County residents on Jan. 29, two attorneys said there was little the people who signed the leases could do. The lawyers said the leases could possibly be set aside if special circumstances such as inability to read the contract preceded the signing but they pointed out that in 80 to 85 percent of the leases that was not the case.

In Marion County, Addington has leased the rights to more than 21,000 acres. (Continued on back page)

Morehead Has New Postmaster

Morehead's new postmaster, Charles E. Johns of Lexington, will be installed March 7, his appointment effective March 8.

Johns, presently general supervisor of delivery and collection at the Lexington Post Office, was selected on merit based on recommendation by a Management Selection Board and appointed by Postmaster General William F. Bolger.

The announcement was made by John P. Doran, regional Postmaster General of the 13 State Central Region of the U.S. Postal Service.

Pump And Save Robbed

City police said at presstime Monday, they had a warrant for the arrest of a man suspected in the robbery of the Pump and Save Service Station, 1611 Flemingsburg Road, and expected to have the case completed that day.

The theft occurred Thursday at 9:37 p.m. while Paul Caskey, 16 West Liberty, was on duty.

At first over $5,000 was the estimated loss, before it was known one of the co-

Maxine Campbell Makes Mark In Dairy Business

TILTON — With her small build and feminine appearance Maxine Campbell does not seem to be a farmer, yet she owns three dairy farms in Fleming County totaling 1,000 acres and has milked and fed beef and dairy cattle for years.

Her three dairy farms are operated on a partnership basis with a manager of each farm. "We're a partnership, 50-50, on all dairy, hay and tobacco. They furnish their own equipment and I furnish the fertilizer and do all the seeding and fencing," Mrs. Campbell explains.

The largest farm, over 300 acres, is operated by Mrs. Campbell's brother, Jim Corbin. Another farm is run by Morton McCord and sons and the other is managed by Smith Crump. Each farm is equipped with large silos, pipe milkers, and automatic washers and bulk tanks.

"We milk about 200 cattle and we raise all of our heifers from baby calves," says Mrs. Campbell, and she feeds them their own corn, 200 acres of it, and keep it in a silo on each farm. I fed a beef farm for seven years and sold them three years ago," Mrs. Crump could have more pasture for their dairy cows. "The milk is trucked daily to Huntington and Mrs. Campbell is the first woman to be a director of the Huntington Integrate Milk Association."

"In the summer we ship milk every day and in the winter it is usually every other day. Our average butterfat content is 3.6%. They'll take a sample five times a month for an average butterfat percentage. We're paid on 3.5% butterfat content and anything above that you get paid so much more for," Mrs. Campbell said.

The cattle are fed on what is called a Pro-Blend feed. "We mix our feed 16% dairy, corn, soybeans, and molasses. Our feed comes from Southern States, Davenport, and Jabetown Mill, all in Fleming County," Mrs. Campbell said.

By owning the land of all three dairies, Mrs. Campbell is an executive manager of sorts. "If the tenants have a problem, they have an interested manager to come to," she says, for me it's a way to keep good management. I can't afford a man who has to be checked. I'm not over my tenants at the time, if they need me, they can call on me and I can depend on them."

"I don't do any feeding or anything like that anymore, I trust my tenants all the way to use their judgement."

After the death of her husband, Wilburn Campbell, ten years ago, Mrs. Campbell decided to keep the farms, rather than sell, as many wives do after their husbands are gone.

"My husband passed away ten years ago. He ran the Ford tractor dealership and I milked and he was the overseer. I could have sold the farms when my husband died but instead I bought more land. I knew it would be a good investment and it has. Land is something there is never going to be any more of — the value has to go up," said Mrs. Campbell.

Being a woman in the agricultural business has not been a problem for Mrs. Campbell and she wishes there were more women farmers.

"You go to agricultural meetings and there are no women. There is a lot of work involved in farming and women would rather have other jobs than farm," she says.

In addition to dairy cattle, Mrs. Campbell's farms produce a 54,000-pound tobacco quota, 200 acres of feed corn, alfalfa, and hay.

Mrs. Campbell has three children, Rob Campbell, owns Campbell Home Furnishings in Flemingsburg, Tommy Campbell, runs a carpet business in Flemingsburg, and Nancy Willeroy, has a security business in Lexington. Her grandson, Randy Willeroy, a student at Eastern Kentucky University, lives with her and used to help farm before entering college.

A native of Bath County, Mrs. Campbell is a member of the Methodist Church. An article on her dairy business appeared in the September issue of "Cooperative Farmer."

She enjoys traveling and square dancing. "I really do like to square dance. I go to all the dances in Fleming and Bath Counties," she said.

WHAT'S NEW

New knife with snap-off blade is ideal for work which requires frequent blade changes, such as model making.

It's padded bladeholder is comfortable and easy to grip — and a positive blade lock prevents slip-ups during use.

Tips from Stanley

Using Closets Efficiently

Closets, for the most part, seem to have been ignored by architects and interior designers. A peek into a typical family closet will often reveal an inefficient use of that space. Stanley Hardware recognized the need for improvement in this area and now offers several products that tackle the space problem head on. Happily, these products can be easily installed by D.I.Yers.

The adjustable metal closet shelf from Stanley is virtually god-proof installation. Simply install the wall supports and extend and install the shelf. A closet bar may also be added to the shelf system for additional storage.

A special bracket is available that allows you to practice double space in a closet space by hanging two rows of clothes in the space now occupied by one.

TOOLS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Time-Saving Liquid Tools

Want an easy way to make home repairs? A handful of adhesives may be the tools for you.

For instance, for difficult-to-bond items like loose tiles, Formica® counter-tops, pipes in luggage and shoes — it's Permabond®. Contact Cement.

The liquid toolbox can make home repairs easier.

Indispensable for wood repairs, another adhesive — Super Wood-Lok® — holds together items of wood — furniture, bookshelves, picture frames, even moldings. Plumbing problem? Let Perma-Lok® — Pipe Sealant with Teflon® seal metal fittings, plugs and threaded joints without tearing or shredding like conventional tapes.

Odd and ends such as broken cups, children's toys and jewelry respond instantly to the mending power of a drop of Permabond® super glue, all-purpose household helper.

Decorate for a party, hang a poster or hold down loose carpeting with reusable, non-toxic Fun-tak®. It replaces thumbtacks, staples and tacks.

These liquid adhesives can be an indispensable part of your toolbox.

THE MARKET BASKET

In the vegetable department, cauliflower is usually a good buy from September through January, when supplies are most plentiful. Avoid cauliflower that is discolored. This is an indication of aging or overmaturity. If you find fresh at a good price, be sure it is fresh, store properly, cook thoroughly. A cured whole ham would not be refrigerated more than one week before use. The time is even less for less than a whole ham. Unopened, cured hams, however, may be stored in the refrigerator up to six months without loss of quality.

Popular Choice
Everybody should love everybody. The tragedy is that so many people pick themselves.

Eagles Face Murray State Thursday In OVC Tournament

Morehead State will face Murray State Thursday night in the opening game of the Ohio Valley Conference Basketball Tournament being held in Bowling Green.

Eagle coach Wayne Martin likes the situation his team will face. "Other than the fact that we wanted to win the Eastern game, our objective was to get into the third place spot. Anytime you can enter a tournament and get your feet wet by not playing the best team it is to your advantage," Martin said yesterday.

Murray State was the only team in the conference to defeat MSU twice. On January 10 in Murray the Racers won 85-87, and on February 7 in Morehead Murray defeated the Eagles 80-75.

annual post season tournament by defeating Murray twice.

The OVC representative to the NCAA tournament will be decided Saturday night.

The Colonels defeated Morehead 84-68 last Thursday, overcoming an early six point deficit to stay in the tournament race.

"As a coach I have always felt that it is very hard to defeat a good team three times in one season. We are looking forward to participating and are proud of the fact that we earned a spot in the tournament," Martin said.

Eastern and Morehead tied for the third spot and a coin flip held Saturday

OVC Tourney Tickets On Sale Today

Tickets for the Ohio Valley Conference basketball tournament may be purchased in the athletic office located in the Laughlin Health Building.

The tournament will be held Thursday and Saturday night at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green.

MSU will face Murray in the first contest Thursday and Eastern and Western will square off in the second game with the winners meeting Saturday for the right to advance to the NCAA tournament.

Ticket prices are $5, $4 and $3.

After Thursday tickets will have to be bought from WKU.

Charlie Clay led the Eagles with 24 points and 17 rebounds before leaving late in the game with a bruised knee. Senior Butch Kelley, a center was the Eagles' only other double-figure scorer with 10 points.

Charlie came to play," Martin said. "I do think quickness is Eastern's greatest asset. Everytime we changed defenses they ran a door passes on us. That is the chance we have to take and we never recovered defensively."

The Eagles shot just 29.3 percent for the first half. After twenty minutes MSU was down by four, 38-34.

Morehead managed to pull within two points several times in the second half but couldn't regain the advantage.

We needed a win to acquire maximum momentum for the playoffs," Martin said. "We had been playing well, but they did a good job, got within four, 48-44."

The Eagles shot 35.3 percent from the field against Eastern in Richmond. The Colonels hit 47.8 percent from the field. EKU connected on 90 percent of its free throws, compared with 74 percent for MSU.

Eastern outrebounced the Eagles 47-38.

Morehead finished the OVC season with the same record as last year, 7-5.

Lady Vikings Roll Over Holy Family, 56-26

The Rowan County Lady Vikings rolled over their season record of 17-4 Saturday night by defeating Holy Family 56-26, in a contest which every player saw action.

Tammy Chins, the Vikings senior center got Rowan County off to a good start by pumping in 12 first quarter points. Collins finished with a game-high 20 points, seven rebounds and seven blocked shots.

Rowan County led 29-12 at the half.

Sophomore Karla May scored most of her 16 points during the third quarter which saw the Lady Vikings increase their lead to 48-16. May added seven rebounds and dished out two assist and had five steals.

Jelana Haney had eight points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Rowan County hit 45 percent from the field, 24 out of 53 and 47 percent from the free throw line, eight out of 17. The Lady Vikings defense limited Holy Family to just 19 percent from the field, nine out of 46. Holy Family did hit 56 percent from the free throw line, eight out of 12.

On Friday the Lady Vikings defeated Fairview 61-50, with a balanced scoring attack.

Tammy Adkins and Karla May were the leading scorers, each accounting for 12 points. Adkins hit six out of 12 shots from the field, while May connected on six out of 20. In addition May collected 16 rebounds, had eight assists and eight steals.

Collins had 10 points on five out of 11 shots from the field. The senior also had 12 rebounds, and four blocked shots.

Jeanne Cornett pumped in 10 points by hitting five out of 11 shots from the field. Debbie Dehart added eight points and Haney had seven.

Rowan County hit 38 percent from the field, 30 out of 78 shots. The Lady Vikings just had four free throw attempts and hit only one.

Fairview was called for only eight fouls against 18 for Rowan.

Fairview hit 30 percent from the field, 18 out of 60 shots and 14 out of 21 from the charity stripe.

Last Wednesday the Lady Vikings routed Fleming County 77-12.

Collins and May were the scoring leaders with 16 points each. Collins hit eight out of 15 shots from the field and 13 out of 19 shots, eight assists, four steals and five blocked shots.

May was red-hot, just missing one shot in going eight for nine from the field. The sophomore also had six steals.

Cornett had 13 points, hitting six out of 11 shots from the field and one out of two free throws. The junior also had five assists.

Rowan County hit 37 out of 99 shots from the field for 37 percent. The Lady Vikings took just six free throws, making three. They outrebounced Fleming County 65-23.

The Lady Panthers collected just five field goals in 48 attempts, and hit two out of five free throws.

On February 16th the Lady Vikings lost to Notre Dame, 71-57.

May scored 20 points and Collins added 13 but it wasn't enough to combat the balanced Notre Dame attack. Notre Dame placed four players in double figures.

Free throws were the difference in the game with Rowan County getting just 14 chances at the charity stripe compared with 45 for Notre Dame. Rowan hit 7 for 78 percent and Notre Dame hit 11 for 68 percent.

Rowan County had three more field goals than the hosts, 23-20. The Lady Vikings hit 23 out of 68 shots for 33 percent and Notre Dame hit 20 out of 63 for 31 percent.

Rowan County defeated Elliott County 71-43 on Feb. 18.

Four Lady Vikings hit the double figure mark. May and Cornett each had 14 points. May accounted for five out of 14 shots from the field and four out of six from the free throw line. Cornett pumped in six out of nine shots from the field and made her two free throw attempts.

Haney added 12 points, hitting four out of nine shots from the field and four out of five shots from the free throw line.

Becky Praher came off the bench to score 10 points. Praher hit two out of six shots from the field and six out of eight free throws.

Rowan County outrebounced Elliott County 52-26 and outshot them from the field, 37 percent to 23 percent.

The Lady Vikings close out the regular season Thursday night when they host Woodford County.

Vikings Register Ninth Victory

"A win is a win," said Rowan County coach Ted Trent of his team's ninth win in 23 outings over a never-say-die Huntington St. Joe team, 43-35, Friday night at RCHS.

Perhaps flat due to their heavy schedule of late, the RCHS Vikings missed numerous chances inside during the first quarter, and the deliberate style of the visiting Irish offense helped hold the home team to a dismal five point initial quarter output to 10-15.

In the second period play, the Norsemen fared a little better point wise, netting 18 markers, but the West Virginia team overcame the Viking height advantage to add a free throw to up their cushion to six, 29-23.

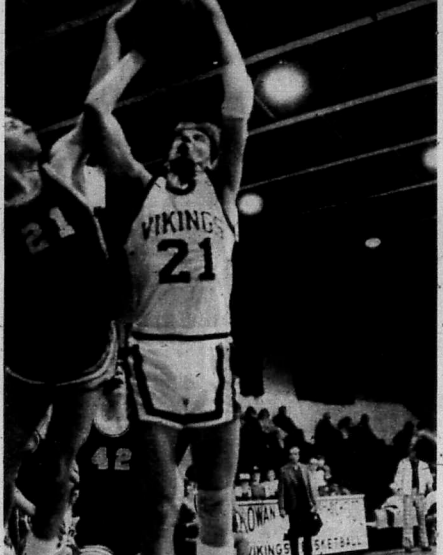

But after the half, the home team began to assert its superior size and bench strength to control the boards and used a hustling 1-3-2 trapping defense to pull to within one, 32-33. In the final quarter, the Vikings repeatedly threatened to blow the visiting Irish out of the contest, but a stubborn St. Joe's team hung close enough to pull within five with 3:45 left before RCHS pulled away to win 43-35.

Coach Trent was not surprised by the low offensive output.

"I predicted before the game that it would probably be a 40 point contest," said the coach. "I knew they'd play very deliberately and we'd have to be patient and wait for missed enough easy shots early in the game to turn it around though."

Allen Ravenscraft led the Viking scoring with 13 points, John Stamper was the only other Rowan Countian in double figures with 10. Stamper also led a balanced RCHS rebounding effort, with eleven. Robert Batta was the only West Virginian in double digits, scoring 10.

John Stamper scored 10 points and grabbed 11 rebounds for the Vikings last Friday night as Rowan County defeated Huntington St. Joe, 43-35. Rowan County is now 9-14 on the season and will play a make-up contest tonight with Menifee County. The game was originally set to be played at Menifee County, but it has been rescheduled at Rowan County's gym.

Morehead Releases Football Schedule

Morehead State University Director of Athletics G.E. Moran has announced an 11-game football schedule for the Eagles of Coach Tom Lichtenberg for 1980.

The slate, which carries six home games, features eight opponents from last year, and three additions.

Although not exactly a newcomer, Marshall University returns to the schedule after a two-year absence. The Thundering Herd will appear in Jayne Stadium in the season opener Sept. 6.

Also returning, but after a four-year absence, is Youngstown State. The Eagles face the Penguins, last year's NCAA Division II national runner-up, in Youngstown Oct. 18.

The only total newcomer to the slate is Liberty Baptist. MSU travels to Lynchburg, Va., for that contest Nov. 8.

Rounding out the schedule will be home encounters with non-conference foes James Madison and Kentucky

State and conference rivals Murray State, Tennessee Tech and Western Kentucky.

MSU road trips will include OVC action against Middle Tennessee, Austin Peay and Eastern Kentucky.

Breck Girls Drop Two Weekend Games

The University Breckinridge girls basketball team fell to 4-21 after losing to Woodford Co., 69-30 last Friday night.

"We played better than we have been, probably our best game of the year, unfortunately Woodford Co. is the best team we've played all season," Breck Coach Eddie Jones said.

The coach went on to say, "That's the mark of a young team, we play well against good competition and in consistently against lesser teams. If we had played Richmond Madison like we did Woodford Co., we would have won by 15."

Toni Bellamy led the Lady Eagles with nine points and seven rebounds. Sandy Carter had seven points and nine rebounds and Donna Jones added six points.

Breck dropped a contest to Richmond Model, 48-35 on Saturday.

"I think the excitement of being on the road might have affected our play," Jones said when commenting on the game Saturday. He added, "Overall our girls performed as well as should be expected."

Bellamy led Breck with 14 points and seven rebounds, while Carter pumped in 11 points and seven rebounds.

Morgan Co. Defeats Breck, 80-57

While University Breckinridge may have had little trouble disposing of Lexington St. Xavier, Thursday, Friday's road game at Morgan County saw the Eagles fall short of the Cougars 80-57.

"We started out pretty well even," said Dennis. "But they hit those six in a row and went up by six. We cut that to four by 24-20 by the end of the quarter, but they got hot again and were upon us 24-4 at halftime."

The Eagles abandoned their man-to-man defense after intermission, but proved flat on offense and dropped behind by as many as 20 before pulling to within 13 with a flurry midway through the third quarter. Then the Cougars hit another shooting streak and it was all but over for UBS.

"We just couldn't contain them inside," said Dennis, "and when we dropped in to help out, Bailey and Eagle burned us out."

"While you're always disappointed with a loss, Dennis, I do feel we played well, about as well as we could expect to play. Our floor game was good and I felt we handled the 1-3-1 zone trap very well. We just didn't shoot well," said Dennis.

Morgan County blistered the cords for an excellent 44 of 69 from the field, a 65% field goal percentage.

Joe Magrane turned in yet another stellar performance, leading the Breck attack with 20 points and the only UBS player in double figures. Morgan County's scorers were led by Chris Lumpkins with 26 and Jeff Bailey with 24. Also in double figures for the Cougars were Eagle with 19.

Quarter Scores

UBS	12	15	11	19
MCIS	10	12	22	22

Individual scoring UBS: Magrane 20, Bailey 8, Allen 6, Campbell 6, Wells 4, Huang 6, Hamilton 4, Bryant 2, Holbrook 1.

Morgan County: Lumpkins 26, Bailey 24, Eagle 19, Martin 4, Collins 1, Potter 4, Murphy 1, Potter 1.

DISCUSSING ISSUES — Senior Woodrow Stamper, (center) D-West Liberty and Senator Ken Gibson, D-Madisonville (right) talk about several of the difficult issues facing the 1980 General Assembly as they begin their 60-day session. Senator Gibson is chairman of the Agriculture and Natural Resources Committee and Senator Stamper is chairman of the Elections and Constitutional Amendments Committee.

HELP-Ribolt Committee Is Gaining Area Support

VANCEBURG — Angry Lewis Countians banning together to keep a proposed hazardous waste dump out of their area are gaining support from surrounding counties to help fight their cause.

A series of public meetings, attracting as many as 700 people, have been held since Feb. 14 in Vanceburg and Tollesboro and a committee named HELP-Ribolt (Help Eject Landfill Proposal) has been formed to coordinate activities to stop the toxic waste dump from being located at the small community of Ribolt.

At its last meeting Feb. 21, hundreds of publicity buttons were distributed and plans were announced for a citizens trip to Frankfort to present the state legislature with a united county-wide front of opposition to the site.

Bumper stickers saying "Dump Waste Another Place" were also donated by The Shopping News and distributed at the meeting.

According to Courtney Nease who heads the campaign committee, several cash donations have already been contributed including those of:

Citizens-Deposit Bank in Vanceburg and the Morehead Tobacco Warehouse. Developers of the proposed dump, Chemical Waste Management, an Illinois based firm, have filed an application with the Department of Natural Resources which must approve the proposal before it ultimately goes to the General Assembly and to the governor for final approval.

The HELP-Ribolt Committee is asking that individuals express their concern by writing to members of the Senate Agriculture and Natural Resources Committee as well as their own area representatives and senators in Frankfort.

All legislators may be reached by addressing their mail to the Senate, State Capitol Building, Frankfort, KY, 40601.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Sam Johnson at 796-2121.

Contributions may be sent to W. "Buddy" Grant, Box 383, Tollesboro, Ky. 41189.

Members of the HELP-Ribolt Committee are:

Charles J. Riedinger, chairman; Lloyd E. Spear, legal committee; Joe Gilbert, technical committee; Sam Johnson, publicity committee; Jackie "Ray" Cooper, legislative committee.

Kirby Wright, letters and petitions committee; W.B. "Buddy" Grant, finance committee; Courtney Nease, campaign committee; Phil Kennedy, information collection committee.

Others acting as advisors and assistants are:

Kirby Burton, technical committee; Tommy Barbour, publicity committee; Jimmy Staton, legislative committee; Ken Russell, legislative committee; Dr. Mitchell Denham, legislative committee; Denene Zornes, letters and petitions, and Sue Wood, letters and petitions.

'Night Of The Iguana' To Be Presented At MSU

Morehead State University will present Tennessee Williams' "Night of the Iguana" April 17-20, and 22-25.

The theatre production presented in environmental style, is set in South America in the year 1940 and involves a man and his struggle to understand and live with himself and his God.

Marvin Philips, associate professor of speech and theatre at MSU, will direct the production. Philips received his masters degree in fine arts from the Carnegie Institute of Technology and has been involved in grand operas, musical comedies and more than 45 non-musical theatre productions. Before joining the MSU faculty in 1967, he worked as a motion picture make-up

Members of the Kentucky State Police and the U.S. Treasury Department's Division of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF) are investigating the attempted bombing of the residence of an elderly, Blueberry Ridge couple near Olive Hill last Wednesday. According to authorities, Sammy Maddix, 82, and his wife, Ida, 76, received a call around 7 a.m. Wednesday informing Mrs. Maddix a bomb was in her front yard, she told police. She was told to stay in her home and to call the police for help.

The caller told Mrs. Maddix a second bomb was in the yard of a neighbor, Mary Bond, but a later search did not turn up a bomb at the Bond home. Mrs. Maddix told investigators she did not recognize the voice on the phone, but estimated the caller to be a middle-aged male.

When KSP Trooper Gary Stevens arrived at the scene, he found a bucket, used in a drilled well, loaded with nine sticks of dynamite about 50 feet from the couple's bedroom. Stevens said the approximately 15' non-electrical fuse connected to the bomb had burned down to the blasting cap; however, the cap had failed to discharge and ignite the explosives.

After the bomb was located, Dennis McCallister of the ATF office in Cannonsburg was called in to investigate. According to McCallister, the nine sticks of dynamite were 1 1/2" by 16", or about double the size of a normal stick of dynamite (1 1/4" by 9").

McCallister said the explosive was of sufficient force to have caused serious bodily injury to anyone inside the house, or possibly death.

While unable to give an exact reason for the blasting cap's failure until a report is received from the ATF lab in Washington, McCallister said it appeared water had seeped in around the cap, preventing it from discharging. All the evidence found at the scene was sent to the ATF lab for processing, McCallister stated.

McCallister, the ATF investigator on the bombing connected with the strike at Case, Inc., said rumors that the attempted bombing was connected with possible testimony Mrs. Maddix might give in the upcoming trials connected with the Case strike, was false. He said neither Mr. or Mrs. Maddix were witnesses in the Case trials.

In addition to Trooper Stevens and Agent McCallister, KSP Troopers Herman Holbrook and T.R. Jude are assisting in the investigation.

Anyone having any possible information concerning the incident is asked to call the Kentucky State Police Barracks in Ashland (928-6421).

Lady Eagles Play Eastern In KWIC Tournery Thursday

The MSU Lady Eagles will meet Eastern Kentucky in the first round of the KWIC tournament Thursday night in the University of Kentucky campus in Lexington.

Kentucky finished in first place and received a bye in the tournament field. At press time Monday some coin flips were still required to determine the other bracket spots.

The Lady Eagles finished the regular season by defeating Bellemine 83-66. Senior Donna Murphy led a balanced MSU scoring attack with 18 points. She also grabbed nine rebounds.

Michelle Stowers and Frances Moore each had 14 points. Robin Harmon pumped in 12 points and Martha Rust had 11.

MSU shot 51.3 percent from the field and 48.8 from the free throw line. The Lady Eagle defense limited Bellemine to just 37.7 percent from the field.

Women's Track Team Places 7th In Meet

Morehead State University's women's track team placed in six events for 18 points at the Tennessee Invitational for seventh place in the eight team field.

Tennessee won the meet with 140 points followed by Eastern Kentucky with 49, Western Kentucky 39, Memphis State 36, James Madison 21, East Tennessee State 20, MSU 18 and Virginia Tech 1.

Karen Porter, Perry Park freshman, took third in the mile run with a time of 5:10 and fourth in the two-mile run at 11:04.

Pat Reynard, Sloatsburg, N.Y. freshman, placed fifth in the shot put with a throw of 42.9. Donna Smitherman, Detroit, Mich. freshman, placed sixth in the 60-yard hurdles with a time of 8.5.

Barb Ferris, Columbus, Ohio sophomore, took sixth in the 800-yard run at 2:25.6 and the Lady Eagle mile relay team, Ferris, Tina Guerin, Sally Wampler, and Smitherman placed fourth with a time of 4:13.3.

Soil Conservation Law Will Affect Rowan Farmers

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is looking at some proposals which could have major, long-lasting effects on farmers and other land-users in Rowan County. These proposals could cause a substantial change in the operations of programs to conserve soil and water.

U.S.D.A. is making these proposals in response to a 1977 law "The Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act (RCA)."

There are seven alternative strategies based on an intensive two-year study of the condition of the country's soil and water resources. These proposals range from minor reorganization within the Department of Agriculture, to governmental regulations which would require land-users to practice soil conservation in order to avoid being penalized in the form of a fine or a tax or be required to reimburse the Government for cost sharing and technical assistance.

According to Mindy Bailey, soil conservationist in Rowan County, the public has until March 28 to review and comment on these seven conservation strategies.

Bailey says, "During the next four weeks we will continue to provide the public with information on each of the seven proposals. It is very important that all people in Rowan County become familiar with the RCA proposals and then let the U.S.D.A. know what you think about them."

The summary of the RCA proposals is available in the Soil Conservation Service office at 120 Normal Avenue.

To All Rowan County Property Owners

The tax rolls will be open from January 1, 1980 to March 1, 1980 for the purpose of listing your 1980 Tax Liabilities for the year 1980 (It is your Responsibility and Privilege to list your Property K.R.S. 132-990.11)

If you have added improvements or new construction or made a change of any kind during 1979, we need a current update as of January 1, 1980.

You need to list on your Mobile Homes, Watercraft, Commercial and all personal property tangible or intangible, etc. that applies to you. This is to prevent possible omitted bills, and penalties being issued.

If you will reach your 65th birthday during 1980, and own and maintain a residential unit as your personal residence, stop by the office and file an application to see if you qualify for the Homestead Exemption. This must be done during January and February 1980.

Thanks for your cooperation

Multi-County Forestry Field Day

There will be a multi-county Forestry Field Day during the second week in May. Counties involved are Bath, Rowan and Menifee. The event is being sponsored by the U.S. and Kentucky Forestry services, Extension Service, FFA and FFA Chapters, the Gateway Area lumber companies, heavy equipment dealers and the West Virginia Pulpmold and Paper Company.

as: sawing, chopping, wood splitting, and tree climbing contest. Any 4-H'er, FFA or FFA member who would like to take part should get in touch with your 4-H Agent, FFA and Home Economics teachers by the 1st of March. Event will be held at the Cave Run Lake Area.

Annual 4-H Variety Show A tentative date of Friday night, April 25, has been scheduled for the County 4-H Variety Show. The County Speech and Demonstration Event will be held during the month of March. For further information contact Paul Mills, 784-5457 or 784-8416.

Letter To The Editor

The Editor:

It has been a long hard battle for our small community to present itself as a capable, operating sixth class city. The struggle has been tiresome and the pressure has slowly begun to ease.

We fought opposition within our own camp and won. Our town has the same ambitions, pride, dreams of development, and independence as do all other small communities and large cities of this nation.

Tollesboro has just begun to breathe, and we have no intention of letting big power money and politics suffocate us at this point of the game without a fight.

We intend to maintain and preserve the constitutional rights that are due us without interference of outsiders who have no concern for our personal well-being and community development.

We, the citizens of Tollesboro and Lewis County ask, and pray, that our neighboring counties will join us in this fight against the proposed waste disposal sight at Kibolt.

It is up to us, the citizens, to fight for the preservation and development of this part of Kentucky which we all come home.

We do not need or want the consequences of such power and money brought into our communities by these corporations proposing such a sight or any other corporations that will leave long term hardships upon our area.

We intend to be at the front door and the back door of Waste Management, Inc. and anyone else affiliated with this project, fighting strenuously until the end.

We are not a group of dumb hillbillies, as I think was expected of us, who will yell, and protest a little, then succumb to the battle.

We sincerely hope that our neighbors, who also will be affected by this development, and the media of the surrounding area, will join us in our fight.

The willingness of more people to help those in need would make this a better society in which to live.

Mayhew Named Easter Seal Chairman

Mike Mayhew of Morehead has been named chairman of the 1980 Easter Seal campaign for crippled children in Rowan County.

The announcement was made by Dr. Harvey Sloane, Louisville, state campaign chairman. The annual appeal will be conducted from March 1 through April 6, Easter Sunday.

Contributions to the annual appeal will be used by the Kentucky Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults to provide rehabilitation services for physically handicapped Kentuckians.

Easter Seal centers operated by the society include Cardinal Hill Hospital, Lexington; West Kentucky Easter Seal Center, Paducah; Northern Kentucky Easter Seal Center, Covington; the Easter Seal Hearing and Speech

Center, Louisville; Geiger Easter Seal Center, Anderson; and Camp Kysbe and Camp Green Shores, at Carrlinton and McDaniels, respectively.

The Kentucky Society also supports the National Easter Seal Research Foundation. Dr. Sloane reported. More than 400 grants have been made by the foundation for research investigating the causes and means of preventing crippling and for improving rehabilitation techniques.

"Crippled children are the reason for Easter Seals. We are hopeful that they will prompt generous giving for crippled children in keeping with the Easter tradition," he continued.

The Kentucky Easter Seal Society needs the support of people in counties all over the state because its services are statewide.

adopted in 1977 that anytime a position is vacated for any reason, there had to be strong justification for hiring a replacement. While he said he was not calling that a freeze, it achieves the same results.

Education Committee Formed

Dr. Norfleet also announced the formation of an eight-member commission to study Morehead State's general education requirements. The 43-hour general education requirement program at the university has not been revised in the last 12 years, Norfleet said. He said that future plans call for updating the program every five years.

Dr. Norfleet called the commission's work a "very significant study."

were elected while two were appointed. Norfleet said the commission may issue its preliminary report as soon as early summer and may even complete it by late summer. He noted, however, those were not firm timetables.

The university president said the committee will not necessarily look at courses in light of increasing or decreasing them but will "look at every course offering from a depth and breadth standpoint."

Scholarship Funded

Dr. Norfleet also announced that the university had received a $10,000 donation to the scholarship fund, which is the largest single gift to the fund.

The donation was made by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hodgson and will be used to benefit students from the Elliott County community of Stark.

Norfleet said the first scholarship from the donation would be awarded in the fall of 1983.

Mr. and Mrs. Hodgson are originally from Stark.

Morehead Police Report

Ronnie Marshall, resident of White's Trailer Court East, was the victim of a hit-and-run accident Friday at noon.

Reportedly a neighbor heard a noise and, upon checking, saw a vehicle pull away from Marshall's car. Damage was to the left rear. Officer Kenneth B. Trent investigated.

A car was side-swiped as the result of being improperly parked on Oak Grove St., Sunday afternoon. Timothy L. Cium, 28, Morehead, was headed north on the street when he attempted to pass between two cars, both improperly parked. Officer Gordon Lambert recorded the accident.

A Morehead man was charged with driving under the influence, carrying a concealed deadly weapon and possession of marijuana Saturday at 12:47 a.m. Officers Rodney Salyer and Gary Gardner picked up Cecil E. Bowman, 28, Clearfield, on North Tolliver Road and upon search found a spring operated knife. At the Rowan County Jail, Bowman was found to have a small amount of marijuana.

Oil Shale Leases —

Although strip mining could devastate the landscape in Rowan County, several experts told The Morehead News last fall that it would not be anything like the coal fields of far-eastern Kentucky and in some cases might even improve the land.

The possibility even exists that strip mining will not be used at all, according to Addington officials who said they would investigate removing the oil shale through the in-situ method. Under that procedure, the oil shale is heated in underground pits with microwaves and brought to the surface as a liquid.

That procedure, however, is still in its experimental stages and may not prove effective in Kentucky where the oil shale is relatively close to the surface of the land.

While actual development of oil shale may be far off, several steps have brought it closer to reality in this area.

For one thing, the Buffalo Trace Area Development District has been named to receive a U.S. Department of Energy grant of $350,000 to determine the best method of constructing a 10,000-barrel per day commercial shale oil plant in its five-county area, most likely Lewis County.

For another, Addington Brothers have constructed a model retort in Olive Hill which is already processing small quantities of oil from shale. That shale has been hauled from Lewis County.

Among the things the General Assembly must face is the question of whether or not the state's current strip mining laws apply to oil shale as well as coal. Some legislators say it does while others disagree.

CPAs Talk About '79 Taxes

The Long And The Short Of It — A Taxing Decision

(Fourth in a series of articles)

Filing our income tax — the long form way — always seems so tedious, doesn't it? Even with a professional tax advisor to help us, there are all those records to keep, bills and receipts, and cancelled checks to sort out. The short form, with only a few lines to fill out, is a tempting alternative, especially as we get closer to April 15.

The IRS has made the short form (1040A) an even greater temptation for us this year by increasing the zero bracket amount. This year if you're single you can claim a $2,300 deduction, $3,400 if you are married and filing with your spouse. Exemptions, too, have increased this year, from $750 to $1,000.

According to the Kentucky Society of Certified Public Accountants, the short tax form is very handy for those who have had too much tax withheld from their pay and must file a return to get a refund. It can also be used by those with incomes under $10,000 who owe no taxes but have an earned income credit coming them. The IRS will let you file the short form if your income is solely from salaries, wages and tips, with no more than $400 in dividends or interest. If your adjusted gross income is over $28,000 ($40,000 on a joint return), then you cannot use the short form.

Most American taxpayers don't bother to itemize their deductions and some alternate between the short and long forms, bunching deductible expenses, such as extensive dental work, in the years they itemize. However, the short form appears, the question of which form to use is something you should reevaluate each year — long before April 15. Any change in your lifestyle, including one or more of the following, could warrant a re-evaluation of the method of filing.

—Purchase of a home. Interest and real estate taxes would almost certainly make itemizing worthwhile.

—Other large interest payments. Don't overlook interest from time-payment plans, loans, charge accounts and credit cards when the interest on back taxes paid for prior years.

—Unusual state and local tax payments. Again, include payments made in 1979 which apply to earlier years as well as generally higher current taxes, and perhaps prepayments of 1980 taxes you may have made. Large purchases during the year could have meant exceptionally high sales taxes.

—Unreimbursed business expenses incurred. The cost of performing your job other than commutation expenses may be deductible: uniforms, special work clothes, union dues, subscriptions to technical publications, tools and equipment. Business entertainment, an educational course to help you keep up with your present job.

—Expenditures for managing investments. Subscriptions to investment publications and services, costs of traveling to and from brokers' offices, tax advice and assistance, safety deposit box if used to store investment documents — all are deductible.

—Capital losses on sale of assets. This applies only to assets purchased for investment — not to such things as home, car, or boat.

—Large medical bills. Only amounts in excess of three percent of adjusted gross income are deductible, but taxpayers should not forget health insurance, drugs, and prosthetic devices such as eyeglasses, dentures, braces.

—Charity. Alimony is deductible for the payer, taxable income to the recipient. (Child support is neither although it will help decide which parent can claim the dependent exemption.) (The final article in this series, about preparing for an audit will appear Friday.)

Plant Board, Council Meet Tonight

The Morehead City Council and Morehead Utility Plant Board will meet in joint session tonight (Tuesday) at Heritage Place at 7:30 p.m.

The purpose of the joint session is to consider, and possibly act on, interim financing for the proposed water treatment plant and distribution system.

The interim financing, which will most likely take the form of municipal bonds, is needed because federal funding for the project is not available until it is completed.

Prior to the joint session, the Plant Board will meet at the Plant Board office on Bishop Ave. to act on bids for the purchase of a backhoe. These bids were opened during the last regular meeting on Feb. 14.

The board members will also take up the matter of employment for the waste water treatment plant.

The board members then will move to Heritage Place for the joint meeting.

In addition to the financing consideration, the City Council is expected to review the matter of employing a city engineer/building inspector. The city has reexamined the old position of building inspector so that it can have an engineer on the city payroll.

Accident Victim Improving

A Morehead man is in intensive care at the intersection of Kentucky and Cecil Drive following a car accident Friday morning on Knapp Ave.

At press time, Teddy Greene, son of Rev. and Mrs. Ted Greene, was said by his father to be doing "some better" with his vital statistics remaining stable.

Greene suffered head injuries in an accident thought to have been caused by brake failure.

A witness, traveling behind Greene at the time of the accident, told police he saw the brake lights on Greene's van appear twice as the vehicle approached the intersection of Knapp and Cecil Drive.

Leonard Miller, W. Va., said he saw Greene jump out of the van and roll 8-10 feet on the ground as the van continued to move. The vehicle traveled 95 feet, going through the intersection, then leaving the road to strike a light pole and fence before stopping.

Officer Ronald W. Farley investigated the accident. Greene was taken by the Morehead-Rowan County Ambulance Service to St. Claire Medical Center before being transferred to U.K. Medical Center.

Campaigning For Presidency Was Vastly Different In 1800s

What computer and television technology is doing for today's presidential campaigns, torchlight parades and other political hoopla accomplished for electors already in the history books.

Picture this scene: Hartford, Conn., a night shortly before the election of 1860. Abraham Lincoln's backers, known as the Wide-Awakes, parade through the streets carrying huge frame boxes wrapped in thin cotton and stamped with political slogans. Illuminated from the inside by their torches, the home-made transparencies tower over the line of marchers, dramatically lighting up the night sky.

Today, television ad campaigns, debates, interviews and direct mail operations have replaced many other colorful gimmicks the candidates once used to compete for press coverage and public attention.

In the 1800s, for example, it was popular for a business that supported a candidate to link its products to his name, resulting in the candidate endorsing such items as shoes, sewing thread and tobacco.

And probably never to be seen again are the ideas dreamed up for the extravagant 1840 contest between William Henry Harrison and Martin Van Buren. In what must have been a very mobile campaign, Harrison's backers pulled around symbolic log cabins to give the aristocratic Harrison an image of humble, down-home origins. They also hit on the idea of rolling a large, slogan-covered ball from Washington to Baltimore to draw attention to the candidate and his platform.

Not overlooked in the days was the importance of building an identifiable image for the candidates; the task was as crucial then as it is now. "It was important from the early elections to associate the candidate with something," says Herbert Collins, curator of political history at the Smithsonian's National Museum of History and Technology.

From the first, military careers were stressed. Washington, Jackson, Harrison, Zachary Taylor, Grant and others found their general's stars helpful in winning votes, but other work and careers — "Abe, the Rail Splitter" — also were woven into the campaigns. Many of the earliest, as well as Jimmy Carter's 1976 outsider approach, emphasized the candidate's concern for and connection with the common man.

Thousands of objects — most of them common, a few valuable and some quite strange — have been enlisted over the years. Many of these now are part of the Smithsonian's collection of political memorabilia: buttons, stick pins, bumper stickers, flags, bandannas, kerchiefs, ceramics, pillows, hats, songs, animals, coins, cartoons, advertisements, torches, lanterns, scarves, T-shirts, posters, lunch pails, buckets, decals, mugs, signs, umbrellas, sewing kits, dishes, sunglasses, spare tire covers, pencils, pens, playing cards, dolls and peanuts.

Take hats, for example. Candidates have worn stovepipes, derbies, beanies, cootchieks, sletsons, silk hats and beavers. (Harrison was one candidate who did not wear a hat and it may have shortened his life; he died from pneumonia a month after his rainy inauguration.)

From Washington's time to about 1840, most campaign items were made at home by a candidate's backers. But as the Industrial Revolution gained momentum, manufacturers began producing political glass and ceramic items and printing textiles with portraits of the candidates and their slogans.

Many of the early ceramic pitchers were produced in England, often leading to confusion. The English craftsmen would ship campaign goods for different candidates — but with the same distorted portrait on each. "They had in mind that all the founding fathers looked alike," Collins says. In 1840, a merchant in Alexandria, Va. (then part of Washington, D.C.), sent instructions to a English manufacturer to create a ceramic pitcher with a log cabin on one side and a portrait of Harrison on the other. The shipment arrived bearing the English concept of the cabin — a log cottage, complete with a rose garden.

The number and variety of campaign objects increased rapidly after 1860. Cloth-covered lapel buttons appeared in the last quarter of the 19th century, followed by celluloid in the 1890s and tintype versions in the 20th century. The political marching groups of the late 1800s also spurred the demand for torches and lanterns.

After 1900, political materials became more subdued, but in recent years, according to Collins, some campaign art is looking colorful again, moving away, for example, from the one-word button that sprang out of the 1940s. Today, the button is still the most widely used political device.

Political cartoons descended from the 18th century, still adds dash to election years. In fact, the two national party symbols, the donkey and the elephant, originated from the pen of Thomas Nast, a cartoonist at Harper's Weekly during the 1870s.

Vilification, often associated with cartoons, also has strong ties to old election campaigns. Some years are worse than others, but a low point probably was reached in the campaign of 1864, when the Republicans attempted to smear Grover Cleveland with stories of his alleged indiscreet dalliance with a Buffalo widow who had borne him a child. "Ma, ma, where's my Pa? Gone to the White House, Ha! Ha! Ha!" went one chant. The Democrats came right back with "Blaine, Blaine, James G. Blaine, Continental Liar from the state of Maine," referring to charges that the Republican candidate received kickbacks from the railroads while a member of Congress in the 1870s.

Today, the national political party headquarters screen much of the political material produced by American and foreign firms. In 1968, for example, several Oriental companies exported to the United States, American flags in which the portraits of Nixon or Humphrey were centered, a use of the flag made illegal in 1907. The flags were stopped at both party headquarters.

Campaigning in the 19th century set many styles and precedents still followed today — wearing political buttons, for example — but in many ways the race for the White House now pales with contests already in the history books when it comes to color and hoopla. Pictured here is an illustration of a dramatic, night-time parade in New York City by Lincoln backers, the Wide-Awakes, on Oct. 2, 1860. Below is a pack of playing cards from the 1888 campaign between Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland.

Earliest Rowan County Papers Unknown By A Single Existing Copy

The sixteen page 1898 "City of the Hills" edition of the Morehead Advance (established in the mid-nineties) is the earliest local Rowan County paper known to survive. The editor, Republican W.F. "Fewclowes" Schooler, ran for the legislature in 1897. His was not the county's earliest journal. A Maysville paper noticed the impending publication of the Morehead Times in 1884, and in 1893 a Winchester weekly declared that a paper by that title was "improving right along." Papers came and disappeared in such short order in those days that there is no guarantee that these were the same paper. In late 1891 the Morehead Star began publication. It is possible that the Licking Valley Scorchor or Mountain Scorchor of the late 1870's may have at one time been published in Morehead, though the likelihood of its being published in West Liberty appears greater.

Perhaps the best hope for learning about these earliest newspapers is a letter W. Allen wrote Mrs. L. Hoggie in October, 1940. Allen was an old newspaper man and though he could not remember the names of the papers, he could remember the names of some of the editors. "An old fellow by the name of Barnes," he declared, "ran the first paper. He had an office up near Uncle Hugh Clark's." Then the Batemans started their paper. They didn't last long, so a fellow by the name of Sullivan took over the plant and he ran off or had to leave town." W. Allen further recollected that "then Schooler comes into the picture with the Advance. I think, No, I believe Fred Powers and Sam Bradley had the paper before Schooler, and J. Edward Vail and I had a rival sheet called the Leader. Doc Wilson ran his famous 'Blue Jacket' letters in our paper."

Hopefully some native Rowan Countians can unscramble this mystery. The more one digs into Rowan County history the more one appreciates the importance of Sam Bradley who seemed to have his hands into just about every economic enterprise that might benefit the county. Hopefully, his papers will show up some day. I hope that copies of some of these early papers will also be found.

Other early papers include the Mountaineer (established 1902), which had a checkered career: it collapsed in 1904 under Professor E.W. McDermid, was published by Williams in 1907, was run by Everett L. Dix in 1908-1909 (the married Lottie Stewart, a niece of F.C. Button), was edited by Cora Wilson Stewart in 1914 who promoted moonlight schools through its columns, and was run by W.T. Abbot in 1918. By 1923, at the latest, Abbot was at Grayson in Carter County, publishing the East Kentucky Journal. S.S. Cassidy came out with his East Kentucky Citizen in 1909. Cassidy had previously published the Hazel Green Herald and the Bath County News. Cassidy returned to Rowan County in 1925 to produce the Mountain Scorchor which did not long survive his 1927 death.

Today's Morehead News is the result of the 1945 union of the Rowan County News and the Morehead Independent. Early editors of the Rowan County News include F.D. Durham, S. Lee McGowan and Jack Wilson. Jack Wilson who was born in Hartington, Nebraska, and went to Hartington Parochial School and then to Wayne State College in Nebraska. After teaching in Nebraska, he emigrated. After World War I was over he turned to newspapering in Oklahoma and Nebraska and then on August 13, 1925 came to Morehead. Jack Wilson was at the shop late on October 16, 1940 when he suffered what may have been a heart attack and died within hours. His sister, Grace Ford, carried on the paper and merged with the Morehead Independent and was taken over by William "Snooks" Crutcher. The Independent was found in the 1930s and was owned by William J. Sample for most of the paper's life. George Calvert was his linotype operator and until the flash flood of early July of 1938, the paper was housed in the Bishop Building on First or Railroad Street. In 1940 the Sample Building was built and the Morehead Independent moved into its new offices.

Kentucky Publishing's Outdoors With Soc

By Soc Clay, Wildlife Editor

They were first introduced to the readers of The Morehead News in 1961 as the "Three Outlaws." Grizzled men, unshaven and tough looking, they were holding four of the biggest fish that anyone in the area had seen from home-town waters.

Later they would be recognized far and wide as part of the famed "Lost Creek Muskies Clan."

lot younger, would accompany him on these trips that would last a weekend or a week, depending on how the fish were biting.

The head of Tygart Creek was his home — a water tower and above Kehoe his headquarters for the past 50 years. He was a muskie fisherman before he was 10 years old and a rare breed to be found along the lonely stretches of the stream during the depression years.

He was hooked on a life-long pursuit of the biggest of Kentucky's fresh water game fish by an advent that stands out clear in his mind today.

Kentucky Afraid

By JOHN WILSON

Department Of Fish And Wildlife

Just because winter seems to be slowly withdrawing, don't assume that all the dangers associated with cold weather are leaving with it. The probability of getting into serious — or even fatal — trouble while outdoors in late winter and early spring is as great, if not greater, now than in the dead of winter.

More people will be out fishing, canoeing or hiking as the days warm. Many of them may not be prepared for sudden changes in the weather. A cap-sized boat, even on a 70-degree day, may toss a fisherman into 50-degree water, where he can remain conscious for less than half an hour.

Wet clothing (either from a dunking or from a sudden rain) coupled with strong winds can lower the body's internal temperature to dangerous levels, even when air temperatures are in the 50s. Most garment materials (wool is an exception) lose their insulating value when wet. Winds increase evaporation, which has an even further cooling effect on the body.

While this lowering of the body's core temperature (called hypothermia) isn't technically the same as "freezing to death," the results can be just as permanent. A drop of only two degrees from the normal 98.6 degrees can bring on the first symptoms of hypothermia — uncontrolled shivering, followed by loss of mental powers, muscular rigidity, unconsciousness and, if internal temperature drop below 70 degrees, death.

So be particularly alert during cool-weather outings. Watch for both in yourself and you companions, shivers, slurred speech, irrational behavior — like the sufferer was "drugged or drunk" — and clumsiness.

The treatment for hypothermia is to reverse the body's heat loss. In mild cases, getting the victim into a warm place (a heated building or a sleeping bag with another person) is generally enough.

In severe cases, however, it's important that the head, shoulders, chest, abdomen and feet be warmed first. If the arms and legs are warmed too rapidly, blood is drawn away from the body's core area and increased internal cooling, called "afterdrop" can occur, sending the victim into sometimes fatal shock.

After initial treatment, be sure to seek professional medical aid. Don't rely on the victim's own assessment of his condition — remember that a loss of reasoning power is one of the first effects of hypothermia.

If you're going to be around water at all, wear a personal flotation device. Exposed to cold (below 50 degrees) water renders even the strongest swimmer helpless in a matter of minutes. Also keep foul weather gear handy on any outing, along with a change of clothes and matches (in a waterproof container) for starting a fire.

In other words, remember your Boy Scout days and be prepared. Winter and spring outings are fun and can be safe if you are alert to, and make proper preparations for, their dangers.

they were residents of Ashland. But their actions were far more important to a youngster of about 13 than was their home address.

The woman was the one who gave the alarm. She came running through the shallows shouting that there were large fish above the ford going crazy.

The men finished tying on large lures and ran to where the woman pointed to boils on the surface. Feeding muskie! Tearing into school-upt water suckers at the edge of the ford!

They casted and lost a fish. A mighty cussin' set in, Elmer remembers as a frustrated fisherman in his excitement tore the hooks out of the mouth of a big muskie. Another hit the fluttering spoon and it too was loskin in the frenzy of action.

"I never heard such cussin' in my life," remembers Elmer who was bank fishing with an uncle in a pot hole below the ford when the commotion commenced.

"I ran to see what was going on and one of the men finally hooked a big muskie and landed it, quickly tying it to a sapling on the bank with a piece of hay baling wire. They were extremely excited and I guess their action plus seeing the biggest fish I'd ever seen in my life, simply got into my blood that day and it hasn't yet. I really don't expect it to ever leave," Elmer said.

The described event occurred in the early 30's and Elmer was to get started in muskie fishing on a serious basis a couple of years later when an uncle game him a battered-up Creek Chub Pike lure.

He pursued the sport of fishing for the big fish of eastern Kentucky streams for a number of years before his reputation as a good muskie fisherman finally surfaced.

His uncle, Bill Stephens, and his cousin, Thurman, were with him the day the "Three Outlaws" title was hung on them.

"We were working a big hole in the Licking near Muscle Shoals and having some dog-gone good luck," Elmer explained. "By noon, we'd landed two muskies and had them on a stringer over the side of the boat. Roundin' a bend in the creek, we came up face to face with a baptism in the middle of a riffle. We didn't want to disturb the folks, we just kind of hung around at the head end of the hole and waited.

Finally, I couldn't wait any longer. I knew the muskie were ripe and there was a might fine hole above where the baptism was taking place. So we sort of worked our way through the folks, makin' us little racket as possible for three men, a boat and two floppin' muskie and made it to the deep water on the other side. That afternoon, we hooked three more big fish, landed two of them and lost the other."

Later, the threesome was caught at Grayson by a newspaper editor and a photo and news item were printed in the Grayson Journal Enquirer. The item was picked up by The Morehead News and the description, "Three Outlaws," was tagged on the Lost Creek fisherman because they looked so rough in the photo. By the time Cave Run dam was finished, Elmer had established himself as a group of his close relatives and friend as the "Lost Creek Muskies Clan," a title that is known today throughout Kentucky and surrounding states where muskie fishermen gather to spin yarns about their angling exploits.

The Clan consisted of Elmer, John Messer, and Bill Gandy, Thurman, Carl Raymond and Paul Stephens all related with the exception of Messer.

Over the years, they are credited with catching more muskies in eastern Kentucky than all other muskie-fishing groups combined. Just how many fish? "I don't rightly know," Elmer replied. "Me and Uncle Lillard Gilbert caught more than 60 legal size fish (30 inches or better) in five years and after that I quit countin'."

In the early years of Elmer's fishing, he admits to being selfish about telling anyone where a muskie was located. "I caught a fish from my favorite pool on the Licking River and a fellow seen me land it. Next week when I went back to try the hole again, 10 boats were there to greet me," he said.

Most of the time when someone asked about where he made a catch, he simply didn't say anything. Later, though, he decided keeping all that important information to himself wasn't very sporting so he began to make a policy of telling everyone who would listen about where muskies could be found and the best ways he knew about how to catch the trophy game fish.

Because of this change in attitude, it has been said that more than 100 serious muskie fishermen have been introduced to the sport by Elmer down through the years. He also has a reputation of being perhaps the best muskie fisherman in the tri-state region.

Muskie Joe Slamper is the best muskie fisherman on the Kinniconick, but Elmer Claxon is the best every where else," one fisherman proclaimed.

Elmer and other members of the Lost Creek Muskies Clan had mixed emotions about the proposed construction of the Kehoe Reservoir which would have backed up the headwaters of Tygart Creek — a stream that Elmer believes is one of the best muskie waters in the state. The waters of Kehoe would have covered such famed muskie pools as Kibby Bend, High Banks, Swirl Hole, the Ramey Hole and Huffman Ford. To Elmer, who has fished these familiar places ever since he was a child and taken countless muskie and bass from their fish-filled waters, the construction of the dam would have been sad for the Clan. But he felt the new lake might provide some much-needed jobs in the area and he didn't really think you could resist the federal government anyway. So, he was the first to agree to the construction.

Today, he is glad the proposed project has been shelved and hopes it never surfaces again. The old familiar haunts that would be flooded are just too close to him and other members of the famed muskie fishing group.

One lake he is extremely delighted with is Cave Run. Describing the 8,600-acre lake as "the best muskie lake south of the Great Lakes," Elmer and other members of the Clan are found there frequently. It is on Cave Run where others, who have been influenced by Elmer and the Clan to give muskie fishing a try, will most often be found. Many of today's muskie fishermen simply don't care to fight shallow riffles, muddy water and poor access that goes hand in hand with stream fishing in this area of Kentucky.

To Elmer and the Clan, however, the streams are where real action is to be found. Elmer believes the running water of Licking, Tygart and Kinniconick is also the place to find the state's biggest muskie.

"I fished for the state record that was caught from the Licking a few years back. For five years, I threw everything I owned at it and finally hooked him, only to lose the fish because of a tangled-up dip net," Elmer said.

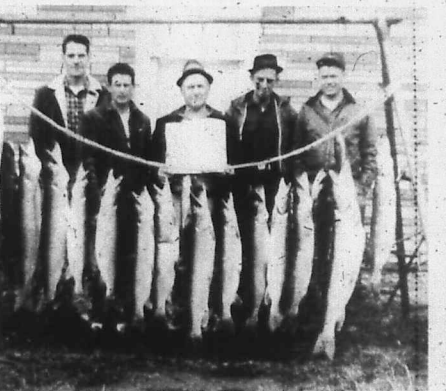

To date, Elmer's biggest fish and the largest for the Clan as a whole, was a 32-pounder taken from the Licking a few years ago. Last year, Elmer took a 47-inch muskie from Tygart Creek that had the largest head he ever saw on a muskie. But the long fish was lean and a scale test, conducted by the Department of Fish and Wildlife, indicated it was old enough to have been a real trophy, but an apparent lack of forage caused the muskie to weigh only a little more than 21 pounds.

For several years, Elmer and the Lost Creek Muskies Clan have been involved in a friendly fishing battle with two South Shore muskie men, Ken and Boyd Ratliff, known all around the area as the "Muskie Twins."

Jibes, claims and counter-claims have been exchanged between the two groups for several years each claiming to be the superior fishing group. Elmer believes a great fish-out is the only way to end the feud. "But I doubt if those boys down at South Shore, er, what's their names, is it Ratliff? Anyhow, I don't expect they'd ever agree to some real muskie fishin' competition!" And so the rivalry continues.

ELMER CLAXON, leader of the famed Lost Creek Muskies Clan, shows the head of the longest muskie he's ever taken. The fish measured 47 inches in length, but poor foraging caused the muskie to be very thin.

LOST CREEK MUSKIES CLAN. From left, John Messer, Gary Stephens, Elmer Claxon, Russel Stephens and Thurman Stephens show off 16 muskies and two bass they caught over a period of a few weekends some years back. The largest fish was 32 pounds; the smallest was 12. The bass came along just for fun.

State Aircraft Deaths Decline

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Aviation fatalities in Kentucky increased 25 percent in 1979, according to state Transportation Department statistics. The department's aeronautics division recorded 29 fatalities in 1979 as opposed to 24 air-related deaths reported in 1978.

"Most of the 39 air crashes that occurred in 1979 can be attributed to the usual causes — pilot error, engine failure or bad weather," said Ben Prewitt, aeronautics safety and education officer.

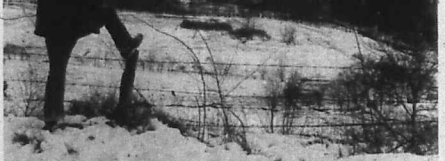

About 15 percent of the 1979 crashes were weather-related accidents, half of which resulted in fatalities. The division also reported that overloaded planes resulted in the loss of 18 lives during the year.

Prewitt said that while fatalities increased 25 percent, the number of plane crashes actually decreased by the same percentage.

"The past year simply witnessed several crashes involving multiple fatalities," Prewitt said. "Four people were killed in one crash, seven in another, and the worst accident took eight lives."

The statistics show that most air accidents and fatalities occur during the warm weather months. Prewitt credited this fact to heavier air traffic during that time of the year.

HIDDEN VALLEY — Elmer Claxon looks down on the area where he has been muskie fishing for the past 50 years. Tygart's Creek, in the distance, is just a short haul by boat from Iron Hill in Carter County.

Disabled and blind children as well as adults may be eligible for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments. Robert Stapp, Social Security District Manager in Ashland, has recently received monthly cash payments to disabled or blind people of any age who are in financial need. People 65 or over who have little or no income and few assets also may get SSI checks.

A parent or guardian can apply for SSI payments on behalf of a child. A child's Federal SSI payment can be as much as $208.30 a month. Not everyone gets this amount. Some get less because of other income they or their parents may have.

under 21 if in school, depends on their parents' income and assets. Part of the parents' income and assets count in deciding the child's eligibility. Eligibility of an older child is based on his or her own income and assets.

People at the Ashland Social Security Office can provide more information about SSI for children. A free leaflet, "SSI for Disabled or Blind Children," also contains additional information. Copies can be obtained at the Ashland Social Security Office.

Mt. Sterling's Caroline Windsor Has Original Snyder Fishing Reels

By ALICE AKIN Staff Writer

MT. STERLING — The remarkably fine fishing reels of the late George W. Snyder, Paris, Ky., silversmith and watchmaker, have recently generated much historical interest.
Their value would be difficult to calculate and for Montgomery County's Caroline VanZandt Windsor, the old reels also have a sentimental worth to which no price tag could be attached.
She is the great-granddaughter of Snyder and inherited the reels from her father, the late George Reynolds Snyder Jr., a Mt. Sterling farmer and one-time owner of the Cherrywood estate on Winchester Road.
Although Ms. Windsor can comfortably rattle off the histories of her many relatives including the Prewitts, Reids, Kitchens and Snyders, she has to rely mostly on what has been written about the reels was that he was irritated with the single reel and wanted to improve his fishing so he thought this type of reel up in his head and then made it," Ms. Windsor said.

Little is actually known about Snyder. According to records, he moved from Pennsylvania to Kentucky in 1803 and was president of the Bourbon County Angling Club in 1810.
He began making multiplying reels for himself and for members of the fishing club who developed a novel angling technique of casting live bait directly from a reel.
The exact date he produced the first free-running spool geared to four revolutions to one turn of the reel handle is not known, but it was sometime between 1803 and 1810.
Words of his invention — the forerunner of today's modern bait-casting reels — spread and other Kentucky

Walter VanZandt Windsor, 21, a junior majoring in religion at Transylvania, and her daughter, Caroline Virginia Windsor, 26, of Paducah.
"I think all people, young and old, are more involved with tracing their family histories these days," commented Ms. Windsor.
Caroline Windsor intends to keep researching the life of her famous great-grandfather who died in 1813 and is buried in an old cemetery in Paris.
"I want to find out all I can about him," she said.
Meanwhile, she is constantly on the search for Snyder silver and hopes to add to the collection she keeps at the bank.
"I guess the people at the bank wonder what I'm doing flying in there all the time and looking at the reels," Ms. Windsor quipped, "but I really enjoy having them."

Snyder Sr., a silversmith and watchmaker of Paris, Ky., are kept in a safety deposit box at The Exchange Bank of Kentucky in Mt. Sterling. her great-grandfather who is credited with being the first to make the "Kentucky Reel."
"I really don't recall ever hearing too much about him," Ms. Windsor said. "But I think it is amazing he invented the reel and made it," she added.
"It's too bad he never got a patent on it," she interjected.
Although George W. Snyder has gone down in history as the American pioneer of bait-casting reels, he also made his mark as a fine watchmaker and silversmith and Ms. Windsor has several of his signed silver spoons, some of them coin silver, which, along with the fishing reels, are tucked away in a safety deposit box at The Exchange Bank of Kentucky in Mt. Sterling.
"I think the main reason he invented jewelers refined the Kentucky multiplier into the finest of its kind.

Mason Brown, a judge in Frankfort, obtained one of the reels and asked local watchmaker, Jonathan Meek, to duplicate it. This occurred around 1830.
Ten years later, Jonathan Meek and his brother, Benjamin, had further improved the Snyder reel and were selling their hand-crafted multipliers for about $50.
"I really have no idea how much the Snyder reels are worth today," said Ms. Windsor, pointing out the delicate craftsmanship that went into each brass reel.
Ms. Windsor, whose social credentials include membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution, Colonial Dames, Montgomery County Historical Society, Montgomery County Woman's Club and the Central Kentucky Woman's Club is also a member of The Order of the Crown in America and the Order of Baronesses of Runnymede.
She moved back to her native Montgomery County a year ago last September from Paducah.
Ms. Windsor keeps reams of family historical data in her home and loves to leaf through the old ledgers and journals kept by her father's family as well as her mother, Mrs. Richard (Virginia Kitchen) VanZandt, of Ashland.
"I'm particularly more interested in family history since I've moved back here," Ms. Windsor said.
Her interest is shared by her son,

Long Lost 18th Century Artist Rediscovered

Setting sail for America in 1784, Robert Edge Pine, a British portrait painter down on his luck, carried with him one very valuable asset: a letter of introduction to George Washington.

Written by Virginian landowner George William Fairfax, an old neighbor and friend of Washington, the letter described Pine as "fine a gentleman can be, but he made so many enemies in this selfish nation that he is compelled to go to America to seek bread in this profession that he is of the first Artists in the Isle."

This was both the sad climax to Pine's British career and the happy beginning of the painter's brief but productive period immortalizing eminent American statesmen and revolutionary heroes, among them, Benjamin Franklin, Gen. Washington and Declaration of Independence signers Robert Morris and Thomas Stone.

Despite the importance of the subjects he painted, Pine's works generally were unknown, mainly because few of them survived. But once Stewart located a portrait of Robert Morris, the Portrait Gallery decided it was time to hold a show of this all-but-forgotten artist.

Born about 1720 — the exact date is unknown, as is the extent of Pine's artistic education — the painter achieved early recognition in England, according to Stewart. Pine won prizes from the Society for the Encouragement of the Arts in 1750 and again in 1783. But he failed to be elected to the Royal Academy, possibly because of a long-smouldering rivalry with Sir Joshua Reynolds, another leading portraitist, and perhaps because of his own cantankerous temperament and well-known anti-monarchist politics. He left England, arriving in 1784 in Philadelphia, where he was joined later by his wife and daughters.

Although Pine's years in the New World were few — he died in 1788 — his accomplishments were many. Stewart contemporaries in this country, Gilbert Stuart (above) excepted."

After Pine's death, his widow and her daughters sold his collection of paintings and returned to England. Daniel Bowen, one of America's earliest museum keepers, bought the bulk of the collection, moving the works to New York in April 1794 where they remained until the next year when Bowen's Columbian Museum in Boston opened. Tragically, in January 1803, fire destroyed the museum with all its says. In connection with an exhibition of his work. Pine published the first recorded art exhibition catalog printed in the United States. He was the first person in the New World to build an art gallery and he painted at least 88 portraits and partially completed four large historical paintings.

These portraits of George Washington and George Washington Parke Custis, Martha Washington's grandson by her first marriage, were painted by Robert Edge Pine, a British artist who traveled to the United States in 1784 and portrayed many early American statesmen and revolutionary heroes. The paintings are part of an exhibit of Pine's work at the Smithsonian Institution's National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C.

To paint portraits from life, Pine found it necessary to travel, visiting Mount Vernon in 1785 where George Washington, who was soon to be elected President, and Washington's adopted grandchildren sat for him. Pine then headed north to Annapolis. There, he later wrote, Washington, he was "painting the portraits of Patriots, Legislators, Heros, and Beauties."

One of Pine's techniques, developed as a result of his travels, sometimes produced odd results. Because large canvases were too cumbersome to carry on the poor roads, Stewart explains, Pine's custom was to paint the heads of his subjects on small, thin pieces of canvas and then make pencil sketches of their figures on another surface. At home, Pine would paste the heads on large canvases and proceed to finish the bodies. But more than once, he confused one pencil sketch with another and gave his subjects bodies belonging to other individuals, resulting in the amusing substitution of a slender figure for a more portly one.

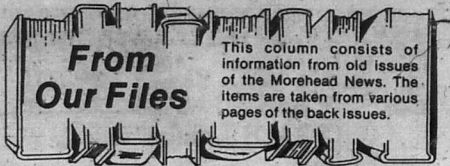

Nevertheless, Pine was enthusiastically received in America, where his reputation became firmly established. Katherine MacCauley Graham, a prominent English intellectual and world traveler, viewing Pine's portrait of George Washington in 1786, said it "bore the strongest resemblance to the original of any I have seen." The noted American portrait painter Rembrandt Peale considered him "a conjurer, with his mahlick wand and the rainbow tints of his palette." The art historian William Dunlap concurred, commenting "that for coloring, Pine is much beyond any of the artists, his collections, including Pine's British pictures and all his important American historical works.

It is only through the portraits that remained in private collections that anything of his style can be learned.

Stewart tracked down these surviving Pine portraits, which he now on view until January 6, 1980, at the National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C. Included are the portraits of Washington, Stone, Morris and Franklin — all depicted as majestic heroic figures. The ladies of the period, Mary Nevett, Lydia Ridgely, Betsy Patterson, are portrayed as totally feminine, glorified, sensual.

According to Stewart, "Robert Edge Pine's paintings of American leaders of the Revolution deserve an important place in history as perceptive portraits of the character and personality, the strengths and weaknesses of his subjects."

Conference Set Here

More than 100 educators and community leaders will participate in the annual meeting of the Anthropologists and Sociologist of Kentucky on Saturday, March 1, at Morehead State University.

The conference will feature Dr. Kai Erikson, professor of sociology at Yale University, as the keynote speaker.

Dr. Erikson, award-winning author and recipient of the American Sociological Association Sorokin Award for "outstanding research," will discuss "American History and the Idea of Culture."

The author of "Everything in Its Path," a sociological analysis of the Buffalo Creek disaster, will focus his discussion on Appalachia.

Registration begins at 9 a.m. with Dr. Erikson's program scheduled for 10 a.m. in Room 419 of B.F. Reed Hall.

A panel discussion will highlight the afternoon session with scholars and community leaders discussing "Urban Appalachian Migration."

Moonshining Encouraged For Gasohol, That Is

FRANKFORT — Moonshining — for the purpose of gasohol production — is legal and encouraged by state government officials.

Persons interested in producing or distributing the gasoline and alcohol mixture can find loans from sources such as the Farmers Home Administration or Small Business Administration, said Fred Waters, deputy commissioner of agriculture.

Mr. Waters and Dr. Randall Harra, a deputy director in the Department of Energy, returned from a trip last week to Washington, D.C., where they talked with congressmen and federal officials about funds available for gasohol production.

"There is not any money specifically earmarked for gasohol," Mr. Waters said, "federal funding in the future depends on whether Congress passes the windfall profits tax on oil companies, he explained.

State government is promoting gasohol because it will aid the grain farmer, create employment and help make America more energy self-sufficient, Mr. Waters said. The Department of Agriculture coordinates its efforts with the departments of Commerce and Energy in order to achieve these goals, he said.

"Agricultural products have kept the county from going broke" by counteracting the balance of trade deficit resulting from foreign oil imports, Mr. Waters said. Yet grain farmers barely make enough profit to continue production, he noted.

"Even in an inflated economy, the price of corn is less than it was several years ago," he said. A larger market for grain would ease the grain farmer's plight, he added.

Using a renewable resource will give Kentucky an efficient substitute for oil, Waters said. "With gasohol, we can conserve and go all the way back to the land with the by-products," he said. Grain used to produce ethanol alcohol leaves a residue that can be fed to cattle, Waters explained. The manure can be salvaged and fermented to create more alcohol and fertilizer, he said.
