Behind The Political Scene

Eisenhower Moves To Make Friends With Dems, GOP

President Dwight D. Eisenhower is now demonstrating the political talent he used so effectively as Supreme Commander of the Allies during World War II, and as Supreme Commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's armed forces more recently. The new Republican President is making a careful effort to cultivate the friendship of both Republicans and Democrats on Capitol Hill.

While most of us accept that as our goal, sometimes we fall short of it when tempted to engage in bitter partisan debate. The President also knows that there are two elements within his own party and that he has the slimmest of margins in the House. Therefore, any close legislative tie would require two-party support if the Executive Department's views were to prevail.

Report Stockpile Of Critical Materials Ample

The Munitions Board recently reported to Congress that the U. S. defense stockpile of critical materials was in better shape than it had been since ordered assembled by Congress several years ago. At the end of 1952, the report stated, the value of the defense stockpile was $4,924,622,630.

The board reported that the six-months period in the latter half of 1952 had seen a decline in withdrawals and diversions from the stockpile. (When the Korean War began and certain materials were urgently needed,

Urge Preparations Now For This Year's Corn Crop

Corn Facts - Corn planting time is just around the corner and it's not too early to start preparations for record yields in 1953. Yields of 75 to 100 bushels are becoming common in Kentucky, and we should look forward to average state yields of 50 bushels in the near future. The highest average state yield to date has been in 1948.

Higher yields will come from better land use - keeping corn on more level land; tending soil and using an abundance of needed plant food; planting to get 10 to 12 thousand plants per acre; side dressing with nitrogen and controlling weeds.

Kentucky-grown certified hybrid seed corn is still the best kind to plant. Ky. 103 to US 13 are the best yellow hybrids and Ky. 203 to US 5239 are tops in white kinds.

Some folks still burn corn stalks. They probably don't realize that as much nitrogen is lost by burning one ton of stalks as is contained in 15 to 18 bushels of corn.

Erosion on an average Kentucky hillside is estimated to cause 22 times more loss of soil nutrients than is removed by crop of corn. Often, where erosion practices are not used, each bushel of corn costs one-fourth cent. Contour cultivation not only reduces erosion but it increases yield.

Pasture Facts - Two weeks grazing of wheat and barley, and a longer period for rye, when the crop is five or six inches high, often saves the young grass and legume seedlings. And, what it means to the livestock: Young small grain is very high in protein - as high as alfalfa or clover.

Here's to the Berries - Looking for new source of income to supplement declining profits from crops and livestock? Then consider strawberries, especially if you have a small farm and an industrious family. During the depression of the early thirties strawberries were life savers for the area around Patsburg where in one year almost 1,000 carloads were shipped. March is the time to set strawberries and last year's tobacco land is the best place. The cost of setting an acre is low and a few geese are a great help in keeping the crab grass out. If interested, don't wait - see your county agent now about varieties, plants and shipping facilities.

Setting should be done by the first of April. Let's Sow - Not Argue - Let's not take time now to argue about the merits of the various grasses. On most Kentucky farms the question uppermost in the mind and stomachs of livestock is not the kind of grass that tastes best, but the kind they can get during the "other 6 or 8 months." Fortunately Kentuckians have several good grasses to select from, and can use the kinds best adapted to their own conditions. Sure folks who think farming is easy should try it with borrowed capital in a dry season. If that won't make just plain people out of them, I don't know what will. A wise man once said that no profession required such variety of knowledge, such insight into nature, and such technical skill to be successful, as the profession of farming.

Danger Of An Atom Attack On The United States

The Federal Civil Defense said recently that Russia could send a number of planes against cities of the United States and industrial centers...

A Civil Defense official said the report, which contained these estimates, "are either a dramatic over-statement of the problem or a retreat from the reality of growing Soviet capabilities."

The Defense officials said the report, which contained these estimates, "are either a dramatic over-statement of the problem or a retreat from the reality of growing Soviet capabilities."

It has long been realized and admitted by Air Force officials that as many as seven out of ten enemy bombers would get through to their target in case of a surprise attack.

As we see it, the primary concern of civil defense in this country should be in the larger cities and industrial areas. It is understandable why some inhabitants of smaller, far-removed towns, refused to be alarmed over civil defense.

Fertilizer May Be Answer To Farm Income Problem

Washington, D. C. Agricultural authorities are telling farmers throughout the country that increased fertilizer use is their best way to meet the lower farm prices—higher costs naturally.

Under present circumstances, farmers naturally must keep a weather eye out so as to reduce expenses on items which do not offer adequate returns.

The major explanation for this favorable situation lies, in the fact that fertilizer prices have not risen as fast as prices for other commodities the farmer buys.

A college student, employed on a part-time basis to collect some very bad debts, got tremendous results with the following letter: "Dear Sir: I've never been so successful in my life."

Machinery Is Making Our Food Cheap By Comparison

A short time ago Dr. Earl L. Butz, head of the Department of Agricultural Economics of Purdue University addressed a meeting of the Farm Equipment Institute.

Dr. Butz then went into the causes that lie behind this. He observed, "We are now feeding our population on science and technology. We have increased our total agricultural output in the last three decades 50 to 60 per cent, on the same acreage we had. I dare say fully two-thirds of that increase was due to application of science and the advanced technology associated with mechanization and electrification."

It is certainly clear from this that the machine has not only transformed the business of farming, making it a far more profitable and attractive undertaking than it ever was before, but has been a boon to the consumer.

Ford Will Remove All United States Tariffs

Henry Ford II recently asserted that Congress should pass legislation assuring the quickest possible elimination of all tariffs, which would be the first major step in leading the world back to free trade.

It will be remembered that Great Britain was the champion proponent of free trade for many years and abandoned the system only reluctantly after many of the other countries of the world set up all sorts of trade barriers.

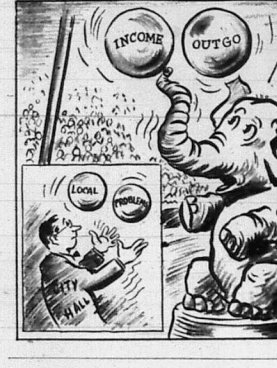

There are many other U. S. industries which would suffer severely if all tariff protection were removed. While the theme has been over-worked by some industries, seeking high tariffs from a purely profit standpoint,

The goal as outlined by Mr. Ford, is a proper one for this country to aim at as an eventuality. It is encouraging to see the president of a company as large as the Ford Motor Company take the position that free trade is the best possible solution of our world commerce problems.

The free trade, or most-favored-nation theory, is something of an everlasting goal. However, in anything dealing with economics, there are many unknowns to be considered and this country cannot move too rapidly in the reduction of protective tariffs.

Today we need patient people—those who can wait under difficult conditions with the end, who do not have to have everything happen all at once, but who are willing to persevere.

New Cost Index Is Being Employed

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics is now measuring living costs with a new index, based on the price of 300 items, ranging from cigarettes to surgery. The new index replaces an older one, which included prices from 200 items, as sampled in thirty-four cities. The new index samples prices in some forty-six cities and towns, in sizes ranging from over 7,000 (New York) to towns of 2,500. It has been several years since the bureau sent into homes all over the country to get a complete record of the kinds, quantities and amounts of food, clothing, furniture and goods and services bought each year. The amount spent for each was also noted.

Fertilizer Held Key To Farm Production Cost

Agricultural authorities are telling farmers throughout the country that increased fertilizer use is their best way to meet the lower farm prices—higher costs.

Under present circumstances, farmers naturally must keep a weather eye out so as to reduce expenses on items which do not offer adequate returns. Such is not the case with fertilizer expenditures; in fact, the dividends from its proper use make it the farmer's best bargain. In 1940 $1 invested in fertilizer brought a $2 dividend in extra crops; six months ago this investment brought an average return of $3.75, with dividends on certain specialty crops such as tomatoes running as high as $15. Even with a slump in market prices, far greater than experienced in recent months, fertilizer will remain the best purchase of the farmer's economic welfare. By increasing output per acre through greater fertilizer use, a farmer can maintain and even bolster his net income. The major explanation for this favorable situation lies in the fact that fertilizer prices have not risen as fast as prices for other commodities the farmer buys. During the past 12 years, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, prices paid by farmers have gone up almost 100 per cent and farm wage rates have jumped 140 per cent, but fertilizer prices have increased only 50 per cent. Relatively low fertilizer prices prevail, despite increased labor and transportation charges, and buying, processing, equipment maintenance and replacement costs.

Rural Health Topic Of Louisville Meeting

Further progress in the solution of Kentucky's rural health problems is the objective of the second annual Kentucky Rural Health Conference to be held in Louisville March 11 and 12, according to a spokesman for the conference. Extending an invitation to every interested person, Walter L. O'Nan, M.D., chairman of the Kentucky Rural Health Council, said, "The people of rural Kentucky owe it to themselves to attend the conference to learn how their health may be improved." The conference will begin at 1 p. m., Wednesday, March 11, and will adjourn at noon, March 12. All sessions will be held in the Mirror Room of the Kentucky Hotel. There is no registration fee and organization membership is not a requirement for participation. The solution of such problems as tuberculosis, undulant fever, typhoid, malaria, hookworm, and other rural health deficiencies and other impediments to good health should be the concern of every citizen. Dr. O'Nan said, "We would like to see a large representation from every county in the state at the conference to hear and ask questions of the national and state leaders who will be present." Participants in the program include Frank W. P. DeGaulle, managing director of the Farm Foundation; Donald A. Dukelow, M.D., Chicago American Medical Association Bureau of Health Education; R. C. Kussendorf, D.V.M., U.S. Public Health Service; and Dr. O'Nan, former executive secretary of the American Veterinary Medical Association, and Aubrey D. Gates, Little Rock, American Medical Association Rural Health Council. Kentucky delegates will include representation from the Farm Bureau, Federation, the Homeowners, the Congress of Parents and Teachers, the State Department of Health, the State Dental Association, the State Department of Education, the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and the State Medical Association.

Addie Barker In Race For Sheriff

To the voters of Rowan County: I take this means to announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Rowan County on the Democratic ticket.

Many of my friends have asked me to run for Sheriff. I was a candidate for the same office four years ago and was defeated by a small majority by Mr. Carl Jones. I was very pleased and appreciated the support I received in my race before and will appreciate any help that anyone may give in this election. I was born and raised in Rowan County, and I have lived here as I can and have a personal talk with you, outlining my qualifications and the manner in which I will conduct this important office. I am a sober man and believe in good law enforcement. If I am nominated and elected I will serve to the very best of my ability. I welcome anyone to investigate my record as a citizen of Rowan County, and I am present to you more details at a later date.

Tobacco Yield To Benefit The Grippled

As Kentucky prepared to swing into its 1953 Easter Seal campaign this week, action was being taken on another front to help the state's handicapped children. The Rotary Clubs of Shelbyville and Owensboro announced they had gone into the tobacco-farming business to help crippled children.

They urged other clubs attending last week's annual convention of Rotary District 233 to do the same thing. Ralph Wible of the Owensboro Club said his organization has about three acres of land on which it intends to grow some $3,000 worth of tobacco a year. The proceeds, he explained, will be given to the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children, this state's Easter Seal Society, and will be earmarked for facilities for crippled children of Western Kentucky.

The Shelbyville Rotary Club, of which Easter Seal Chairman Briggs Lawson is a member, originated the tobacco-raising idea. Lawson and Wible, discussing the plan with other Rotary units, declared that all manual labor connected with the projects in their home towns would be done by Rotarians. "I've never hoed tobacco in my life," Wible said, "but I'm going to start now." He pointed out that other clubs might adopt his club's plan but use whatever agricultural crop might predominate in their localities. Crippled children was the theme which predominated at the opening-day session of the Rotary convention. Glenn Cunningham, the former Olympic track star who overcame serious physical handicaps in his youth, told the Rotarians that the handicapped want the opportunity for respectable rehabilitation and not pity or sympathy. "They want to know that they can fill a place in society and make their contribution."

In connection with the recent disclosure of the fact that the armed forces are experiencing an increased number of men who go A.W.O.L. from training camps, it is said that these men, once apprehended, are being flown directly to Seoul, Korea, for front line service. Town Hall Meetings Announced

Pikeville, Salyersville, Vanceburg, Grayson Are First Sites Chosen

The recently organized Eastern Kentucky Industrial Foundation, Inc. in this section of the state will initiate a series of Town Hall Meetings in each of the member counties for the purpose of informing business people of its plans to develop industrial growth in the area.

The first of these County wide Town Hall Meetings will be held at Pikeville, March 9th, at the City Court Room at 7:00 P. M. Three additional meetings are scheduled for that week, with one at Salyersville on March 10th; Vanceburg, March 11th; and Grayson, March 12th. Other meetings are now being set up for the following weeks and will be conducted until a Town Hall Meeting is held in each of the counties. They will be at Morehead, Hickman, Hazard, Prestonsburg, West Liberty, Louisa, Ashland, Whitesburg, Greenup and Izard.

Cooperating with and assisting the new organization in these Town Hall Meetings will be a representative from the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, and one from the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board, a State agency at Frankfort.

Each Town Hall Meeting will be patterned after the first one held at Ashland on November 21st, 1952 at which more than 400 people from this section attended and heard Gov. Lawrence Wetherby pledge the full cooperation of his administration to aid Eastern Kentucky, and also heard a telegram read from both Kentucky U. S. Senators pledging their support to plans for our section. There will be a short period of discussion upon assigned topics by the representatives of the above organizations and by a member of the Foundation Board, and these talks will be followed by a panel session with questions presented to the program participants from the audience.

No solicitation of funds will be made at any of these meetings and no membership campaign will be conducted. The entire Town Hall Meeting in each county is to be devoted to a discussion of problems of the respective county and area.

No amount of ridicule, boasting or bluff changes the facts. Get them, and you will understand the news of the day, and gain a clear picture of events.

Restriction On Oil Import Urged By Senator Cooper

A campaign to restrict importation of foreign residual oil, which is usurping American industrial fuel markets at the expense of coal, was opened in the U. S. Senate last week by Senator John Sherman Cooper, of Kentucky, who declared that the alien product not only causes unemployment in mining towns but also threatens national security while benefiting only the importing companies. At the same time he introduced a bill to limit the amount of residual oil coming into this country to no more than 5 per cent of domestic demand in the corresponding calendar quarter of the previous year.

Opening his remarks with a reminder of the established purposes of this nation's Trade Agreement Act, Senator Cooper said that the present provision "for lack of provision" regarding foreign residual oil causes "obvious injury" without offsetting compensatory consideration. He pointed out that the total number of employees at the refineries on the islands of Arab and Curaçao, whence most of the residual is shipped, "would in no way approach the size of the labor force in the coal mines in my own state of Kentucky, yet the oil produced at these refineries is directly responsible for reduced work time and unemployment in the mining communities of Kentucky and other states."

Senator Cooper explained that residual oil is the residue left in refining process after gasoline, kerosene, lubricating oil, and other products have been removed from the crude, and that no production cost is to be considered when the selling price is set.

The auto companies carefully plan to make every new car you buy obsolete within a year.

In the trade it is called "planned obsolescence." To the man on the street it means shelling out extra dollars every year to keep abreast of the new models.

But the man on the street really can't keep up. Because even if he plans to wait until 1954 for "the latest thing," the blue prints and even some of the preliminary tooling is ready to make it obsolete in 1953.

This planning to make your new car "old" every calendar year and highly perfected by the auto industry. It has been so successful that other hard goods makers—refrigerator, television, radios and like—have adopted it almost en masse.

Primarily, it is a device to whet the appetite and loosen the purse strings of car buyers. Secondly, it provides an orderly avenue for on-going improvements and design changes.

How quickly your car becomes obsolete depends on the buying public. If the market begins to sag, a model change may be used to perk it up. If buying holds strong, manufacturers are inclined to hold off major changes.

This annual model change is expensive both to the buyer and the maker. A major auto firm will pour 10, 20 or 30 millions of dollars into a model change, depending upon how expensive the retooling is going to be.

All that has to come back from the car buying public. It does so in the form of higher prices than there would be if drivers would be content with non-changing automobiles.

Although all makes present a "new" model, every year, two times out of three it is what the trade calls a "face-lifting." In other words, the basic car is the same as last year except for addition or rearrangement of the dash, engineering improvements in the light of experience, and changes in the treatment of the grille, chrome and perhaps the bumpers.

The main thing is that it have a fresh, new look to the man who owns the preceding model. Yet it can't be too advanced. Because if it is, the old model will be a drag on the used car market and the price won't hold.

If the price doesn't hold on used cars, the man hankering to buy a new one isn't as likely to trade. And when he does trade, more than likely choose a manufacturer who doesn't jump "all over the lot" in design. It's a simple matter of protecting his investment.

Another, and related reason for progressive rather than drastic change is public acceptance. Before World War II one of the really big makers got stung badly with overly advanced changes. It isn't likely to repeat that mistake.

The public takes to change slowly. Remember the tear-drop rear fenders? It took several model changes to build them up to the box type now prevalent in the industry. The same with glass space. One or two makers jumped in with both feet to big expressive of glass. But by and large it was an evolutionary process rather than a sudden shift.

Of course, all design changes aren't just to tempt the pocketbook. Manufacturers spend millions each year experimenting and testing improvements to make their cars the best buy for the money.

As Charles (Boss) Kettering famed inventor and General Motors director once said with tongue in cheek:

"This year's mistakes are next year's new models."

Army Reports Shortage Of Ammunition

Certain Types Of Shells Scarce On The Korean Front

Army officers recently acknowledged a shortage of artillery shells, which they said was still being felt on the battlefields of Korea. The worst months were described as those of October and November of last year and the situation last fall, lest they run completely out today was described as considerably improved.

It was also disclosed that the United States had to dip into its defense emergency stockpile to supply guns in Korea last fall. The shells run completely out of ammunition. This defense emergency stockpile has not yet been completely built up to pre-Korean War status, although it is believed that the shortage is easing to the extent where the artillery shells requisitioned may soon be replaced.

The odd part of this report is that there is any shortage of artillery shells at all at this stage of the Korean War—now in its third year. Were the item involved a new type of jet aircraft or a capital ship in the Navy, one could understand the long delay. However, artillery shells are not in themselves so complicated as to require long months of planning.

Farmer Never Doubts Anything He Does Himself, Slogan Of Nation Planting Plan

By J. Allyn Smith
"What a man hears he may doubt, what he sees he may possibly doubt, but what he does himself he cannot doubt."
With this philosophy Dr. Stephan A. Knapp, an agricultural scientist, started demonstration plantings 30 years ago on a farm in Texas. To show the advantages of using the best varieties and the best cultural practice in the growing corn and cotton. From that beginning has grown the Extension Service in agriculture and home economics, a cooperative venture by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture and five states through their land-grant colleges and universities, reaching today into practically every county in the country. In Kentucky, the University of Kentucky is the cooperator, with county extension workers in every county of the state.

STATE POLICE OFFICERS check their cruiser equipment to be sure of its availability in time of an emergency. Last year Troopers spent 360,468 man hours patrolling the highways. More than 42,000 traffic arrests were made during the year and 55,260 warnings were given to motorists. There were 22,261 convictions as the result of State Police arrests.

ing before production can be begun. In fact, the shells which have been used in Korea by U. S. artillery have been of the same type as those used in World War II. Most of those shells fired in Korea actually have been World War II shells.

President Eisenhower spoke of the supply situation shortcoming in Korea shortly after returning from his trip there in December. This is undeniably one of the discouraging factors he discovered during his visit. We presume that the announcement by the Army indicates something has been done to relieve the situation, which is certainly an intolerable one for a nation like the United States.

It is of little advantage to have the world's mightiest industrial potential which in reality fails to produce enough artillery ammunition to sustain a limited number of divisions in limited combat operations.

High School Press Meeting Set This Month

High school journalists and student publication advisors from all sections of Kentucky have been invited to take part in the University of Kentucky's annual Kentucky High School Press Association Clinic on March 27 and 28.

The two-day event is expected to attract approximately 500 student editors and teachers. Dr. Nick Plummer, director of the UK School of Journalism, announced this week.

Members of the School of Journalism staff and other specialists in the field of journalism will serve as consultants and discussion leaders during the clinic. Both students and advisors taking part in the activity are urged to bring their editorial, photography and yearbook problems.

In addition to the regular department of Agriculture and the effects of the farm demonstration method. Farmers today produce 69 per cent more than 40 years ago, on 11 per cent more land, with 20 per cent fewer man-hours of labor. Today one farm worker feeds 15 persons.

Forty years ago he fed eight persons. By 1975 it is estimated he must feed 21 persons. He is impossible to calculate doing this with know-how, better plants and animals, and the substitution of steel, chemicals, and power for farm land and farm labor.

Special sessions are slated to assist students and advisors in the editing and production of student newspapers, special emphasis will be placed on photography and yearbook problems at this year's clinic.

Eagles Fight Western To Last Ditch, Before Losing In OV; Breck Topples F'burg 78-63

All Morehead basketball teams ended up in the black, with the exception of Morehead-High but the Kymles Vikings, performing under every handicap, came out with a 460 bottling average.

Bobby Laughlin's Breckinridge Eagles, gaining momentum for the district tournament at Owensville this week, polished off Flemingsburg 78 to 63 to end the year with 14 victories and eight defeats.

The season's finale is particularly important since it is the only game Fleming County lost on their home floor, a difficult court for visitors to compete on. John Johnson's Morehead Eagles gave a fine performance in the Ohio Valley tournament, defeating Tennessee Tech 74-65 and losing in the semi-final to nationally ranked Western Kentucky 78-68. Western went on to win the OV final, beating Eastern 70-60 in the final.

Lindie Castle, Eliza Whalen and Don Whitehouse were in fine form at the Louisville Army and Morehead almost pined the Hilltoppers pulled away in the close quarters, using superior height to advantage.

During the season the Eagles lost 11 and won 12.

Morehead High's season record is 11 victories and the same number of defeats.

All Morehead teams scored more points for the season than their opponents. Morehead College had 1,771, the opposition 1,731. Breckinridge, which won its first nine games, made 1,433 to 1,277 for their opponents in 26 matches. Morehead High scored 1,411 to 1,369 for the opposition in 22 matches.

False claims for unemployment insurance resulted in 122 Kentuckians receiving either fines or jail terms or both during 1952—120 cases still pending in court.—O. B. Hannah, director of the Unemployment Insurance Division of the Department of Economic Security, reported charges against five others were either filed away or dismissed.

Hannah said that 211 other offenders escaped prosecution because their violations were not considered flagrant enough to warrant such action, but that each has been denied further payments and ordered to restore the amounts illegally collected.

The majority of offenders, according to Hannah, represented themselves as being totally unemployed, when investigation disclosed they were either working full time or part time.

Reforestation In Rowan Topic Of Meeting

Need for reforestation in farm woodland of Rowan and neighboring counties was the topic of discussion at a meeting of the vocational agricultural adult class Monday at Sharkey School.

John Alexander of the Soil Conservation Service and Bernie Mauer, district service forester, pointed out that fast growing pines are available at a cost of $4 per thousand trees.

Mauer said black locust, black walnut and yellow poplar trees may be obtained at small cost by applying at his office. Rowan County farmers planted more than 15,000 trees in woodland during the past year.

Mauer and Alexander told the group that technical advice on the kinds of trees to plant and method of planting the seedlings is available at their offices.

"Inheritance of Milk Production from the Sire" was the regular class subject Monday, taught by Carl Sinclair. He brought out the improvement of dairy cattle in Bath and Fleming County by using top sires and explained advantages of the artificial dairy insemination program.

Members present included: J. W. Black, A. C. Black, W. A. Caudill, Harold Caudill, Everett DeWitt, Simon Eldridge, Simon Eldridge Jr., Ivan Ellington, Elvira Eldridge, Fred Eldridge, Joe Malbrain and Lloyd Gregory.

State Police Bring To Kentucky Best Law Enforcement, Smooth Organization

Department Has 346 Employees, 233 In Uniform

Law enforcement in Kentucky has made remarkable progress since the formation of the Department of State Police in 1948. This modern, smoothly operating organization, responsible for the apprehension of all types of law-breakers is a far-cry from the statewide policing of a few years ago.

Much of the success of this present department can be attributed to carefully evolved policies emanating from seven closely-knit bureaus concerned with personnel and training, supply, communications, identification and investigation, records, traffic and operations planning, and legal matters.

The small, but well-trained, staff of the department is composed of 346 persons, 233 in uniform and 113 civilians.

Realizing that the efficiency of any police agency rests mainly on the capability of the trooper in the field to perform his job to the utmost, State Police Commissioner Charles C. Oldham insists on careful training to mold the fledgling officer into a high calibre policeman.

The men who come from all sections of the Commonwealth are taught to combine courtesy, politeness, information and advice with their stern duties.

In order to accomplish all this, the department has set up a nine-week Trooper Training School, where cadets, as they are called in training, receive well-rounded courses in such important subjects as traffic control, fingerprinting, public relations, safety, accident investigation, police records and administration, scientific police laboratory techniques, and traffic law enforcement.

An entire week is spent in studying first aid while another week is given to fire arms training.

After graduation, the cadets are promoted to rank of trooper and assigned to a period of on-the-job training in a state police district.

At present the department maintains 14 districts in strategic areas of the Commonwealth. These posts are located at Mayfield, Madisonville, Bowling Green, Hodgenville, Louisville, Frankfort, Williamson, Richmond, Harlan, Lexington, Morehead, Pikeville, Hazard and Ashland.

Modern barracks to house personnel have been completed in Williamson, Mayfield, Madisonville and London. The department program calls for additional barracks to be constructed wherever it is feasible in other districts.

According to law, the jurisdiction of the state police extends to all the state's 120 counties and on all state property. The police are also given jurisdiction in all cities with the exception of those in the first five classes. At present they have jurisdiction in all these cities with the exception of 21.

The work with the young people of the state in safety education is one of the prides of the department.

In this category the police assist in the work of schoolboy traffic patrols and operate a magic safety shoe under the direction of a professional magician, who is also a uniformed officer. The show visits schools in all sections of the state and never fails to capture the attention of its student audience.

Although much has been accomplished in the field of law enforcement by the Department of State Police, the future offers a constant challenge.

The most immediate need according to Commissioner Oldham is for an additional 250 troopers to cope with the increasing high way traffic problems and to insure the maintenance of the present high standards of service rendered by the department to the citizens of Kentucky.

Compensation Ruling Released By Court

The Kentucky Court of Appeals gave its legal stamp of approval to a 1952 legislative act declaring all employees working for a concern which is covered by the act.

That measure of similar import had been held a violation of one's right to recover damages at common law.

Deims, GOP Make Plans For Next Year

Neither Party Idle In Official Circles At Nation's Capitol

So narrow are the Republican majorities in the Senate and less than half a dozen in the House to win back the control which President Eisenhower and his Republicans to capture last November.

Democrats need only a net gain of two in the Senate and less than half a dozen in the House to win back the control which President Eisenhower and his Republicans to capture last November.

There will be no presidential candidate to swell the vote-for individual Senate and House candidates next year.

The Democrats will have another advantage in the old tradition which shows that a minority party usually gains in mid-term elections. This has been broken only once in this century, in 1934 when the New Deal was riding a popular upsurge and gained 10 Senate and nine House seats.

Republicans are hoping that by November, 1954, the Eisenhower program will be finding such popular favor that they, too, will regain the ancient precedent and prevent a Democratic comeback.

They are not just resting on hope, however. Every meeting of 100 workers since the election has been marked by moderate self-praise and warnings of what would happen if the party is not alert.

Democrats are looking to Kentucky, Michigan and Massachusetts—and possibly California and New Hampshire—as perhaps their best opportunities for overturning Republican seats in the Senate next year.

Republicans who now have only 48 senators seated compared with 47 Democrats and one independent, think their best chances for gains lie in Delaware, Minnesota, Wyoming, Colorado, Illinois, Iowa, Montana and New Mexico.

As for the House, Democrats will concentrate on 40 districts in 22 states where the Republicans last November received less than 55 per cent of the total vote.

Their main attention is expected to be directed at 10 of these districts in seven states where Republican pluralities were less than 5,000 votes.

Republicans say they will make their strongest fights in 45 districts where the Democrats last November won with less than 55 per cent of the total vote.

The 13 districts getting most attention out of these 45 were won by Democrats by pluralities of less than 5,000.

Up for re-election in the Senate next year will be 12 Republicans and 21 Democrats, with 10 of the latter coming from the South. The Republicans are Bridges, N. H.; Cooper, Ky.; Cordon, Ore.; Dworshak, Ida.; Ferguson, Mich.; Grasswald, Neb.; Hendrickson, N. J.; Kucera, Calif.; Mundt, S. D.; Saitonant, Mass.; Schoppert, Kan.; and Smith, Ill.

The 11 Democrats up for reelection outside the South are Anderson, N. M.; Douglas, Ill.; Freer, Del.; Gillette, Ia.; Green, R. I.; Humphrey, Minn.; Hunt, Wyo.; Edwin C. Johnson, Okla.; Kerr, Okla.; Murray, Mont.; Neely, W. Va.

Buckman Gives Wording On School Amendment

Attorney General J. D. Buckman, Jr. has approved the form and wording of a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the voters this year on distribution of public school funds. The present provision calls for distribution on the basis of children of school age on the census rolls, whether in public school attendance or not. The proposed amendment would leave the question to the General Assembly.

The amendment as it will appear on the ballot this fall reads: "All funds accruing to the school fund shall be used for the maintenance of the public schools of the Commonwealth, and for no other purpose, and the General Assembly shall by general law prescribe the manner of the distribution of the public school fund among the school districts and its use for public school purposes." Blanks are provided to indicate voter approval or disapproval.

Flammable Liquid In Trucks Is Being Checked

An inspection of flammable liquids' trucks is underway in Kentucky, according to State Fire Marshal J. T. Underwood, Jr.

Fourteen field men are participating in the safety check which is being conducted primarily at loading docks where the vehicles receive their flammable cargoes.

The inspectors will examine the carriers for proper hose connections, valves, tank security, lighting, leaks, breaks, fire extinguishers, data plates and tank capacity.

Violators will be prosecuted under state laws.

If any prisoner of war living in Kentucky does not have this form he may obtain one by contacting The Kentucky Disabled Ex-Service Men's Board, 1405 W. Broadway, Louisville, Kentucky.

English Coeds Resent Living Costs French Lassies Visit Down, But Still High

Plans to import French beauties to decorate an English university carnival appeared to have been knocked for a loop after an eye-catching display of the local British product on Prime Minister Churchill's doorstep.

Seven shapely co-eds from Reading University—clad in shimmering sequined tights, bluing bathing suits and bikini red stockings—marched to No. 10 Downing Street this week to protest an "outrageous insult" from the men of the university.

Those coeds, the co-eds complained, had declared British girls lacked glamour and had invited three "French cuties" to lead the school's annual carnival.

"What's wrong with British university women?" asked a huster at the seven beauties flaunted bravely through the staid government section of the capital.

At Churchill's official home, 25-year-old Sheila Hynd fainted and was carried up to the front door and knocked. A doorman promised solemnly to deliver the girls' protest note to the Prime Minister.

But government action wasn't necessary. The whole affair seemed down just as it began to take on the aspects of an international incident.

The French girls chosen "ambassadors of good will" canceled their reservations from Paris. One explained that her father put his foot down when she saw the uproar the trip was making.

The English club in Paris which had a hand in arrangements, then announced that it was calling off the whole affair.

To show there were no hard feelings—and to point to the pictures—the seven British coeds held a good will conference with French girls playing in the Folies Bergere Review, currently at a London-West End theatre.

"We hadn't anything against French girls. It's our men we're furious with," said co-ed Jean Buegion.

Don't Dig For Gold—Raise Carrots

Bad news for adventurous American youth; instead of dreaming about hunting gold, they'd be better off if they dreamed about planting carrots.

That's the deduction American youth could make if they adventured into the wilds of the Congressional Record.

Rep. Engle (D-Calif.), passed along this information to his colleagues in Congress: "Gold production, which used to be one of the large industries in California, is now less in value than the winter carrot crop produced in our state."

Praises Pasture For Hog Raising In Kentucky

Good pasture is the real "wonder" feed for hogs, W. L. Robinson, Ohio Experiment Station man, told hog-raisers meeting at the Farm and Home Convention at the University of Kentucky, along with corn, pasture provides a complete feed for hogs, he said.

Ladino clover, alfalfa and red clover rank in the order named as pasture for hogs, Robinson reported. Also, in their early stages of growth but not after they began to head out, bluegrass and small grains were called good.

The Ohio man said dwarf Essex rape was a good all-around feed for hogs, and spring-sown winter wheat and soybeans drilled solid may be used for early and late summer pasture.

Tests in Ohio indicated that minerals and protein concentrates are needed for spring pigs on pasture. Added protein resulted in faster gains. Each pound of tankage fed saved over two and a half pounds of corn.

$700, Elderly Lady Saved, Is Missing

An elderly woman who was saving money to meet taxes and pay doctors' bills for her 80-year-old husband told police at Lexington, Ky., that her $700 cache is missing.

Mrs. John Spencer, 72, said that she kept the money in seven envelopes, hidden in an old suitcase in the front bedroom of her home. Each envelope contained $100 in currency.

The loss was discovered, Mrs. Spencer related, when her husband woke her up, telling her she had just checked her hiding place and found the money missing.

Kentucky Market News Report Poultry Prices, Eggs Remain Almost Unchanged; Milk Drop Reported In All Localities

Kentucky farmers received the following prices for produce delivered during the week ending Feb. 25. This is based on reports from 10 widely scattered cities in the state including Louisville, where the market prices were compared those of a week ago.

Commercially grown fryers or broilers 27-28c, prices unchanged on mostly steady to firm markets in Kentucky. (also Cincinnati and North Georgia); heavy type hens 21-28c, mostly 23-25c, unchanged to 1c higher; light and leghorns here 15-16c, mostly 14-15c, generally unchanged; 12-14c, unchanged.

A large eggs 30-42c, unchanged to 1c higher; current receipts 37-40c, generally 1-2c higher. Premium cream 54-56c, unchanged on steady markets. However, during the past week national cream markets have continued weak and lower as milk and butter production increases.

Milk Prices Decline
Fluid milk prices at both retail and producer levels declined early in February, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported. Twenty-four markets, about one in every five reporting, indicated lower retail prices in January. Twenty-seven markets indicated reductions at producer levels but this number does not include 11 markets in which Class I prices for February are not as yet determined. Reductions in producer prices are expected in several of these markets. Milk price reductions were reported from all sections of the country except the mountain states.

The milk dealers' average buying price for Class I milk of 2.5 per cent butterfat in more than 100 cities in February was $3.39 per hundredweight. This price is 1/2c per hundredweight lower than in January and 10c per hundredweight lower than in February 1932. This is the first time since September 1930 that this Class I price has been below the level of the same month a year earlier.

Most Feed Prices Advance
Feed prices at 14 strengthened during the week ended February 25 and most prices, except alfalfa meal, advanced. The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported. Influencing factors were the advance in prices of feed grains.

Paris, Mt. Sterling Road Contract Let
The State Highway Department has awarded a contract to the Licking River Limestone Co. of Mt. Sterling, Ky., to improve four miles of the Mt. Sterling-Paris road. The work consists of grading, draining and laying a traffic-bound limestone surface at a cost of $177,700.

Machinery Helps Labor Situation On State Farms

Except during harvest periods, Kentucky farmers probably will have sufficient labor this season, Beach Craigmyle, Louisville banker, said at the Farm and Home Convention at the University of Kentucky. More machinery will be used, he reasoned, and ways will be found to get along with less labor.

Craigmyle noted that farm production has increased 40 per cent in 10 years, despite the fact that two million workers left farms for industry and war. All the time farmers were adding machinery, leaving more of their land in grass, and raising more livestock. More laborers will drift to cities and more adjustments be made in farm operations, the banker predicted.

If the new administration ends the war, balances the budget, and cuts expenses appreciably, it will convince many doubters that 1932 was the time for a change.

For Every Soldier Wounded In Korea There Are 36 Hurt In U. S. Auto Wrecks

Thirty-six civilians are injured in motor vehicle accidents on the home front for every U. S. serviceman wounded in battle in Korea, the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies announced today.

Over the two and one-half years of war in Korea, official Department of Defense figures listed 83,000 servicemen in the wounded column of the casualty lists. For the same period of time, the Association reports that injured victims of automobile accidents totaled 3,350,000, or 3,602 per cent more than those injured in battle.

The Association, which first discovered that the millionth victim of the automobile would be in December, 1951, took a daily average for the 30 months since the Korean War began and found that 102 servicemen have been wounded to 3,673 civilians who suffered injuries in automobile accidents.

Starting with the first battle of the Revolution in April, 1775, and continuing through the major and minor wars in which the United States has fought, approximately 1,270,000 men have been wounded in battle. It took 177 years for non-fatal war casualties to reach that number. However, in the little over 50 years since the automobile became a means of transportation, 33,000,000 men, women and children have been injured in traffic accidents.

Thus, 26 persons have been injured in motor vehicle accidents to every American serviceman who was wounded in all of the wars in the country's history, the Association pointed out. Putting it another way, in half a century automobile injuries total 2,603 per cent more than all of the U. S. war wounded in one and three-fourths centuries.

"That the automobile has outstripped war as a killer, is now recognized," said Thomas N. Boate, manager of the Accident Prevention Department of the Association. "The span of less than an average man's lifetime, the automobile has killed 1,075,000 persons, while the total number of battle dead in all of our wars, according to the latest statistics, reached 1,069,000. This is now some 64,000 short of the automobile's 52 year toll and only a year ago the figures were about equal."

The Association by no means wishes to minimize the tragedy

Educators Meeting Set For Lexington

School superintendents and school board members throughout Kentucky have been summoned by Superintendent of Public Instruction Wendell P. Butler to meet at Lexington March 18 for a discussion of problems confronting the state's educational system.

Dr. Arthur L. Lloyd, executive director of the Legislative Research Commission, is billed to speak to the gathering on the study of public education now being made under direction of the commission.

The gathering is to be held in conjunction with a session of the Kentucky School Boards Association.

High School Press Group To Meet March 27, 28

The University of Kentucky's annual Kentucky High School Press Association Clinic will be held March 27 and 28 on the UK campus, an announcement from the University's School of Journalism has disclosed.

This year's event is expected to draw approximately 500 high school journalists from all sections of Kentucky. In addition to the regular program planned to assist school newspaper editors, special emphasis will be placed on photograph and yearbook problems at the clinic.

Members of the UK School of Journalism staff and other specialists in the field will serve during the two-day clinic as consultants and leaders. Both students and advisors taking part in the activity are urged to bring their editorial, photography and yearbook problems.

Special sessions planned to assist students and advisors in the production of scholastic yearbooks by offset process are scheduled. Persons interested in scheduled duplicating newspaper problems also will find help available.

Spaced exhibit at the clinic will consist of prints of winning photographs submitted for the 1952 National High School Photographic Awards contest. The UK School of Journalism is co-operating in this year's contest and is offering Kentucky students to enlarge their photographs.

Clinic reservation blanks may be obtained from the School of Journalism, and all reservations should be made early. Newspaper to be evaluated must be received by March 18.

—which has joined the fifth column of spies and saboteurs as a means of weakening our country in a time of national emergency. Accident prevention is the duty of every citizen today. Certainly it is a sad commentary on the driving habits of Americans that so many more persons than war—
