Old Memories, Good Times Help Make Haldeman Reunion Successful

By KATHY PARTIN
Staff Writer

Basketballs with the seams on the outside. A court of cinders. Using bushes for goals at an away game. Having a strong advantage because the other team had to walk 16 miles to catch a bus.

Those were the good old days for the Haldeman Leopards and Bluebells back in the late 1920's.

Nine members of those original teams were part of the crowd of about 200 persons attending the Haldeman reunion Friday and Saturday. And, as if the games had occurred only last week, plays and scores were recalled with clarity.

Every member of the original graduating class of 1929 was in attendance — all two of them. So many showed up for Friday's banquet that there was not enough food.

And, a sure sign that the event was a success — Saturday's general session started 30 minutes late because the crowd just couldn't seem to quit talking.

"Anything Haldeman does, they do it in a big way," said Frank Laughlin, the former principal and teacher at the school, and principal speaker at the banquet.

Laughlin, who refused to use a microphone in the gymnasium where the crowd was moved after the dinner, boomed, "This floor looks just as good as 40 years ago when I left here. I offer any school building over 40 years old to be in the condition this one is in."

Lacy Kegley, who arrived in Haldeman in 1929 to work as nurse for the Kentucky Fire Brick Company, reminded the group that she "not only took care of employees, but also their families." She related the problems of not having a health department or hospital, or even vaccines for diseases.

"For ambulances, a train would be stopped or a car or truck borrowed."

"If we had a need in the community, Mr. Haldeman said, 'That's my business,'" said Mrs. Kegley. "I'll never forget what he did for the community."

Chairman of the Rowan County Board of Education Gene White discussed arriving at Haldeman High School in the 1940's "fresh from Holy Creek." He had never seen a consolidated school, and was used to one teacher in one room with 86 students.

White said "The faculty at Haldeman School at that time was one of the best in Eastern Kentucky. I know they did a lot for me."

A painting by Haldeman native Christine Barker was auctioned, the top bid of $100 going to the Parents Teachers Organization, coordinators of the event. Barker promised the crowd she would have more paintings of Haldeman subjects for next year's reunion.

The Picazo family and Sandy Knapp provided musical entertainment. The Haldeman cheerleaders led in singing the school song, following a request from the audience.

Music began the General Session Saturday, as former Haldeman principal Ellen Hughes and "My Old

Hot Dog!

After being assured he wasn't committing an act of cannibalism, this half-Pekingese, half-bulldog heartily ate this hot dog at the Haldeman reunion. He belongs to Kathy Bowman, New Pans, Ohio, granddaughter of former Haldeman basketball player Curt Stinson. Kathy, a model, said she only recently acquired the puppy, and would be taking it home to her children. More pictures appear on page A-11. (Staff photo by Kathy Partin)

Body Of Rowan Man Found In Cave Run Lake

The body of a Rowan County man, believed to be in his late 20s, was discovered on Cave Run Lake Monday morning by employees of the U.S. Forest Service.

Authorities were withholding the name of the victim pending notification of next of kin.

Sheriff Jim Nickell said workers from the Forest Service found the body about 10:20 a.m. Monday after it had floated to the surface of the lake about 100 yards off what is called The Point, a popular gathering location off KY 801 past the entrance to Twin Knobs recreation area.

Rowan County Coroner Jim Barker accompanied the body to Lexington for autopsy and could not be reached for comment.

Sheriff Nickell said there appeared to be a cut or laceration to the head of the victim which may have caused, he said, "by anyone or a number of things."

The sheriff said the man may have hit his head as he jumped into the water. Nickell said officials were reasonably certain of the man's identity because of a report the night before that someone may have drowned.

The sheriff said state police, water, enforcement officers and his office arrested several individuals at the site Sunday night for public intoxication. Several other people were told to leave the area.

One of those who was asked to leave reported to a water enforcement officer that he thought someone might be in the water, Nickell said. The man reporting the missing person was not sure, however, and authorities waited for further word that he might be missing.

Nickell said the officer wrote the man's name down and waited for a response.

The incident marked the second drowning at The Point this year.

Summer Commencement Set For Friday At MSU

Dr. Jack W. Pettason, president of the American Council on Education, will be the feature speaker at Morehead State University's summer commencement on Friday, Aug. 1.

More than 500 persons are candidates for associate, baccalaureate or graduate degrees during the 10 a.m. ceremony in Wetherby Gymnasium.

Chief executive of ACE since 1977, Dr. Pettason is a former chancellor of the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana where he also served as a faculty member and dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

The co-author of two college textbooks in political science, Dr. Pettason is a former vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of California at Irvine. He holds

Quake Causes More Curiosity Than Damage

Residents of northeastern Kentucky felt the full brunt of an earthquake which rumbled through portions of more than a dozen states Sunday.

But damage from the tremor, which is believed to have centered about 12 miles east of Maysville, was reportedly minor.

In Morehead and Rowan County, the quake caused more apprehension and curiosity than actual damage, although there were a few reports of minor damage.

The quake, which was the worst to hit Kentucky in decades, shook portions of 14 states from Michigan to Alabama.

According to the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., it was a moderate earthquake that occurred at 2:52 p.m. EDT and measured 5.1 on the Richter scale.

As would be expected, the most damage occurred in Maysville where an estimated 200 homes and businesses were shaken. State police at the Morehead post reported that numerous windows in Mason County were broken and that chimneys fell from several homes and businesses. A couple of homes were shaken from their foundations and a church sustained some damage.

Dispatcher Dwight Clark at the Morehead post said he and dispatcher Jerry Alderman "immediately polled" some of the "hot spots" in the area, including the Army Corps of Engineers at Cave Run. Bums and workers at the Tennessee Gas Transmission facility at Cranston, but there was no damage.

Clark said the tremor "shook the post building itself, knocking the rear covers from the radio equipment," said Clark, half jokingly. "When the second back fell off, we deemed it necessary to go out to the parking lot to check for damage."

Clark estimated that the state police received 150 to 200 calls within the first 30 minutes following the tremor.

At the Morehead police department a radio control room, which serves as a dispatch center for all the county's emergency agencies, the phone was ringing so rapidly that dispatcher Jack Parker had to call in officers from the streets to help him answer the phone.

The first time Morehead State University Security Officer David Livers volunteered to answer the phone, his wife was on the other end of the line.

As with the calls to the state police, most of those to the city police were from people curious about what had happened.

At University Opera on Main Street in Morehead, patrons enjoying an afternoon performance of "The Merchant of Venice" volunteered to answer the phone, his wife was on the other end of the line.

At Twin Knobs beach area, lifeguards had called the usual, hourly safety break before the quake rippled through the region and swimmers were spared the feeling of being in the water during it.

Dispatcher Alderman at the state police said one woman from Forest Hills in Morehead had called to say that a wall in her home had cracked but he did not get her name during the confusion of all the calls.

Fire Chief Bill Hankinson, who came to City Hall after the quake, said he was watching a ball game when the whole house began to shake.

The chief said he felt the house rattle and couldn't figure what it was. He said he first thought it might be a train derailment or maybe a gas line explosion — both recent incidents in Kentucky.

At radio station WMOR where afternoon religious broadcasts were underway, speakers incorporated the confusion of the situation into their messages. One man noted there was nothing to fear while another, in a later broadcast, said there was nothing to worry about because if the Lord was coming, it was going to happen no matter what.

Morehead Police Chief Fred Barnsdale said his house near Ellhollow "shook good and hard." He said Monday morning that concrete blocks near the foundation to his home, which had been painted, showed a quarter-inch gap.

The chief said a neighbor of his, Lillie Adkins, was thrown from her chair by the force of the shock.

Several insurance agents in Morehead said Monday morning that they had received no reports of damage for insurance purposes but most of them added the disclaimer, "not yet" or "not so far."

James Wells of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Insurance Adjusting Office in Morehead said he had received no reports for claims in Rowan County but had three or four from Maysville and Fleming County. Wells' office covers a 10-county area.

Wells said most of the reports were of damaged chimneys or of foundations shaken loose. Wells said that most typical home-owners policies will not cover damage from an earthquake because they are so uncommon to this region. They are not usually written to include them.

One of the people to report a claim to Wells was Raymond Jolly of Hillsboro.

Jolly told this newspaper Monday morning that a quake cracked the ceiling in his two-story frame house and shook the chimney loose, spilling bricks on the yard.

"I had to tear most of the chimney down," Jolly said.

Sen. Stamper Expected To Plead Not Guilty To Grand Jury Charges

LEXINGTON — State Senator Woodrow Stamper of West Liberty has been indicted by a special federal grand jury in connection with the state's 1977 purchase of the old Hiden Valley Resort.

Indictments against Sen. Stamper and Lexington real-estate appraiser Robert E. Link, returned Friday, were the first by the jury, which began an investigation of alleged wrongdoings in state government more than 13 months ago.

Stamper, 63, a Democrat, "was charged with one count of conspiracy, two counts of extortion, three counts of mail fraud and two counts of signing false income tax returns.

Link, 50, was charged with one count of conspiracy, one count of extortion and three counts of mail fraud.

Sen. Stamper told The Morehead News

Monday morning that he is still under advisement from his attorneys not to comment on the case matter.

"I'd really enjoy telling my side of it," the senator said, "but my attorneys have told me not to comment."

Stamper said he did not know when he would make an appearance in court in connection with the charges and added simply, "I just refute the charges."

Link is also expected to plead innocent to the charges.

An FBI and Internal Revenue Service news release said: "The indictments result from the initial phase of the ongoing investigation by the grand jury into alleged corruption in Kentucky state government."

According to the Lexington Herald-

Leader, testimony on the Hidden Valley purchase has dominated the secret grand jury sessions for months.

The 28-page indictment by the grand jury painted a picture of an extensive conspiracy that apparently involved high-ranking state and Democratic party officials from the administration of former Gov. Julian M. Carroll.

Federal officials said the grand jury would continue its work and there were indications other indictments might be forthcoming. The lengthy document listed 61 "over acts" allegedly committed by Stamper, Link and unspecified co-conspirators in the alleged conspiracy.

At least a dozen people were named in the indictment as the overt acts were recited, but U.S. Justice Department (Continued on back page)

Morehead Lowest In Survey ...

Retail Food Prices Up 4.3%

Meat, eggs and cooking staples led a dramatic surge in Kentucky retail food prices during July, according to Kentucky Farm Bureau's most recent marketbasket survey. But food prices in Morehead declined during the month, according to the survey.

A select group of 40 items cost an average $54.11 this month, up 4.3 percent over the June figure of $51.87. The figures were compiled by volunteer surveyors in 28 Kentucky communities. Morehead claimed honors for the cheapest local marketbasket cost at $49.57 for the 40 items. Last month the same items cost $50.51.

The July survey confirmed forecasts by government agencies and commodity analysts who said food prices were heading upward sharply, following about a year of relative price stability.

"This was the catching up everybody had been predicting," reported Marsha Herrnd, coordinator of the marketbasket survey. "Reduced livestock and retail meat prices had held food prices steady during most of the past 12 months, while other sectors of the economy experienced record inflation. We expected the increase, but the size of the jump was a little surprising."

Only fresh produce showed seasonal declines, while 29 of the 40 items climbed in price, some substantially. Idaho potatoes exploded, precariously, rising from an average $1.90 to $2.68 for a 10-pound bag. The 41 percent one-month increase was the highest since a drought-reduced potato crop in several growing areas. Other big gainers were frying chickens, eggs, pork, beef steak, meal and flour.

The July figures represent a 13-month high for Kentucky supermarkets, and are 3.7 percent higher than the same period last year.

In May, the cost of the marketbasket in Morehead was $46.29.

While Morehead had the lowest prices of the communities, Bardstown was high at $58.45.

Other local averages were Salyersville, 49.92; Sebree, 50.14; Shelbyville, 52.18; Cynthiana, 53.01; Tompkinsville, 53.33; Crestwood, 53.57; Owensboro, 53.60; Hopkinsville, 54.03; Elizabethtown, 54.03; Hawesville, 54.45; Centerville, 54.83; Edgewood, 54.98; London, 55.42; Georgetown, 55.48; Mt. Vernon, 55.59; Greenup, 56.52; Lexington/Jefferson County, 57.06; Louisville, 57.60; Shepherdsville, 57.89; Stanford, 58.10; and Henderson, 58.27.

On the farm price front, hogs and eggs were the biggest gainers in the last report from the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Beef cattle and calves were also up, but all four remained well below price levels of a

$130,000 Spent On Fire

Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus has announced that a $129,866 contract has been awarded to a Pikeville firm to extinguish a burning coal waste pile affecting 25 residents of Pike County, Kentucky. The contract was awarded to Pike County Construction Company for the emergency project near Collins, approximately 10 miles south of Pikeville. "Noxious fumes and smoke, as well as open flames, are arising from the waste piles," said Walter N. Heine, Director of Interior's Office of Surface Mining (OSM). "Three utility gas lines are on or near the burning waste pile and there are seven homes in the immediate vicinity, four of them within 100 feet of the pile," Heine said. "Corrective action," he said, "will include removing approximately 6,000 cubic yards of burning refuse and extinguishing the fire both in that material and the 3,000 cubic yards remaining at the site. The refuse will be mixed with non-burnable material, recontoured, and revegetated." Funds for the work will come from the Federal share of reclamation fees levied on current coal production, under the 1977 Federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act, to reclaim abandoned mine lands.

Correction

In a recent news story, the names of cooks participating in the School Food Service Workshop on the Morehead State campus July 21-25 were listed. However, two were unable to attend, and Geneva Fraley and Rose Hart served as substitutes.

Immunizations Available

FRANKFORT — Last year, about 93 percent of Kentucky's students in kindergarten through grade 12 were fully immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, polio, measles and rubella (German measles), according to Dr. Charles Hernandez, the Department for Human Resources assistant commissioner for disease control and epidemiology.

Immunizations are available at local health departments and private physicians' offices.

Under state law, school systems cannot enroll any child who doesn't have an up-to-date immunization certificate, Hernandez said.

Retirement After 20 Years Of Service

On Sunday morning, June 29, Vasile Venetozzi retired as choir director of First Christian Church in Morehead, after 20 years of service to the church. During her years as director of the choir, Mrs. Venetozzi developed the first junior choir of the congregation, was director of the church's first handbell choir, was instrumental in negotiating the purchase of the Walker Pipe Organ, and was director of the first community presentation of "The Messiah" held in this area. To show their appreciation to Mrs. Venetozzi, members of First Christian Church presented her with two gifts and over 100 congregation members took her and her family to lunch on the day of retirement. Shown presenting the gifts to Mrs. Venetozzi is Andre Bowne who has sung in First Christian Church choir for 40 years.

Doll Club Formed

At the first meeting of the Cave Run Dolls Club, last Wednesday in Morehead, twelve members enrolled and officers were elected.

'Steel' Premiere To Be At Kentucky Theatre

FRANKFORT — The American premiere of the movie "Steel," shot entirely on location in the Bluegrass area will be held July 31 at the Kentucky Theatre in Lexington.

"Steel," starring Middlesboro native Lee Majors, is the story of a construction firm's race to beat the deadline for completion of skyscraper.

The film was shot in Lexington at the Kincaid Tower, along Vine Street and Spenndhrift Farm, and at other Bluegrass locations.

Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., Phyllis George Brown and Lee Majors will host the 7 p.m. premiere showing. They will also host a reception in the main lobby to the Kincaid Tower following the event.

The other stars appearing in "Steel," Jennifer O'Neil, George Kennedy and Art Carney — have been invited to the premiere and reception. Singer Kenny Rogers and his wife Marianne are among the other guests who will attend.

Proceeds from ticket sales for the event will benefit the Kentucky Film Development Foundation recently created by Brown to help promote the film industry in the commonwealth. Mrs. Brown serves as chairman of the foundation.

A Marriage

Kee Wah Tay (Jane McManus) and Pluck-Keneb-Nate (Gene Elliott) solemnize their marriage before Chief Blackfish (Richard Reisse) in an award-winning playwright Jane Hartman's "Legend of Daniel Boone" in Harrodsburg. For ticket information, write Box 365, Harrodsburg, Ky. 40330. The drama begins nightly at 8:30 p.m., except Sunday, through August 30.

Haldeman Reunion Attracts Hundreds

Kentucky Home." Certificates of appreciation were presented to 25 persons, including singer Gene "Jack" Hall, Mary-Alice Jayne, Jack Roberts, Frank Laughlin, Marie Franklin, Lawrence Fraley, James O. Botts, Andrew O'fult, Clifford Cassily, Ora Cline, Ellen Hudgins, Delbert Kegley, Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Caudill, Lacy Kegley, Homer D. Hall, Calmoe Hicks, J.R. Watson, Ronnie Fraley, Larry Plank, Jack Evans, Terry Plank, Dewey Stevens and Danny Smedley.

"Anything Haldeman does, they do it in a big way." —Frank Laughlin

Winners of the parade float contest were the Haldeman adult volleyball team. Making up the family with the most generations was Tina Stegall Sizemore, Mary Barker, Pamela Brandon and Joye Brandon. Traveling the most miles to get to the reunion was Homer D. Hall of California.

During the informal afternoon session, music was provided by Harold Tackett, Gene White, Sandy Knipp, John Paul Wilson, Bill Patrick, Weida Tackett and Gene Jack Hall. Stan Messer and Bethany Stevens were winners of prints by Christine Barker.

Frank Laughlin said his former students would know he didn't need a microphone to speak to a gymnasium full of Haldeman alumni. Laughlin, who was a teacher and principal at the school, was the main speaker at the reunion banquet Friday night.

Not only are they winners at their sport, but the Haldeman adult volleyball team also was judged as having the best float in the reunion parade.

The "then" side of the "then and now" float featured a genuine wringer washer.

All two of the first graduating class from Haldeman High School attended the reunion last weekend. Edyth Cline, Morehead, and Harlan Bockook, Florida, were the class of 1929.

"We're from Haldeman, couldn't be prouder," shouted this truck load of cheerleaders.

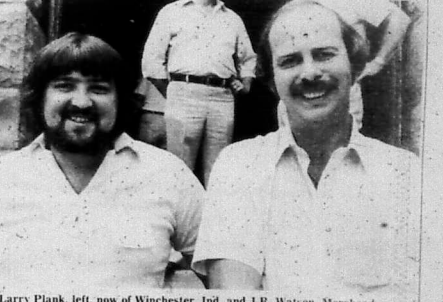

Handshaking and the passing of old pictures were popular activities at the Haldeman reunion. One woman said she had been hugged and kissed more than at any other time in her life.

Gene "Jack" Hall was among a number of musicians performing at the reunion. He also acted as master of ceremonies for most of the two-day event.

Rowan School Board Chairman Eugene White (center) tries with a couple of friends to identify persons in an old photograph. White attended Haldeman High School and participated at the reunion by playing with his band.

Larry Plank, left, now of Wigchester, Ind. and J.R. Watson, Morehead, were members of Haldeman's county champion basketball team in the early 1960's.

The Pacazo family, assisted by Sandy Knipp (at rear) were after-dinner entertainers at the banquet Friday night.

All the "dolls" on this float agree that Haldeman is still young at heart.

Randy Lambert gets a base hit over the weekend during the district nine American Legion baseball tournament conducted at the Morehead City Park.

Legion Team Wins Seventh Straight District Title

The Morehead Post 126 American Legion team won its seventh straight district crown Saturday night by defeating Ashland, 8-3.

The Morehead team will face Corbin, a team they have defeated four times this year, this afternoon in the eastern sectional held in Shelbyville.

Wendell Bailey and Ted Carter combined the pitching duties Saturday night to nail down the title.

Bailey pitched six and a third innings, struckout eight, walked three and allowed five hits.

Carter came in with the bases loaded and one out in the seventh and "threw smoke," according to coach Don Hardin.

Randy Riddle, playing left field, got things of with a home run in the second inning.

In the fourth inning Joe Dawson reached base on a walk and scored when Joe Magrane hit a single.

Morehead was quiet until the sixth inning when they produced three runs on four hits. Troy Whitt led off with a single, Shawn Johnson doubled, Jeff Dixon singled and Randy Lambert also singled.

Two more runs scored in the seventh inning when Randy Riddle scored and Troy Whitt singled.

Riddle completed the scoring in the eighth inning with his second home run of the contest.

Ashland scored two runs on two hits in the second inning and one in the ninth on a double.

Morehead finished with eight runs on nine hits, no errors and nine men left on base.

Ashland scored three runs on eight hits, three errors and left eight men on base.

Morehead began the double elimination tournament with a 7-2 win over Fleming County.

Mike McCann went the distance allowing just two runs on six hits. The 16-year-old struckout 10 without giving up a walk.

Post 126 jumped out to an early 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Lambert singled, Magrane doubled, and Danny Johnson singled.

Base hits from Whitt and Johnson provided two runs in the second inning.

Post 126 completed scoring in the fourth inning when Whitt and Johnson each scored after receiving walks.

Morehead shutout Ashland, 8-0 in their second game of the tournament behind the excellent pitching of Joe Magrane.

Magrane pitched the entire nine innings, giving up just three hits, struckout 16 and walked three.

Catcher Joe Dawson hit a 'deep sacrifice' to left field which scored Johnson with the first run in the opening inning.

Morehead scored two more runs in the third inning on one hit, a triple by Lambert.

Post 126 sent 11 batters to the plate in the seventh inning, scoring five runs on two hits.

Morehead scored eight runs on seven hits, made just one error and left 10 men on base.

Ashland didn't score, had three hits, made one error and left six men on base.

Jessamine Co. Defeats Little League All-Stars

Jessamine County ended the Morehead Little League All-Stars dream of playing in the state tournament last Thursday.

Morehead was outlit, 17-2 and lost, 12-3.

Coach Roy Robertson told the team to hold their heads high after the game and that they didn't have anything to be ashamed of. "If circumstances were different, the outcome might have been different," Robertson said.

Robertson went on to say, "This is not a bad team, everyone pulled together and played good ball. I'm proud of you and hope all of you do well in Babe Ruth."

As Robertson described it, Morehead had "a few defense lapses," two of which came in the third inning when Jessamine broke the game open, scoring five runs on six hits.

Jessamine scored first, with two runs in the opening inning. Morehead came back with two in the top of the third as Jody Wilson singled and later scored on an error. Richie Lambert, who reached base later that inning because of an error, scored on a sacrifice hit by Ty Howard.

Roy Robertson started the game on the mound for Morehead and lasted two and a third innings. He allowed five hits, and recorded two strikeouts. The younger Robertson didn't walk anyone.

Robertson's Dad replaced him with Jason VanHoose with one out in the third inning. VanHoose didn't have much better luck. The first batter he faced lined a triple and the second singled.

VanHoose allowed nine hits, five strikeouts and one walk. He also blasted a home run over the right field fence to lead off the fifth inning.

Jessamine scored two runs in the fourth inning, and three in the sixth inning.

Steve Young, the league commissioner, told the players they represented the community well and he was proud of them. "It's been some season and quite a ball game," Young said.

Roy Robertson, the coach for the Morehead Little League All-Stars, speaks with his second pitcher of the evening, Jon VanHoose.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Cubs Manager Preston Gomez was abruptly fired Friday by General Manager Bob Kennedy and was replaced by Coach Joe Amalfitano. The club is in last place in the Eastern Division.

Kennedy, in a telephone interview from Los Angeles where the Cubs opened a West Coast road trip Friday night, explained he felt a change was in order to "shake up this club." "I know it was sudden but it was something that needed to be done," he said.

STOVEPIPE-WELLS, Calif. (UPI) — Gary Morris completed 40 miles on the first day of his run through Death Valley Friday en route to the 14,495-foot summit of Mount Whitney, 147 miles away.

Morris weathered air temperature of 123 degrees Friday and surface temperatures of nearly 190 degrees. He expects to make the run in 50 hours; which would bring him to the peak of the Lone Pine, Calif., mountain at 9 a.m. EDT Sunday. Only one man — Al Arnold — has ever made the run, then completing the ultramarathon in 84 hours in 1977.

LIBERTY, Mo. (UPI) — Three Kansas City Chiefs veterans, angry at the amount of money spent by the team in off-season acquisitions, have failed to report to training camp.

Head Coach Mary Levy says the action by running backs Tony Reed and Ted McKnight and linebacker Whitney Paul won't win any favors from the team.

LATROBE, Pa. (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Steelers continue their two-day practice sessions today, then will be giving Sunday off from the rigors of training camp.

Clear Creek Campsites To Be Closed For Repairs

The U.S. Forest Service has announced that it will be closing the Clear Creek campground area for two weeks beginning Monday, August 4. Steve Hale, of the U.S. Forest Service in Morehead, said the two developed camping loops at Clear Creek would be closed for road construction and campsite rehabilitation. Improvements to be made include a water system and reinforcement of the existing campsites.

Hale said the camping loops should reopen on Friday, August 22. He said the sites then would be up to the same standards as other camping areas in the Forest Service system. The closing and repair work will not affect the picnic grounds at Clear Creek and undeveloped camping loop near the picnic area. Hale said there are no plans to improve the undeveloped loop because funds are not available.

Menifee Festival Gets Underway Friday

By ALICE AKIN
Staff Writer

When Lee Jackson got the brainstorm to "hold a" "Down-On-The-Farm" Festival in Menifee County, she had no idea the event would snowball to the proportions it has now reached. "The response has been terrific," said Mrs. Jackson, who attends many area festivals peddling her craft items she makes in her Frenchburg shop, Country Joy Flowers.

The first annual festival gets underway at 9 a.m. Friday and will run until 6 p.m. Sunday on John and Lee Jackson's 160-acre farm on Igo Ridge near Wellington which is on the edge of the Daniel Boone National Forest, north east of Natural Bridge. "People won't have any trouble finding it," said Mrs. Jackson. "We're posting prominent signs in all directions."

Mrs. Jackson said she became serious about organizing the event after attending an area tourism meeting last spring. "I realized then that Menifee didn't really have any events like the other surrounding counties such as Sorghum Day in West Liberty or Court Day in Mt. Sterling and I thought it would be a fun thing to do and be good for the county as well," she said.

Mrs. Jackson said the festival is designed to be like an old-fashioned gathering of friends and that she hopes to keep things "as simple and old-time as possible."

More than 65 vendors of flea market items are expected at the festival peddling everything from plants and produce to school supplies and antiques.

There will be soap beans (300 pounds of them) bubbling in a 35-gallon iron kettle and home-made hominy stirring nearby.

There will also be demonstrations in homemade lye soap by Merrell Lawson, of Frenchburg.

"We've also heard from many music groups who will be playing throughout the festival," Mrs. Jackson said. "A lot of the activity will take place around the cabin on the Jackson farm including craft demonstrations during the day."

In the evening, the cabin porch will become a stage for the musicians. "Old Fashioned hayrides and buggy rides will also be offered as well as fishing and swimming in a nearby mountain-fed creek and hiking in the Daniel Boone National Forest."

"All events are free to the public with exception of camping which is $2 per night," said Mrs. Jackson. Mrs. Jackson said she is expecting thousands to attend the first annual event. "We've already made arrangements to get more food in here should we run out," she said.

More information may be obtained by contacting Mr. and Mrs. John Jackson, Box 56, Wellington, Ky, 40387, or by calling (606) 768-2555 or (606) 768-3297.

He said that he was not at home at the time of the tremor but that his daughter and her husband, Patricia Ann and Phillip Ramey, were in the house. "They thought it was a tornado," he said.

Jolly, a farmer, said he was in Bath County at the time of the quake, picking up a fox hound from Sterling Jamison. "I was out in the yard sitting against a big elm tree when it started shaking," he continued.

"We didn't know what was happening and we were shaking so hard. We had never felt anything like it before," Jolly said.

He said the damage to his ceiling and chimney had not been estimated. "I'll have to look around before I know if anything else was damaged," he said.

According to Fleming Sheriff G.W. White, homes in Fairview and Pecksville were moved from their foundations and several chimneys collapsed. Cowan—about 10 miles from the center of the quake.

In Carter County, several home owners reported cracked basements and chimneys but no major damage.

In Bath County, Deputy Sheriff Bobby Bowman said that no serious problems had been reported to the sheriff's office.

The damage was mostly limited to chimneys and cracks in ceilings," he added.

According to one report, a new van was damaged when a falling chimney hit it in Owingsville. The van's owner, Tony Barber, said the roof of his vehicle was dented and the fenders were scratched.

In Menifee County, no major damage was reported but Deputy Jailer Paul Stapleton said, "It sure scared a bunch of us out of growth."

Stapleton said he was half asleep in the trailer when the tremor started.

"I thought a truck had hit the trailer," he said. "It nearly shook it off the foundation and I thought it was going to crumple in on me."

Stapleton said he ran outside and realized what was happening when he saw the car vibrating.

"I was in an earthquake in the late 50s up in Ohio, so I knew that's what it was," he said.

Elegant Structure

This grandiose structure is how the Rowan County Courthouse looked earlier this century. With the recent movements toward renovation of the Martindale Building into county offices, it is appropriate that a Kentucky Yesterdays essay appears on page B-12 of today's edition. The courthouse has twice been decapitated with the tower being finally removed. The exact date of the last renovation is not known, however; the Courier Journal's May 11, 1930 article on the inauguration of John Howard Payne as president of Morehead State Tower in the background. This postcard was provided courtesy of the University of Kentucky.

Stamper Indicted —

Attorney Joseph Lawless said some of those named were not considered co-conspirators.

The names include Russell R. McClure, a former vice president for financial affairs at Morehead State University. He was secretary of finance and administration under Gov. Carroll but later resigned that post to become a special assistant to the governor.

Others mentioned in the indictment, but not accused of wrongdoing, include: former Democratic Chairman Howard P. "Sonny" Hunt; Lexington attorney Jackson White, former Transportation Secretary James E. Gray and Kenneth Brandenberg, state police commissioner.

The state bought the 541-acre Hidden Valley Resort in Powell County from Investors Trust Inc. of Indianapolis, an insurance holding company, for $315,000.

The price was lower than two state-ordered appraisals but it was more than the $300,000 paid by Investors Trust two years before for 673-acres according to the deed.

The state had planned to remodel the old resort and use it as a minimum security prison. Those plans were abandoned, however, when an explosion destroyed a would-be dormitory, killing one inmate worker and injuring 10 others in June 1978.

The indictment alleges that Stamper used his influence as a state senator to bring about the purchase. It charged that he concealed a financial interest in the property and that the state paid an inflated price for the land.

The grand jury charged that the conspiracy involved efforts "to rig property appraisals, manufacture phony expense reports and extort numerous payments from Investors Trust."

The indictment also alleges that Stamper failed to report the income of his 1977 tax return of the $68,000 supposedly extorted from the investment company. The second count of signing a false income tax return stems from Stamper's alleged failure to report the income on an amended tax return filed in 1979.

Link is charged with conspiring to defraud the state and extort money from the investment company by acting as a front for Stamper and Link's reported use of the mail to exchange option agreements, letters and checks with Investors Trust.

Stamper was first elected to public office in 1975 as state senator for the 27th district which covers Breathitt, Elliott, Jackson, Magoffin, Menifee, Morgan, Owsley, Rowan and Wolfe counties.

Stamper, who graduated from Ezel High School, attended Morehead State College. After graduation, he returned to work in his father's wholesale grocery store on Grassy Creek, before beginning a series of successful business ventures, which included a bottled-gas dealership, a restaurant and Greyhound bus station, an automobile dealership and a motel.

Early reports from West Liberty and other areas served by Sen. Stamper were of shock and disbelief, although his name previously had been mentioned in connection with the grand jury, which has investigated numerous areas of alleged corruption since it was empaneled in June 1979.

State Rep. Woodford "Woody" May of West Liberty, when asked how Morgan counties were reacting to news of the indictment, said, "How would it sound to you or me if someone in your family or mine died?"

Rep. May called it "a very sad occasion for the senatorial district."

The representative said he had known the senator all his life and that they were personal friends. He added, "To me, he's not guilty of what they have charged with."

"He's been one of the hardest working businessmen in Morgan County and honest. He's a hard-working senator and people who know him very well understand this," said May.

Rep. May said he had only talked with Stamper casually since the indictment, but that Sen. Stamper appeared to be taking the news as well as could be expected.

Some of the other topics reportedly investigated by the grand jury have been campaign finance, state insurance contracts, dating to the administration of Wendell Ford, now a U.S. senator, alleged irregularities in the state's regulation of coal mining, monthly checks paid to Gov. Carroll's children by a Lexington businessman and Hunt's financial affairs.

Fire Razes Home

A Christy Creek home owned by Ivory Blankenship was razed by flames Friday at 9:24 p.m. Origin of the fire has not been determined.

Josephine DeHart, occupant of the one-story frame home, was not at home at the time of the blaze. The home was well involved at the arrival of two fire trucks and seven volunteer fire fighters.

Water from a nearby creek was used to extinguish the blaze. The owner requested that the rubble be allowed to burn, to help with cleanup.

Firemen were at the scene until 2:30 a.m.

featured.

The new store will sell Radio Shack's internationally known Realistic stereo equipment, radios, tape recorders and CB two-way radios. Microtona test instruments, Archer antennas ArcherKit and Science Fair electronic and hobby kits.

Also available at the new store will be the Radio Shack TRS-80 Microcomputer System, a complete, ready-to-use computer for business, educational and home applications.

In addition, the store will stock a wide variety of electronics parts, semiconductors, tubes, tools and hard-to-find items for hobbyists and experimenters.

Radio Shack, a division of Tandy Corporation (NYSE), headquartered in Fort Worth, Texas, has more than 7,000 stores and dealers in all 50 states, Canada, and in seven countries operating under the name Tandy International Electronics.

Radio Shack is unique in that it owns and operates extensive manufacturing facilities in the United States, Canada, Japan, Taiwan and South Korea which produce a considerable share of the company's merchandise.

The bulk of Radio Shack's domestic manufacturing is in Fort Worth, Texas. These facilities presently include Tandy Advanced Products, Tandy Instruments, Tandy Electronics Packaging, Tandy Magnetics, Tandy Speakers, Tandy Wire and Cable, Tandy Crystals and Tandy Communications Antennas.

Virtually the entire output from these factories is delegated to the Radio Shack store chain. The company's newest Fort Worth-based facility produces the new Radio Shack TRS-80 computer system.

Tandy Electronics Packaging brands, plates and boxes Radio Shack's line of lifetime guaranteed electronic tubes, and packages most of the small components sold in Radio Shack stores.

Radio Shack is also said to be the only retailer in the world making its own line of magnetic tape. Tandy Magnetics produces all three brands of tape sold by Radio Shack stores: SuperTape, Realistic and Concertape, in open reel, 8-track cartridges and cassettes.

Tandy Speakers provides a substantial number of raw, or unmounted, speakers to the Radio Shack store chain, and recently began production of several finished speaker systems.

All of the wire and cable sold by Radio Shack stores is produced by Tandy Wire and Cable. Tandy performs a multitude of encasing, braiding, insulating and molded cable/connection operations as well as actually "drawing" the wire from the various conducting metals.

Delta Receives Gas Rate Hike

FRANKFORT — Delta Natural Gas Company has received approval from the state Energy Regulatory Commission for a rate increase. The increase is expected to produce an annual revenue increase of $305,383 for the company.

The commission's decision means that gas will cost an average of 8 cents more per thousand cubic feet.

The new rates will apply to all areas served by Delta and its subsidiaries, Gas Service Co., Cumberland Valley Pipeline Co. and Laurel Valley Pipeline Co.

Delta filed for the rate hike after an increase in the price of wholesale gas it bought from various suppliers.

Fleming Woman Dies In Mishap

FLEMINGSBURG — A 20-year-old Fleming County woman, formerly of Morehead, was killed in a two-car accident Sunday afternoon in downtown Morehead.

Details of the accident were not available at press time Monday pending notification of the victim's relatives.

Bob Crawford, the owner of the Mountain Lodge on Flemingsburg Road, hired the Non-Art Sign Company

"Exuberance is beauty," William Blake of Louisville to construct and mount these eight foot letters to improve the visibility of his services.

Three Injured In KY 377 Wreck

Three people were injured Saturday afternoon when two cars collided on KY 377 about six miles north of Morehead.

Belva Branham, 79, of Cranston Road, driver of one of the autos, and Nellie Mae Branham, 75, his wife, were both listed in satisfactory condition at St. Claire Medical Center following the accident.

Another passenger in the Branham auto, Carrie Jefferson, 68, was also treated for injuries at St. Claire.

According to the state police report of the accident, Branham apparently pulled onto KY 377 into the path of another vehicle driven by J. Michael Plank, 19. Plank was not injured. The accident occurred shortly after 1 p.m. Saturday.

Police Report

A vehicle driven by William M. Bigham III, 17, Morehead, had to be towed to his home after an accident on US 60 Friday, July 25. Patrolman John Brown said Anita C. Reed, 20, Morehead, stopped in traffic and Bigham struck the rear of her car.

An accident in the parking lot of McDonald's occurred Saturday, July 26 at 12:21 p.m. Michael O. White, 28, Ashland, had parked his car and Deborah G. Curtis, 19, Morehead, was backing from an adjacent space when the accident happened. Officer Julian Dickerson was at the scene.

Energy Assistance Program Available

A new Energy Management Assistance Program (EMAP), aimed at helping business owners and operators save energy and money, is now available. Services provided by EMAP are made available through Kentucky's eight state universities, including Morehead, and are free-of-charge to the firms requesting assistance.

This program, which is included under the Kentucky Department of Energy's State Conservation Plan, was developed primarily to meet the needs of commercial and industrial firms that lack the in-house technical staff to plan and carry out an effective energy conservation plan.

EMAP is designed to provide expert counseling about energy and money-saving opportunities that can be accomplished at an individual business. The work entails discussing with a business the specific steps in conducting an energy audit.

Another person-to-person approach that will be utilized is through workshops for firms with similar energy problems and opportunities to evaluate specific types of problems. Many businesses in Kentucky will have annual energy costs of $30,000 to $50,000 and can expect to save up to 20 percent of this cost or up to $6,000 to $10,000 each year with little or no financial investment. This could double in many instances if capital investments are completed for installation of higher cost retro-fit measures with less than a three-year payback. Comparable savings can be expected in any size business.

Individual businesses will be able to identify those specific energy and cost-saving actions that can be accomplished with the help from the university serving its area.

Each of the eight state universities has established an EMAP office and has been assigned a designated area to serve within the state. The universities and the telephone numbers for making contact are as follows:

- Eastern Kentucky University (606) 622-3232; Kentucky State University (502) 564-5699; Morehead State University (606) 783-3829; Murray State University (502) 762-3392; Northern Kentucky University (606) 292-5499; University of Kentucky (606) 257-1751; University of Louisville (502) 582-6342; Western Kentucky University (502) 745-2640.

Committee To Examine State Property Leases

The legislative Committee for Program Review and Investigation has decided to delve further into state leasing of property.

A preliminary report, prepared by Legislative Research Commission staff, focused on 100 leases in Franklin County, noting "discrepancies" in several leases. The report said rent payments were made in advance in some cases, citing a case in which the entire amount of a 35-year lease was paid in advance, a violation of state law.

It further said the state had leased property which didn't meet fire standards. After the property was remedied to meet fire codes, the state's rent was increased. The preliminary document also called attention to the state's lease of a Frankfort motel for use by Kentucky State University. The study said that while the school needed 28,000 square feet, a 52,000 square foot facility was leased.

The report explained that appraisals are currently being conducted on 12 pieces of property leased by the state to determine whether it is preferable to purchase or lease property. It recommended terminating the investigation into state leasing once those appraisals are obtained.

The committee agreed to pursue a different line of inquiry on a related topic, state ownership of land. While the committee originally hoped to determine the cost of land ownership to the commonwealth, it discovered that neither the Secretary of State nor the state Finance Department has a complete list of all state-owned lands.

To develop such a record, the committee agreed to ask the Secretary of State, the state Finance Secretary and representatives of the state's county clerks and property valuation administrators to discuss state land records with the committee.

A report on the state Bureau for the Blind was presented to the committee today. Basically, the report concluded that the bureau served more clients and spent twice as much per individual than the Bureau for Rehabilitation served.

The bureau took over services for the blind in 1976 from the rehabilitation bureau.

The study strongly suggested making several internal changes within the bureau such as consolidating several divisions within the division for field services. It also recommended eliminating the ombudsman office in the bureau and transferring this function to the office of the Secretary for Education and the Arts. Among other things, the report suggested the state establish a non-profit organization to provide services currently provided by the division of technical services such as technical research and development of products to aid the blind.

Charles W. McDowell, executive director of the Bureau for the Blind, said the bureau had seen the report only 13 days ago and thus has not yet developed a response to the study. The committee asked that he have a formal response in time for the committee's next meeting in August.

In other action today the committee asked the legislative staff to review legislation resulting from the committee's actions over the last two years and to ask government officials affected by the laws to report on their compliance.

A report on bonded debt requested by the committee is expected to be presented at the group's September meeting, a legislative staff member said.

Commissioner Named

FRANKFORT — Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. has appointed Public Protection Secretary Foster H. Pettit acting commissioner of the Department of Banking and Securities effective July 16.

John L. Williams Jr. resigned the post last week.

It is expected that Gov. Brown will appoint a new Banking and Securities commissioner soon, Pettit said.

4-H State Fair Trip

The Rowan County 4-H Council will be sponsoring a State Fair Trip by sponsoring a Rowan County 4-H Extension Office Fair on Thursday, August 7th. 4-Hers who are interested in attending should stop by the County Extension Office, located upstairs in the Courthouse, not later than Tuesday, August 5, and pay their fare which is $1.50.

The bus will be leaving from in front of the Rowan County High School at 7 a.m. on August 7 and returning sometime between the hour of 10 p.m. and 11 p.m. This is a trip for 4-H members. The 4-H Council will be selecting the adults to chaperone the trip.

White Grubs In Lawn

If white grubs are problematic in your lawn, it's time to act NOW. July and August are the months to apply chemicals to control white grubs. White grub infestation is marked by large brown patches of lawn, but treatment must be applied before the patches are visible. White grub infested lawns usually will be dead by late August or early September if grubs haven't been controlled in July and August.

For best control of grubs, mow the lawn, rake out dead grass and thatch before treatment, spread Dylux, Durban or Diazinon, and wash down into the soil immediately after treatment with one inch of water.

Watch For Fall Armyworms

According to Dr. Townsend and Dr. Dowd, extension entomologists, University of Kentucky, College of Agriculture, farmers should be on the look out for fall armyworms showing up in corn. This year's first fall armyworm moth was caught during late June in Christian County and the degree of infestation will depend on how things go for the insect on its northward flight from the Gulf Coast.

These light-to-nearly-black insects are about 1 1/2 inches long at the adult stage and have chewing mouthparts. The armyworms reproduce until frost and will seriously damage corn if left untreated.

Although corn at all stages is

Marshall Sets Registration

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. — Students who register in advance for Marshall University's fall term have until Aug. 22 to pay their fees, says MU Registrar Robert H. Edkins.

Any student who has been admitted to Marshall may take advantage of early registration which is being conducted on a walk-in basis weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Main 1B, located in Old Main's basement.

Early walk-in registration for the MU fall term will continue through Aug. 29; however, students registering after Aug. 22 will be required to pay their fees when registering.

Registration by mail, another option open to students, will continue to be offered through Aug. 22, the registrar noted.

Information on registration procedures, materials and course schedules are available from the Registrar's Office, which is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays. After 4:30 p.m. and on weekends, they may be obtained from the campus Security Office, located at the southwest corner of Old Main.

susceptible, particular attention should be paid to corn that hasn't tasseled and Feeding damage characteristics include the removal of lots of leaf tissue, particularly toward the top of the plant. Developing ear, silks, and tassels may be partly or totally destroyed if left untreated. The presence of sawdust-like matter is a tip off to the presence of the fall armyworm.

Time For The Things You Enjoy

By MARTHA HUNTSMAN

What makes life worth living for you? Whether it's spending time with your family, developing a talent, pursuing an interest, or getting involved in more community affairs, you need time for it. Even though you start off your day with the same number of hours as anyone else, different demands may eat out different-size bites of your day. You may have added, like many women today, the pressures of an outside job to the already demanding duties of your family, home and community.

The question is: how do you juggle them all together and still come up with time for the things you want to do? It does take a big effort, but through planning your schedule, simplifying your work routines, and deleting unnecessary steps, it can be done.

Look for time leaks: Possibly, you are quite well pleased with the way you manage time, thinking you are doing the best you can under your present circumstances.

Analyze your days closely for any wasteful leaks — for instance, those watching T.V. programs because you were too tired to do anything else nights. You'll probably find at least one such leak, and this recapture a segment of time for another purpose.

Take a look at yourself: Are you ready to change your habits or would you rather stop with admitting you need to change? To admit that you manage poorly does not alter the situation, but it's that necessary first step. Next, you must be willing to go to the trouble of breaking old habits and making new ones. Don't be afraid to try something different — you may like it!

Change is inevitable. Instead of dragging your feet, you can bring about an earlier change for the better and reap the benefit that much sooner.

Your biggest problem will be to get yourself to look at your old method objectively — so resolve now to be critical of yourself.

How are you operating now? Start with a simple job first, to learn the procedure. Break it down into steps. Write down every step you take, the motions made, the tools and supplies you use. Now look over your list with the following points in mind.

Is every step necessary? Can you eliminate any part of the job. If the job you are analyzing is laundry, can you skip the ironing of any clothes? Can you eliminate sprinkling the clothes by ironing them right after you take them from the line or dryer while damp?

Are you using the right tools? Take a critical look at every operation to see if you are using the best tool possible to do the job smoothly. Plan your day and week to give first priority to the get-to-do jobs followed by the others in order. A mental or written plan will help you develop good work habits which will save you time. Time management is a continuous process.

U. S. Walks Out Of U. N. During Speech By Iranian Delegate

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States walked out of a General Assembly meeting on Palestine during a speech by Iran's delegate to protest the holding of the America hostages in Iran.

"We owed it to the hostages," U.S. Ambassador William vanden Heuvel said later Friday, explaining the first American walkout from the General Assembly in nearly 15 years.

Vanden Heuvel and his delegation stayed until Iranian delegate Ali Shams Ardekani took the floor and immediately launched into a tirade against Israel and the United States. Ardekani, Iran's ambassador to Kuwait filling in for Iran's U.N. Ambassador Mansur Farhang, who resigned last week, called Israel a "parasite" and the United States an "enemy of world peace."

The United States last stalked out of the chamber on Oct. 15, 1966 when Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg turned his back on the Cuban speaker.

Vanden Heuvel, who returned to the assembly after the Iranian finished his speech, said the walkout "was deliberate" because of Iran's backing of the militants who have held 52 Americans captive for more than nine months in the Moslem nation. "I told my senior colleagues in Washington I was going to do it," Vanden Heuvel said. "I left before he began speaking and came back after he finished. I had no idea what he said."

"I was leaving out of respect for our hostages and to remind all member states here of the obligations all of us have to honor international law."

In a second walkout later, Arab hardliners, including Iraq, left when Egyptian Foreign Minister Boutros Ghali took the rostrum to denounce an "unholy alliance" of Israeli and Arab rejectionists.

"The paranoia of extremism" on both sides was the cause of the stalemate on Palestine, Ghali said. "Israel is now trying to renege its obligations, taking advantage of Arab rejectionism."

"Rejectionism, in fact, has become the meeting ground of both Israel and the Arab rejectionists. Both sides may have different motives. However, they have one objective. Both do not want a Palestinian state."

He also joined the other Arabs in calling for Israel to withdraw from all Arab territories occupied in the 1967 war, including East Jerusalem, and to dismantle settlements in the conquered lands. Almost 80 delegates have addressed the assembly's emergency special session on Palestine, which began Tuesday, and more than 20 are scheduled to speak Monday before it will move to a vote on a non-aligned resolution.

The resolution reaffirms the Palestinians' right to return to their homes and establish an independent state, calls on Israel to begin withdrawing from occupied territories before Nov. 15, and threatens the Jewish state with sanctions if it does not comply.

SHORT ROWS

By Nevyle Shackelford

What goes up must come down as a maxim of ancient wisdom and true one-ness, but what the old saw fails to add is that how whatever descends makes all the difference in the world. This is particularly true when it comes to getting down from a ladder. If a person falls off or the ladder falls in some way, he could be hurt and hurt badly.

To prevent such a mishap when using a ladder for picking apples, mending gutters, or patching roofs, the National Safety Council concerned with rural safety activities, makes these recommendations:

First and foremost buy or make only a first quality ladder of the right size and type for the job or jobs and inspect it before each use. If it is defective or wobbly, repair or replace it.

Then when moving a ladder, have a partner to help. Watch for overhead power lines. Ladders should never have been used when their ladders touched hot wires.

When placing the ladder for climbing, set it on a firm level footing, placing the base one foot out for every four feet up. Place the ladder where you can work without undue reaching or leaning and don't climb beyond the third rung from the top of a straight ladder nor the second step from the top of a step ladder. Another good idea is to transport heavy tools and materials up by rope.

Something else very important to using a ladder—never, never use a ladder unless you are physically able to climb up, do the job, and come down safely. If not, don't do it. Also, when using a ladder, wear comfortable shoes or slippers with slip-resistant soles. Clean mud, snow, oil, or any other debris off footwear before climbing. The National Safety Council states that falls around the old homestead rank high as a cause of accidental death and disability and, along with suggestions for avoiding injuries caused by misuse of a ladder, gives these ways to help you stay in your feet.

When going out to do a job, choose the proper footwear or the purpose. Use handrails for going up and down stairs. Watch out for tripping hazards. Pick up and put things away. Be cautious when carrying bulky items and use a sturdy step ladder, step stool instead of a chair or other makeshift "ladder" when reaching for something on a high shelf or placing an overhead light bulb. In doing so, don't lean overreach. Wipe up spills immediately and be extremely careful and be safe.

On The Dotted Line
 The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office is pursuing court cases against businesses which allegedly misrepresented the terms of their contracts to induce consumers to sign them.
 Misrepresenting the terms of a contract to get someone to sign that contract is an unfair, false, misleading and deceptive practice.
 Almost every Kentuckian will sign some kind of contract during his or her lifetime. The most common types of consumer contracts include: retail installment contracts, automobile loans, small loans obtained from lending institutions, insurance agreements, leases, property purchases, and home improvement contracts.

Consumers should not be afraid to sign contracts, but they should be cautious. The best way to deal with contract trouble is to prevent it from occurring.
 You can reduce your chances of having contract problems by following these bits of advice:
 —Become familiar with the other party to the contract. Contact your state or local consumer protection agency for information regarding the business' reputation. Ask the business to provide you with names of previous customers so that you may check with them.
 —Read the contract yourself and then have someone explain it to you. Note how much money is involved, how much of that is interest, the amount of the monthly payments and whether or not the contract has a provision for cancellation.

 —Don't rush into any major contract. Consider it overnight. Discuss the deal with someone else to get a different perspective.
 —Never sign a contract with blank spaces in it. Keep copies of everything you sign.
 Many consumers find themselves wanting to cancel contracts because they feel they have been treated unfairly. Certain circumstances must exist however, for a consumer to cancel a contract. Courts consider a wide variety of factors when ruling on a contract's validity.

 Although a contract may be cancelled if certain conditions exist, there is no easy method to determine whether or not a contract is valid.
 A court may cancel a contract if a consumer can prove he or she signed that contract based on significant misrepresentations given by a salesperson. It is also possible for a consumer to cancel a contract, in certain cases, if the other party does not fulfill his contractual obligations. If a provision of a contract violates a statute, it is generally considered invalid.

 Some contracts have their own cancellation clauses. These clauses, found in such contracts as those for home solicitations or business opportunities, set certain conditions under which that contract may be legally cancelled by a consumer. These conditions usually include a time limit on the consumer's right to cancel and a specified method of notifying the business of the consumer's decision to end his legal obligations.

 Consumers who find themselves with contracts involving an attempt to resolve them, the other party must be immediately. If the problem cannot be resolved promptly, the consumer should seek the advice of a private attorney.
 If you have questions or complaints about the contract practices of Kentucky businesses, write the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.
 As a Congressman, former Kentucky Gov. A.O. Stanley made the first motion for $250 to be used for research into the causes of roof falls by the Bureau of Mines in 1910.

Consumer Comments

This column is written by Steven L. Beshear, Attorney General of Kentucky. Reader having questions (or complaints) should write to Mr. Beshear at Frankfort, Ky.

GARDEN SOME PLANTS ARE REALLY "COOL"

While you may shiver conserving energy by lowering the thermostat this summer some plants will be happy, healthy and actually like it. These are some of the plants that like 45 to 55 degrees at night, give or take a few degrees.

The Chamaecyparis Humilis, the fan palm, has leaves that form a "fan" can withstand temperatures as low as 45 degrees at night.

The pittosporum is another plant that is good in drafty locations and can take temperatures of 40 degrees at night. The Pittosporum needs only a few hours of direct sunlight a day but will do well in just bright light. Allow plant soil to become almost dry between watering, but when you water make sure it runs out the bottom of the pot. Prune back before any new growth starts in early spring.

The Nerium Oleander Var (oleander), slim, grey-green leaves and red, yellow, white or pink flowers, likes a temperature of about 40 degrees during the winter months. Prune carefully, the juice and leaves are said to be toxic. Keep fairly dry until early spring and summer then soak it.

The Chinese Podocarpus is an excellent plant in areas where it might receive a blast of cold air, it likes 40 to 50 degrees at night and 65 to 85 in the daytime. Keep soil barely moist, about 4 hours of sun a day or just bright conditions. Prune to size that is best for your home as this plant grows to 6 feet or more. Propagate from stem cuttings in the fall months only.

Small Citrus trees do well in 55 degrees, moderately watered, add more when fruit starts developing.

Fuchsias thrive on daytime temperatures that don't go over 70 degrees and night temperatures of 50 degrees. In addition, they like moist air circulating around them at all times. If you have a damp, cool basement, well-ventilated with an adequate fluorescent light set-up, the fuchsia would love it.

Fotted Araliae also like it very cool, preferring a night temperature of around 55 degrees with about a 10 degree rise during the day.

Rainbow Cause
 A rainbow is caused by sunlight playing on water, usually rain, though mist from a waterfall or a garden sprinkler can create the same effect. The sun's rays are refracted, or bent, as they enter the water droplets. The light is broken up into the colors of the solar spectrum. The rainbow actually forms a complete circle, but the bottom half is cut off by the horizon.

Controversy Now Rages Over Alaska Wilderness

Back in 1867, when the U.S. bought Alaska from the Russians for $7 million, critics of the purchase branded it "Seward's Folly."

The phrase expressed their contempt for Secretary of State William H. Seward, who negotiated the deal, as well as his scheme to acquire more than half a million square miles of cold, barren, "worthless" land, and area one-fifth the size of what is now the "lower 48" states.

Today there is no dispute about Alaska's worth. Seward's deal ranks with the purchase of Manhattan for $24 in trinkets as one of history's greatest real estate bargains.

But Alaska is still controversial. There's a battle raging over the vast "land beyond" as Congress attempts to decide the fate of millions of acres of Alaska that belong to the American people. On July 21 the Senate began an Alaska lands debate in an effort to settle a question that has been called the most important conservation issue of this century.

The question, oversimplified, is: How much of Alaska should be developed and how much protected from development?

The argument is a bitter one. Some developers are accusing the conservationists of trying to put Alaska's riches in a "deep freeze" while some conservationists are calling the developers "rape and run" exploiters.

Some major conservation groups, such as the National Wildlife Federation, insist that a balance between those extremes is inattainable.

Battle lines for the Congressional debate were drawn last month when, in separate press conferences on the same day, a coalition of 53 conservation and other public interest groups called for passage of a bill sponsored by Senators Paul Tsongas (D-Mass.) and William Roth (R-De.) while Alaska's Gov. John Jay Hammond demanded adoption of a bill reported by the Senate's Energy Committee.

At their press conference the conservationists dismissed oil, gas, and timber developers' claims that the Tsongas-Roth measure would "lock up" vast acres of Alaska's natural resources. In fact, they pointed out, under Tsongas-Roth, which is similar to the Alaska lands bill overwhelmingly passed by the House in May, 1979, 95 percent of all favorable potential oil and gas areas in Alaska would be open to private leasing for exploration and development.

60 percent of Alaska's mineral potential would be outside of protected parks, refuges, and wilderness areas.

A timber harvest adequate to sustain Alaska's forest products industry would be allowed.

The conservation groups complained that the Senate Energy Committee's bill would cut 38 million acres of wildlife refuges from the House-passed bill, thus opening up priceless wildlife habitat to mining and other development. In addition, they argued, it would allow oil and gas exploration in the fragile caribou calving grounds of the Arctic National Wildlife Range, would open three areas in national parks and preserves to hardrock mining, and would mandate overcutting of the magnificent southeast Alaska forests.

By opening up millions of acres of vital wildlife habitat to surface mining exploitation, said Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation, the Senate Energy Committee's bill threatens the future of healthy wildlife populations in Alaska.

"Alaska's caribou, grizzlies, wolfspine, musk-ox, and Dall sheep — mammals which are found in almost no other state — are dependent on undeveloped habitat for survival," he explained. "In addition, millions of waterfowl that migrate throughout the world depend on Alaska's pure and undeveloped wetlands for nesting and breeding. The Tsongas-Roth measure guarantees a safe future for these precious wildlife species."

Kimball ridiculed the idea that Tsongas-Roth was an "anti-hunting" bill, as it has been labelled by developers, pointing out that the bill would leave 91 percent of Alaska open to sport hunting. The areas left open to hunting contain the vast majority of Alaska's big game species.

At a session with journalists following the conservationists' briefing Alaska's Governor Hammond, speaking for the Senate Energy Committee's bill, defended his state's record on environmental problems and argued that it must develop a diversified economy.

Answering the conservationists' report that Alaska will soon have the highest per-capita income in the nation, he complained that it also has the highest federal income tax burden per capita and the nation's highest cost of living.

Hammond insisted that there would be "little hazard" to caribou on the Arctic National Wildlife Range as a result of oil exploration under the Energy Committee bill, Alaska, he said, "does not so much have to be protected from Alaskans as it must be protected from the inconsistent policies of the federal government."

Virtually the only aspect of the argument on which both sides agree is the fact that its outcome will be important to Americans now unborn. Jack Calvin, who flew to Washington from far-out Sitka, Alaska, to speak for the Tsongas-Roth bill summed it up: "The children of the nation and generations into the future will be grateful that some parts of the magnificent land of Alaska have been preserved for their education and enjoyment."

In the Senate, on the eve of the debate, few disputed President Carter's judgment that the bill finally passed by Congress will be "the most important environmental decision that will be made in our generation."

Alaska is one-fifth the size of the "Lower 48."

By Soc Clay, Wildlife Editor

It was blistering hot as I eased the canoe down the shady edge of Greenbo Lake. Northeastern Kentucky was caught in the middle of the worst heat wave in decades. Steaming out of the Southwest, the blast of hot air had wilted everything that came in contact with its blawtorch breath. The 100-plus temperature and high humidity had even driven the fishermen from the lake — something mighty rare indeed, at Greenbo during summertime.

Earlier, I had driven through the campground to check camper reactions to the weather. As expected, many were inside modern recreational vehicles, the whirr of air conditioners overpowering the buzz of summer insects working along the campground edge where Queen Ann lace and brown-eyed Susans were in full bloom.

Less fortunate campers who didn't own power-consuming cooling devices, were seeking refuge in shady areas where they could pick up an occasional breeze playing between the steep hills. Most of the tents were vacated which meant these campers were enjoying the coolness of Greenbo Lake at the beach area.

Wildlife along the lake shoreline was also absent as the canoe glided silently along, only the whisper of the paddle disturbing the heated silence. Normally, it is not at all difficult to catch a minnow's act as it works the under-cut bank at water's edge, seeking crayfish, frogs or unsuspecting small minnows for its noon meal. Even the birds were silent off someplace where they could find some form of relief from the heat.

Greenbo is a complete state park with the focal point being the 200-acre, blue-green lake. A lake noted for huge largemouth bass. A body of water that year after year withstands tremendous fishing pressure both day and night and still produces excellent catches of bass, bluegill, crappie and catfish. A lake that is not for a super effort by area sportsmen, would not be there today.

It was in the early 1950's and I was a student at the old McKell High School. A drive was being conducted in Greenup and Boyd Counties to raise funds for a private fishing lake. Local sportsmen were determined to build themselves a lake after repeated turn-downs by state and federal agencies.

It had all started when a local sportsman's club in Greenup County had purchased an old farm on Clay Lick for the purpose of making a headquarters for their members. The price had been low and soon it was discovered that more farmers on the creek wanted to sell — also at a dirt-cheap price. An idea was formed. Why not raise funds and have a giant sportsman's club where all the contributors could belong and enjoy the eventual development on Clay Lick?

A LOVE CANOEIST returns to dock in the early morning mist after a night of bass fishing at Greenbo.

NIGHT TIME FISHERMEN while away the time by singing a few campfire songs before the night becomes dark enough for pursuit of the wily largemouths of Greenbo.

Ashland Oil Announces Coal-Oil Mixture Plant

ASHLAND — Ashland Development, Inc. recently announced the construction of a coal-oil mixture plant on Ashland's South Point, Ohio, industrial site. The plant will be semi-commercial size and will produce about 18 million gallons of fuel per year. The operation of the plant will provide data for the subsequent design of a commercial size unit.

Fuel produced from the plant has excellent potential because it can be substituted directly for fuel oil, yet its coal content will reduce the oil used by about 50 percent. Reducing fuel oil use in this manner will decrease our dependence on imported petroleum.

The fuel can be used in power plants, steel mills, mineral drying, and in industrial and industrial boilers. Ashland's research work on the stability and combustibility of the mixture has produced very encouraging results. The product from the plant will be tested in several different applications to help determine the market potential.

Process facilities have been designed, and construction is under way. The plant will begin operation in early 1981 and will employ about 16 people initially.

The South Point, Ohio, location offers the advantages of ready access to coal and residual fuel oil, both of which are produced by Ashland Oil, Inc., and some of the equipment at the idle plant can be used in the process.

Ashland's South Point, Ohio, industrial site is managed by Ashland Development, Inc., a subsidiary of Ashland Oil, Inc. Ashland Development, Inc. was recently organized to explore and develop new business ventures and technical undertakings.

Greenbo Lake Was Created By Sportsmen

Kentucky's Dept. of Fish and Wildlife Resources was called in. Minor Clark, who was then in charge of fisheries in the department, came to Clay Lick to investigate. His initial determination was that the area was not fit for a lake — the ground wouldn't hold water!

Now the canoe eased its way across the top of beautiful water some 50-feet deep. To make a long story short, the land did hold water! The dam was constructed and one of the state's finest small lakes was completed.

It took about 10 years before the real fishing possibilities of the little 25-acre lake would show. Delbert Grizzle, a wirey bass angler from nearby Flatwoods, had discovered the secret of catching good bass from the daily crowded conditions at Greenbo — that was to fish at night.

It was in the heat of summer when Deb threw out a black plastic worm and pulled in a 10-pound plus bigmouth that set a new Kentucky State record for the species. A year later, in 1968, he bettered his old record from the lake and for the state with a considerably heavier largemouth that still stands as the biggest bass ever taken in Kentucky, a 13 lb., 8 oz. lunker!

As the canoe glided into a shady area near shore, a big bass slowly finned its way into deep water. At least a four-pounder, sightings of such fish are everyday experiences in the clean, clear waters of Greenbo Lake.

Perhaps the continuous observance of big bass in the lake is what makes it so popular among bass fishermen from all over the area. Anglers at least know the fish are there, regardless of whether they can catch them or not.

The tremendous popularity of Greenbo Lake in its early existence, convinced the state park system that Greenbo would be an excellent place to develop a new park.

A total of $60,000 dollars was raised. It was a super human effort by far-sighted men in the community who knew the area desperately needed outdoor recreation. With the money, more than 3,000 acres of land was purchased, but then came the heart-breaking news. It would require an equal amount to build a dam across Clay Lick.

The decision was a good one. Today, a complete park facility has been developed at Greenbo and it attracts thousands of users from all over Kentucky, West Virginia, Ohio and from every state in the Union.

Facility-wise, there is the Jesse Stuart Lodge with 36 guest rooms, dining and meeting facilities. Of course, there is a pool, beach, boatdock, campground, picnic areas — the usual developments found at Kentucky State Parks. The Michael Tygart Trail originates at Greenbo and connects with the 200-mile Jenny Wiley Trail. There is also a loop trail in the park that allows day hikers their choice of short hikes or longer walks. The 3,300-acre park is a wildlife refuge where deer and other forms of birds and animals are abundant.

The two-mile paddle to the beach was a searing experience. The fun of water, however, could be heard long before the happy swimmers came into view. Though they were crowded and the water was turbulent from the heavy activity, bathers were in a fun mood; laughing and shouting, splashing and throwing all manner of water toys about.

A lone angler near the beach pulled in his lines and fired the outboard for the return trip to the dock. "Catch anything?" Only a few small crappie, was the reply.

Sundown. It is cooler on the lake. I have had an excellent dinner at Jesse Stuart Lodge. Fried catfish is a specialty here. My canoe sits motionless at the dock provided for those who wish to dine at the lodge. It will soon be dark.

The canoe cuts the water easily as I paddle slowly along the darkening shore. A disturbance at the water's edge. Was it a fish or the musk in action? Deepening shadows prevent a clear picture.

The flyrod was strung a while back and a large bass bug was tied to the end of the short, stout leader. Conditions are now right for surface action at Greenbo. Unlike my bass fishing contemporaries, I prefer surface to deep water fishing. If a bass is within four feet of the top, it will take a noisy bass bug.

Pop, pop — pop, pop, pop. The bug works the shoreline's shallow water. An hour goes by. It is pitch dark. Only starlight casts a slight glow on the lake's surface.

Pop, pop — explosion! A bass takes the water-disturbing critter from the top of the lake, disappears under the surface only to charge straight up and out with a loud thrashing on the water. Slight fluorescence in the water allows me to catch a glimpse of the action. Mental images record the near sightless action.

A good fish of 14-inches comes reluctantly to the canoe's side. The big hook of the bug is removed harmlessly from the bass's jaw. It swims away unharmed. In two days it will feel again, perhaps on someone else's hardware.

An outboard purrs down the middle of the lake. Bass fishermen are now out in force. They have come from communities surrounding the lake, mostly but there are a few serious anglers encamped at the park. They have finished late evening coffee and prepared their tackle for a night of fishing.

By midnight, there is a dozen or more of the silent fishermen dropping lures into the water. Deb Grizzle might be there trying for the 15-pounder he is firmly convinced swims in the depths of Greenbo Lake. Others are there after a fish such as the one I caught.

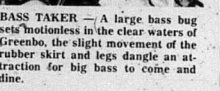

A beautiful lake, an excellent state park and majestic surroundings all add up to an exciting facility and it is furnished for our pleasure by the sportsmen of northeastern Kentucky.

THE LARGEST BASS ever to be taken from the waters of Kentucky was this huge 13 lb., 8 oz. largemouth being displayed by the angler who caught it from Greenbo Lake, Delbert Grizzle of Flatwoods.

JESSE STUART LODGE at Greenbo offers a complete lodging and dining facility for visitors as well as area guests.

BASS TAKER — A large bass bug sets motionless in the clear waters of Greenbo, the slight movement of the rubber skirt and legs dangle an attraction for big bass to come and dine.

Q. Is there a new treatment that starves tumors?

A. Investigators at the Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, N.Y. have shown shrinkage of tumors by depriving them of certain amino acids and vitamins. This type of treatment may not be useful since tumors compete for these acids and vitamins more efficiently than normal cells. As a result, in a starvation treatment, normal tissues may be damaged more than the tumor tissue. Starvation would weaken the patient further, so this method is not considered a useful way to treat patients. In fact, the opposite is true.

Hyperalimentation, or force-feeding, has been used as a way of boosting the patient's caloric intake when he is weakened by disease or as a result of chemotherapy or radiation treatments. By keeping the body in a good nutritional state while the tumor is being attacked with chemicals, the patient receives a greater therapeutic effect from his treatments.

Contact the Hopeline for up-to-date cancer information, referral, or counseling. Call 1-800-432-9321 toll free Monday through Thursday 9 A.M. to 9 P.M., or Friday 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. Write us at 915 South Limestone Street, Lexington, KY 40536.

Tourism Dates Back To Roman Days

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD

If you think tourism is a comparatively modern activity, listen to this: Reading back into history, especially Roman history, the evidence is that it is an old old pastime.

More than that, research reveals that ancient Roman tourists behaved like modern American vacationers. They stopped at motels, complained about the food, bought paperback books, and spent beyond their means.

But the Romans faced a few unusual hazards not likely to be encountered by today's tourists. Current travelers will not likely run the risk of being sold into slavery or becoming unwitting cannibals.

Before the Romans Empire declined and fell, it had built some 50,000 miles of first rate roads stretching all the way from Scotland to the Sahara Desert and from western Spain to the Exaplates. On these roads a Roman rode in the most luxurious carriage he could afford. The philosopher Seneca once took a trip in a compact model, but the Stoic had to admit he felt wretched all the way.

On the road, Seneca and other scholars perused the ancient equivalent of paperbacks — parchment books that were more convenient to carry than the ordinary papyrus scrolls.

Some wealthy travelers slept in their carriages or in tents, forshadowing modern campers. Others stayed in expensive inns. Strabo, the well-traveled Greek geographer, recommended several inns where the food was excellent.

Along the major roads were "man-sions," rowdy lodging places where a Roman could pull up his chariot and spend the night. These places, however, were something less than ideal. Some of the motel keepers watered the wine, stuffed beds with grass instead of feathers, and grossly overcharged. They were often in league with highwaymen who kidnaped wayfarers and sold them into slavery.

These innkeepers were often careless, too, with the quality of food they served. One guest found what looked like a human finger joint in his otherwise excellent stew. His suspicion was quickly confirmed by his traveling companion who was non other than Galen, the great physician and anatomist.

The Roman poet, Horace, often wrote complainingly of these "knawish publicans." On one trip he griped about being kept awake by noisy frogs and a "designing wench," the daughter of a donkey driver.

It is written that Romans, even as Americans today, delighted in visiting historical landmarks. They loved to travel to Greece and visit the Asia Minor where professional guides expounded the history and legends of Athens, Delphi, Ephesus, and other centers. And like some cities of today, Greek cities revived and staged festivals to attract tourists. Obscure celebrations such as Poke Sallet, Strawberry, and Apple Butter festivals became common because promoters never missed an opportunity to attract "new moonies" into their home towns.

In those older times a well-heeled Roman never had to carry more than 50 denarii in cash. Just as now, banks issued traveler's checks, but the fee was a stiff 12 percent of their value.

So as can be seen from the foregoing, there is little that is new about tourism, and that human nature never changes. It also offers additional evidence that, to a great extent, history ever repeats itself.

POINTERS ON PETS

Training your dog? Don't discourage him from barking completely for this is his way of alerting you to possible danger. But excessive barking can and should be curbed. Follow this simple and effective procedure: firmly grip his muzzle for a few seconds and, in a stern tone of voice, give him a one-worded like "Quiet" or "Silence". Then let go. If the barking is not resumed at that moment, praise him in a soft-spoken, friendly tone of voice.

Dogs need care as well as training. For example, watch your dog when he scratches. It may not just be fleas. Like humans, dogs get skin disease. The symptoms may include excessive scratching, hair loss, oozes and scabs, sores, eczema, chafing and scales, and "hot spots".

"Hot spots" (acute moist dermatitis) are most shabby, painful raw areas on a dog's skin. They occur as a result of licking or scratching an already established skin irritation or infection. Sulfadone Medication for Dogs, developed by a veterinarian, can effectively treat "hot spots" and other canine skin diseases. It's available wherever pet care products are sold.

Information Sought For State Calendar

Information for the 1981 Kentucky Calendar of Events is being sought at this time. This 100,000 copy publication will be released at travel shows across the United States and Canada as well as distributed to interested people in Kentucky.

This publication lists Tours and Excursions, Festivals, Fairs, Horse Racing, Animal Shows, Folk and Country Music, Square Dancing, Outdoor Drama, Art Exhibits, Boat and Auto Racing, and other special events that tourists are interested in.

Naomi Graybeal, Calendar Coordinator for the Department of Tourism, Frankfort, needs all of this information for the April-October 1981 edition by September 1, 1980. Graybeal says that the travel shows begin early January, and the editing and publishing of this Calendar needs this much time.

Anyone in Morehead and Rowan County who would like his or her activities listed may contact Reuel Buchanan, Director of the Morehead Tourism Commission, at telephone 784-6221 or P.O. Box 66, Morehead. He will assist in preparing activities for publication in the 1981 edition of the Kentucky Calendar of Events.

Rowan County's Courthouse Has Been Twice Decapitated

Kentucky Yesterdays

© 1980 Stuart Seely Sprague, Morehead State University

According to the Centennial Edition of the Rowan County News, Morehead's first courthouse was a log building that burned either in 1880 or 1885. It was succeeded by a large two story frame structure, of which several photographs survive. One photograph, the property of the late Norman Wells, showed the militia on the courthouse lawn July 4, 1885. Separate buildings housed the sheriff and the clerk's office. The Superintendent of Schools had no office at all and the fiscal court in May 1895 ordered a door constructed "on the outside of the office now occupied by the Sheriff of Rowan County to the back room of said building." Obviously, there was overcrowding.

$14,000,000 was agreed upon as follows — $5,000 when the foundation to the house is complete; $5,000 when the roof is on and the remainder, $4,000, when the work as agreed is finished. The matter of furnishing the structure with pews, seats, desks, tables, blinds for the windows, lamps, and stoves was left to October when $10 to $1,000 was earmarked for such purposes, half to be paid for through the 1899 tax levies and the other half through 1900 revenues.

Due to the placement of the new courthouse and the need for revenue, the Fiscal Court decided to keep the offices, the Clerk and the County Attorney on the Public Square and "to rent said offices to the best advantage." In 1900 two vaults were purchased from the Art Metal Construction Company for $500 each.

There were signs that the county was getting itself into a financial bind and in December of 1901 the First National Bank of Lexington had two suits filed in the Rowan County Circuit Court. Not until November 1902 did the county decide it was better to settle the matter quietly. It was 1903 before the county was in a position to pay for seats it purchased in 1900 from the Grand Rapids School Furniture Works.

The cornerstone above the entrance of the building dates the construction of the edifice as 1892. From Fiscal Court records it appears to have been 1900 before the facility was ready for use. (Photograph by Stuart Sprague)

Also, in 1903 the Fiscal Court had to pay for repairs to the nearly new building when a brick chimney fell through the roof.

Perhaps it is reassuring with all the squabbling and fuss of recent years regarding a new building to realize that Rowan County has gone through that trauma once before.

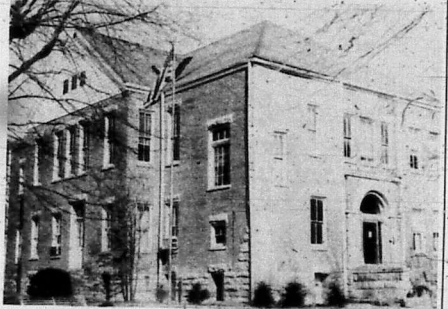

"repaired so as to be safe and comfortable"

This closeup of the Second Courthouse, the first of which we have a photographic record, was taken on a court day or other special occasion. The coming of the railroad in the early 1880's helped turn Morehead from a town of log houses to frame buildings, as sawed timber became readily available. (Photograph courtesy of Norma Powers)

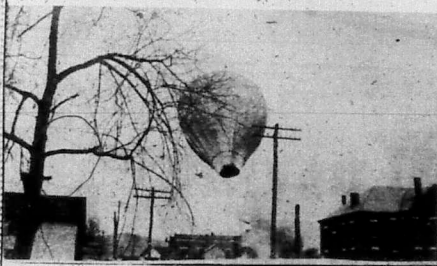

In the Spring of 1897 "a good and sufficient fence" was ordered "built around the Public Square, fence to be a picket fence and locust post with plank at bottom." At the same time the courthouse was ordered "repaired so as to be safe and comfortable." The voters favored a new building. And on the last day of November 1897 the Fiscal Court ordered "that a new courthouse be built where or near where the old one now stands and that the old one be torn down and sold to best advantage." The money was to be raised through the sale of $100 bonds. The $15,000 cost was to be paid off in thirds, the first $5,000 being payable in 10 years.

Not until July 1898 was a Courthouse Commission organized. J.M. Carey and W.A. Young were authorized to make arrangements for the construction of the stone or brick building. On September 13th, the commissioners laid before the Fiscal Court the plans of H.L. Rowe, a Lexington architect and on that day entered into a contract with the Lexington construction firm of Clarke and Howard. The price of

The tower, the courthouse's most distinctive feature is gone, as this recent picture indicates. (Photograph by Stuart Sprague)

These two photographs of a balloon ascension were probably taken early in the century. The two wooden buildings behind the court house on the public square might be the offices of the clerk and the county attorney that were rented out once the new Courthouse was completed. # Kentucky Had Early Connection To Movie Industry

Hollywood stars, lights, tinsel, the movies, Kentucky.

If Kentucky seems out of place with the rest of these words, better stop and think again. In the past decade, Kentucky land-

LIGHTS, CAMERA, ACTION — D.W. Griffith used a megaphone to give instructions to the cast during filming of one of his most influential films, "Intolerance."

The film was a four-part historical epoch costing more than $2 million.

scapes and its friendly citizens have caught the attention of the world's film makers and more and more films are being "made in Kentucky."

But even before that, when movies were in their infancy, Kentucky had strong ties with the film industry.

D.W. (David Wark) Griffith, world-famous director remembered by many as the father of modern film cinematography, was born on a farm not far from LaGrange at Floyds Fork (now Crestwood).

Griffith was the sixth of seven children born to Jacob Wark Griffith and Mark Perkins Griffith. After the death of Griffith's father in 1882, his mother moved the family to Louisville where she operated a boarding house.

It was in Louisville that Griffith was first drawn to the theatre. He joined an amateur theatrical company that toured Kentucky and Indiana.

Between acting assignments Griffith wrote. He turned out plays, stories and poems. Finally, upon the advice of a friend, Griffith started offering his story ideas to motion picture studios.

The Biograph Co. brought several of Griffith's earlier films, and in June 1908 he was offered a trial assignment to direct for Biograph. With a few successes under his belt, Biograph hired him as their principal director.

Griffith turned out films at an unbelievable rate. He directed nearly 500 one and two-reel films for Biograph, often turning out more than two a week. During his years at Biograph, Griffith's innovative camera technique became the basic building blocks for all modern cinematographers.

Griffith is credited with the close-ups, long-shots and the "switchback," used to build suspense, and the fade-out and restraint in expression. Griffith's new acting style using restrained movements and instead of large stage gestures made stars of Mary Pickford, Dorothy and Lillian Gish and Lionel Barrymore.

Many of Griffith's films also show his love for the state in which he was born. In his film, "A Romance of Happy Valley," the church bears a strong resemblance to the Mount Tabor Methodist Church in Centerfield, Ky., where he chose to be buried.

"Griffith was so fond of his homeland that whenever he used a postmark, it was always from Kentucky," points out film historian William K. Everson. On hotel registers all over the world, Griffith would sign his name and address as "David Wark Griffith, LaGrange, Ky.," no matter where he happened to be living at the time.

Griffith made an effort to preserve his Kentucky heritage, and historians at the University of Louisville are now making an effort to preserve Griffith's contributions in Kentucky history. The university's Archives and Records Center has received a $25,000 grant from the national Historical Publications and Records Commission to establish a D.W. Griffith library.

Approximately 30,000 pieces of personal correspondence, diaries, contracts and script outlines will be placed on microfilm at U of L. The papers are presently in the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. The project will begin Oct. 1 and will be funded through Sept. 31, 1981.

become director of production for Reliance. Magestic, a producing company for the Mutual Film Corp. It was here Griffith released the longest, most expensive motion picture of the time, "The Birth of a Nation."

The film about the American Civil War went on to become the most famous and controversial film in the first half-century of the screen.

"Intolerance" was Griffith's next major project. It was a historical epic depicting four places, modern United States, 16th century Paris, Palestine in the time of Christ and ancient Babylon. These four were placed together in a movie noted for its lavishly decorated sets which totally dominated the Hollywood landscape.

Though not quite as popular with audiences as "Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance" became a major tool for film makers all over the world who were fascinated with Griffith's never-before-used camera techniques.

After some troubling times, the business-wise Griffith became a studio director at Paramount Pictures. It was during this time he re-established himself in the industry with works like "Broken Blossoms," which introduced for the first time the effectiveness of lighting atmosphere and picture composition.

Other successful films included "Isn't Life Wonderful?" "Way Down East," "True Heart Susie" and "Orphans of the Storm."

In 1931, on his own once again, Griffith made a film called "The Struggle" attempting to regain his popularity. The film was a flop and brought Griffith's career to an end.

Workshop For Writers Set At Hindman Settlement

By Helen Prier Stacy

"The last night of workshop the group visited Mr. Still's cabin. We'll all remember how we sat there in his cabin, some in chairs, others on the floor, as he and the great lady Mrs. Arrow discussed literary properties and ideas," an aspiring writer said. "I feel that the visit to Still's cabin was the cream topping of the great literary feast we had enjoyed all week long."

Last year's Appalachian Writers Workshop at Hindman Settlement School enthused many would-be writers to begin creating with words. This year's workshop is scheduled Aug. 3-9 at the school on the forks of Troublesome Creek in Knott County.

Mike Mullins, workshop coordinator and director of the school says, "It will be an exciting week. It would have to be one of the greatest workshops. Just look at the staff. In addition to James Still we have Harriette Arnow, Wilma Dykeman, Jane Mayhall, Jim Wayne Miller, Gurney Norman, Verna Mae Stone and Shirley Williams."

Still, a native of Alabama, came to the settlement in the 1930s and became one with its surroundings. He immediately saw the beauty and strength in mountain faces and the expressive words that set his people apart.

He listened to the Jack tales and the riddles and rusties. He used them in his writing to forever document his people in honesty and love. Among his books are "Hounds on the Mountains," "Way Down Under on Troublesome Creek" and "Sporty Creek."

Harriette Simpson Arnow grew up on the Cumberland River. However, it was later as a resident of Michigan that she renewed her ties with home in such books as the unforgettable "The Dollmaker," "Hunter's Horn" and "Seedtime on the Cumberland." Like Still, her books are authentic, readable and interesting accounts of a people.

Wilma Dykeman, noted lecturer, novelist, historian and biographer, has written novels "The Tall Woman" and "The Fan Family."

Jane Mayhall of New York City grew up in Louisville. She is a novelist, poet, essayist and literary critic.

Jim Wayne Miller is well-known for his poetry, his lectures and essays. He authored "Copperhead Cane" and "The Mountains Have Come Closer." Gurney Norman, native of Perry County, is writer-in-residence at the University of Kentucky and wrote "Divine Right's Trip" and "Kinkfoks."

Verna Mae Stone, born in Knott County and lifelong resident, has natural insight in lives of mountain folk. She has written memorable accounts of mountain people and mountain ways including "Common Folks" and more recently "What My Heart Wants to Remember."

Shirley Williams, book editor and feature writer for the Louisville Courier-Journal, grew up in Knott County and graduated from Hindman Settlement School.

Some of these writers now live away from Appalachia but know the mountains and hill people well. They continue to advise aspiring novelists and story writers on writing about the things and people they know. They give advice on using words that create pictures and feelings.

The workshops is limited to 60 residential students. Tuition fee is $60; room and board is $60. Preference will be given writers from the Appalachian area or who write about Appalachia.

Evening readings, discussions and lectures are open to the public. Mullins adds, "It actually is a week's retreat to share with Kentucky writers and to absorb the sights and sounds of the Hindman area. We love our creeks and our mountains but most of all our people."

Persons interested in the workshop may get other information by contacting Mike Mullins, Appalachian Writers Workshop Coordinator, Hindman Settlement, Hindman, Ky. 41822, phone 606-785-5475.

1,800 Ford Employees Laid Off At Truck Plant

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Almost 1,800 second shift employees at the Kentucky Truck Plant operated by the Ford Motor Co. have begun indefinite layoffs blamed on declining truck sales. An additional 2,700 hourly first shift employees began one-week furloughs Friday while the plant makes changes in preparation for the new model year beginning Aug. 4.

The indefinite layoffs affect about 1,660 hourly employees — members of the United Auto Workers union already hard hit by auto industry layoffs — and about 120 salaried workers at the sprawling plant in eastern Jefferson County.

Some of the laid off second shift workers will be allowed to remain working by "bumping" employees with less seniority from first shift jobs. The seniority cutoff likely will mean layoffs for anyone with less than 11 years on the job.

Because of the repeated auto industry layoffs, the special supplemental unemployment fund sponsored by Ford has been depleted and only about 250 of the 1,660 hourly employees laid off will be eligible for such benefits in addition to the $28 weekly they can expect in state unemployment payments.

Unlike Ford's auto assembly plant in Louisville — which has repeatedly been the target of shutdowns — the indefinite layoffs at the truck plant are the largest ever since the plant opened in 1969.

Ford officials blame the layoffs on reduced orders for trucks amid the national recession. Many firms don't want to invest in new trucks which can cost up to $50,000 amid the current economic climate, Ford officials said.

The Kentucky Truck Plant produces about 100,000 annually, all made to order. This year Ford officials predict the plant will produce about 60,000 trucks.

Ford officials have indicated the second shift would be recalled if the economy improves and truck orders increase.

More than 18,000 Kentucky youths in trouble were assisted by Department for Human Resources social workers last year.

Author James Still is one of several famous writers who will conduct a writer's workshop at Hindman Settlement School.

According to the state police water safety division, the "seven" most common causes of boating accidents are having an engine too large for the craft, making high speed turns, overloading, riding on decks or gunwales, making large wakes, failing to have life jackets and fires from careless refueling.

Hot Car Interiors Bad For Children

To all the problems Kentuckians face during the above-normal temperatures, consider one more.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has issued warnings about the intense summer weather overheating car interiors, especially the vinyl and metal on child restraints.

The NHTSA has developed the following precautionary measures:

- Before placing your child in a child restraint system, check the device. If it is too hot, place a towel or blanket in the seat before buckling your child in.
- Infant and child seats get just as hot as the car seat, so when possible park in the shade.
- If you must park in direct sunlight, cover the car seat and child restraint system with a light-colored towel or blanket.
- Never let your child ride unrestrained on the regular seats of your auto. Always use a child restraint system selected on the basis of the child's age, weight and height or use the vehicle seat belt. Place the child in the back seat whenever possible. If the child can sit up, use the lap belt rather than no restraint system at all.

Antique Autos To Arrive

Packards, antique Cadillacs and early Model Ts will converge upon Franklin (Simpson County) for the Annual Antique Car Meet Aug. 16. About 200 entries are expected to compete for trophies in 26 different classes.

The auto show and an arts and crafts fair will be held on the courthouse lawn. Auto trophies will be awarded at 4:15 p.m.

For further information contact Jack Harvey, 1015 Smalhouse Road, Bowling Green, Ky. 42101.

The Montgomery News and The Morehead News

NBC Sports will present the all-new "Friday Night Fights," the renewal of "a sporting tradition" — professional boxing in prime time — that will feature sportscaster Dick Emery, WBC welterweight champ Sugar Ray Leonard and Dr. Ferdie Pacheco at ringside. Fights have already been scheduled for August 1, 8 and 22; the first matches ex-WBC champion Wilfredo Benitez of Puerto Rico against Tony Chiverini of Kansas City in a welterweight bout.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By VAL CAREW
RESEMBLANCE - I was recently reading a book in which there were photographs of famous people before World War I. One of them was Sam Gompers, the founder of the A.F.L. The picture of Mr. Gompers bore an astounding resemblance to Redd Foxx. Is there any relationship between these gentlemen? - Percy Ingram, Fanny Bay, B.C., Canada

BLAKES BACK TO BACK - Are Whitney Blake and Robert Blake related? - J.V., Panama City, Fla.
 No. Robert Blake isn't related to anyone named Blake, since his real name is Gubitosi. Whitney created the series, "One Day At a Time," with her husband, Allan Manning.

I checked Redd Foxx's office and was told not only was there no relationship between the gentlemen (which I suspected), but also that they didn't know who Samuel Gompers was. Boy, are they young!

 Phone 496-9177

KEY QUESTION - My family and I have been bothered by something for a long time. When we watch the credits at the end of shows we see one for a job called "key grip." What is that? - S. Minshull, Dackville, N.B., Canada.
 The grips are the men (and women now, too) who make the changes for the sets, moving walls around and so forth. They are the maintenance men of the set, and the key grip is the boss of the crew.

Nomadic instincts help actors' employability

By RUTH THOMPSON

Before movies and television, a standard advertisement placed by actors and vaudevillians looking for work was, "Have tuxedo, will travel."
 How much have things changed? Not that much. Actors who have done well buy themselves dream houses, but most of them, who want to continue to prosper, can't afford to lose their nomadic flexibility. It isn't often the work comes to you ... you go to it.

In fact, there have been only three major stars who have persuaded networks they were worth hiring though they wouldn't leave their home bases: Jackie Gleason, who had rooted himself in Miami, Dick Van Dyke, who favored Phoenix, and Jack Lord. Basic to each of these deals was the implication that once facilities were upgraded in these regions, other network productions would follow. Gleason's series is long gone, and Van Dyke's second series never warmed the response in the public that his first (with Mary Tyler Moore) had.

Now Lord's series, too, has ended, but there are indications that Hawaii may remain an active center for an occasional network series. The reasons are sound: The Gleason variety show and the Van Dyke situation comedy could have been produced anywhere. But as Jack Lord proved with his 12-year run in "Hawaii Five-O," if you're going to do a show with Hawaii as a setting, Hawaii is the place to be. And Lord's own company is in the forefront of production outfits trying to mint pertinent shows. In fact, he also directed last month's CBS TV-movie, "M Station: Hawaii," that starred Andrew Prine and Dana Wynter.

Which meant Lord could continue to stay home. It also meant that Ms. Wynter, Prine, Andrew Duggan and the rest of the large cast had to pick themselves up and go to Hawaii from wherever it is they call home. Not that Hawaii, with its fine hotels, is considered a hardship post.

The same cannot be said of some other islands, which also boast palm trees and pounding surf. One fine actor who says so is Trevor Howard. Mention words like Bora-Bora to him, or a movie called "Hurricane," and you evoke a reflexive shudder. The actors had to start work before the local hotel was finished. In fact the actors had finished their several months of job-oriented exile about the time the plumbing was installed.

This season Chris Sarandon is working in London and Paris on "A Tale of Two Cities," the first of next fall's Hallmark super-specials in the CBS schedule. But last year he spent two months in the desert in Tunisia for "The Day Christ Died." The year before that, his big location job was in the town of Jim Thorpe, Pa., for "You Can't Go Home Again." About that he told us, it was a charming place, but it doesn't matter too much where you are when you're working, your concentration is on the role.

Not all actors share the Sarandon role-immersion, of course, but someone who went Sarandon one better was actress Signe Hasso. She is on record as saying 10 years ago, that every time she got her travel orders she started worrying about her possessions. "So one day I just decided to give them away."

Scandinavian paper awards Bo's hubby '0'

By CINDY ADAMS

Leonid Brezhnev, first Communist of the USSR, has an expensive hobby: He collects cars. I don't even know too many capitalists who can do that ... Catherine Deneuve and an ex-lover with whom she hasn't played post office in at least 10 years, fell on one another again, if you should pardon the expression, when they met on a movie set ... Cher, who lives in a log cabin in Malibu with Chastity (that's the name of her kid not her state of mind and body) and Elijah Blue, the other kid, says "I'm too old for dating. I don't like dating." She's 34. The Philippines minted a solid gold coin in the image of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. I sat close enough to see his widow, Jean, shed a tear when she thanked them on behalf of "My General" ... I hear Prince Charles visited the heir Duchess of Windsor to dissuade her from publishing (posthumously, long after she's someday gone) a book she's written where she washes, irons, starches and hangs out very dirty family linen.

Bette Midler: "I'm Sagittarius with Aries rising, a Scorpio moon and with lots of Leo. I'm almost completely a fire chart. I'm strong. Nothing can stop me." Elizabeth Taylor's kid, Maria, razzberry'd an offer to go a little bit naked in a movie. Mommy said "no." Mommy said she's an old-fashioned girl.

Pam Dawber's idol? Jane Fonda. I don't know why, however, she didn't tell me ... Carroll O'Connor making large money even when not being an actor. His West Coast gin mill is a big success ... The Dunes Hotel & Country Club is sending me notes on George Plimpton, who was in the backgammon tournament at the Vegas Hotel. Terrific ... Robin Williams is planning to have two children.

TV makes celebs of many, not just stars

By RUTH THOMPSON

Television is now the mass medium of communication, and it has bred a species of communicator whose jobs depend on it — Phil Donahue and Dick Cavett to drop two big names — and whose high visibility has made them instantly recognizable celebrities. They are as pursued by clots of fans when they venture in public as were movie stars in the golden age of movies.

Certainly hosting your own nationwide show is one fast route to becoming a household face, but it isn't the only way. There are, interestingly, other categories of celebrities who pop up often on the airwaves and whose careers, though undoubtedly enhanced by television, are not dependent on it.

The list is as eclectic as it is big name. When the subject is foreign policy the man the major talk hosts and news anchors try to get is former Secretary of State Dr. Henry Kissinger, of course.

Someone once defined a true celebrity as someone about whom you needed to add no other biographical facts once you'd stated the name. Dr. Kissinger's eminence on the current scene goes one step beyond that. When a comedian after quick snickers with an impersonation slips into a soft German accent, he doesn't have to tell you which pundit he's ribbing. Of course, nobody does Kissinger as well as the man himself: He is comfortable with television and relaxed enough to inject his famous sense of humor into the give-and-take of interviews.

Relaxed, suitable humor has proven a plus, also, for two physicians — Dr. Art Ullene of NBC's "Today" and Dr. Tim Johnson of ABC's "Good Morning America" — who put their health tips into perspective.

Dr. Ullene believes that while minor symptoms should not cause undue alarm, neither should potentially serious ones be ignored, and that television education on the early detection of breast cancer has already saved many lives.

How to create a good self-image also has a reigning spokesman. Or rather spokeswoman. She's the dazzling Adrien Arpel, the founder of a $4 million cosmetics company. In repose, she is as exotic as Cleopatra. But she's a no-nonsense dynamo when she starts talking, and what she's talking about this season is her new "How to Look 10 Years Younger" book published by Rawson, Wade.

She launched a recent national tour with a week of demonstrations on the Mike Douglas show. After that, she was booked on local TV stations in every city she visited, often on the news programs. She's generous with formulas about facial potions that can be whipped up at home in the blender and realistic with suggestions for camouflaging what cannot be corrected.

Another celebrity with a cause is former astronaut Charles "Pete" Conrad, the third man to walk on the moon. He's having his say via commercials, instead of news shows for a good reason. The news media, which told — and properly, says Pete — the tragic news of the DC-10 Chicago air crash in May of 1979, didn't give equal time to the subsequent news that placed the blame on faulty maintenance, not on the design of the plane or its subsequent fine performance in daily flights the world over. Pete isn't just a famous face. He's one of the experts, works for McDonnell Douglas, which makes the plane, and notes that before joining NASA, he was a test pilot.

MONDAY

Quinn Cummings and Brian Andrews watch as a familiar scene is played out: mommy (Sally Struthers) and daddy (Dennis Weaver) in an argument that will lead to violence, on "Intimate Strangers," Monday, Aug. 4, on ABC. (REPEAT)

IN FOCUS

Kids will watch, so make the best of it

Have you "thrown in the towel" as far as trying to regulate the amount and type of television your children watch? Don't feel alone - most parents and teachers have too.

According to Dr. James J. Betres, associate professor of elementary education at Rhode Island College, "Most parents and teachers have given up telling their children that they can't watch TV."

The latest consensus of researchers, says Prof. Betres, is that television "does not cause violence" in children, and television "doesn't make children poor readers or under-achievers in school."

What it does do is "displace" something else your child could and probably should be doing. Also, it apparently "disinhibits" children; in other words, given a large dose of TV, a child tends to "become less concerned" about what he sees. He becomes more tolerant of it.

If your child sees constant agony of, say, the people in Southeast Asia, he or she is likely to become apathetic about these conditions, the thought (perhaps subconscious) being, "That's the way life is. Nothing can be done about it."

"These effects," say Prof. Betres, "will be almost impossible to discern" through research. The implications can be terrible to contemplate.

The remedy, says Prof. Betres, "is to help children become a little more selective" in what they watch. His summer workshop is taking a look at the television industry, some of the effects of television on children, the future of children's television and the use of commercial television in the elementary classroom.

"The most important thing regarding children and television is the parent," says Prof. Betres. "What do you do if you're a teacher and your students' parents aren't doing a thing?"

His views parallel those of the National Council for Children's Television, a think tank of some 35 people from the television industry and education. "I think their position on children and television seems to be the most realistic, in the sense that they believe children are just going to sit and watch it. They want more selectivity, however."

The ideal situation, he suggests, is to have children taught to be more selective and have the support and guidance of their parents.

Elaborating further on the belief of some that television causes violence in children, Prof. Betres says that research indicates violence comes from "children pre-disposed to violence," and TV merely sets them off. "In such cases, these children should not be exposed to violence on television."

On the positive side of constant TV exposure, points out Prof. Betres, is the fact that "kids are coming into kindergarten with double or triple the language capacity." He added that this may only be a "superficial" aspect of such exposure. He explained that of the four human vocabularies - listening, speaking, writing and reading - "The listening vocabulary is the largest."

In the days prior to TV, a normal child had a "listening" vocabulary of 10,000 words, learned mostly from family interaction. Today, with television exposure, children have listening vocabularies of 24,000 to 27,000 words.

What this means is that an average child is familiar with say 24,000 words he hears constantly on television. It does not mean he knows the connotation or deeper meaning of those words.

"For instance," he says, "a teacher asks her class how many have heard the word 'ayatollah.' Most of them will raise their hands. But when asked what an 'ayatollah' is, they don't know. We have the opportunity to develop this familiarity the children have (with more words) into some depth."

Of course, this will take time and is based on (as you already know) the proven fact that: Kids will watch TV. The sum total of accumulated wisdom to date, based on that fact, is: As a parent, don't let them watch just to "fill time."

HOLLYWOOD — There has been another switch on "The Young and the Restless," and Deborah Adair has stepped in to replace Bond Gideon in the role of Jill Brooks. Helen Suni is the actress who is playing New World leader Sumeko in the show's summer storyline on youth cults.

Josh Taylor (Chris Kostichek on "Days of Our Lives") is always ready to appear on a talk show or two, and he was recently a guest at a taping of daytime's new "The John Davidson Show." Since the show airs at different times around the country, check local listings for time and date.

Antony Ponzini was a very popular cast member when he appeared on "One Life to Live" as Vince Wolek. And now, to the delight of his fans, Antony has been appearing on "General Hospital" as Dr. Purcelli. Heather Webber's psychiatrist.

Back on the East Coast we were saddened to hear that Eileen Fulton (Lisa Colman on "As the World Turns") has been very ill with infectious hepatitis. Eileen should be back on your screens soon, however, but in the meantime Betsy von Furstenberg has been substituting for Eileen.

There were lots of happy faces surrounding the fifth anniversary cake on the "Ryan's Hope" set a few weeks back, which is only fitting for the Emmy Award-winning show. There was plenty of champagne to go along with the cake, lots of conversation and a little reminiscing when headwriters Claire Labine and Paul Avila Mayer featured a tape of the very first episode of "RH" at the party. The best surprise of all was the arrival of Kate Mulgrew shortly after the festivities began. Kate, who originated the role of Mary Ryan, was sorely missed by "RH" fans when she opted to leave the soap for the nighttime series, "Mrs. Columbo."

Growing up female in America: then and now

By EVE MERRIAM

In July "Great Performances" is celebrating The Month of the Woman on public television with a series of programs about gifted women in a variety of fields. "Out of Our Fathers' House," airing this week, is based on Eve Merriam's book "Growing Up Female in America: Ten Lives."

"All the higher mathematics any girl had to know was how many places to set at the table ... Chemistry enough to keep the pot boiling, and geography enough to know the location of the different rooms in her house — these were learnings sufficient for any woman."

That was the prevailing opinion in the 19th century expressed in newspaper editorials and delivered from speakers' platforms and church pulpits.

Young women could look forward to four principal careers. First, foremost, be all and consume all, was marriage. Beyond that goal the choices ranged from seamstresses to governess to teacher in a "dames" school where the curriculum stressed vocal music, letter writing and female manners and deportment. Physicians solemnly argued that too much mental activity could strain the female brain.

Business and professional worlds were entirely masculine. Even when typewriters were introduced, the typists were all men, because it was felt that the machines were too heavy for women to operate.

Although they were bearers of life, women were denied any knowledge of the human body. When they were sick, they were expected to point to a doll and indicate to the doctor which region he should examine. The doctor was invariably a he.

Discouraged from public speaking and appearing on stage, women were discouraged even from attending in the audience. Dio Lewis' 1871 best-selling manual offered "Hints for Health to Females" and began with this exhortation: "Girls, I advise you not to go to the theater. My first objection is that it is never well ventilated. My second objection, likewise physiological, is that it keeps you up till midnight."

There was scarcely any sports in the feminine sphere; clothing alone kept the potential woman athlete in a bind.

That was the way it was in the 19th century. Now fast-forward to Junior Wonderwomen of 1980, jogging in shorts and T-shirts bearing liberating slogans: "A woman's place is in the House and Senate," "Uppity women unite," "Sexual equality is for slow learners." Today's women are almost everywhere in the public eye. On television they are not restricted to being mere sex objects or weather girls; they have gained acceptance as newscasters, sports announcers, panelists on programs about the economy. They also serve on the technical crews.

Women drive cabs, trucks, buses; they are police officers, forest wardens, mechanics, plumbers, mail carriers, carpenters, house painters and plasterers, chemists, biologists, excavators. They are judges, mayors, members of Congress and the Cabinet; if not president of the U.S., then president of a film company.

Is it time to join in a triumphant victory chorus?

Not quite. The paradise of parity has not yet arrived. Such negative judgment is not based solely on resistance to passing an Equal Rights Amendment in the required two-thirds states of the union. Nor on the fact that the Supreme Court still lacks even a token woman member. Nor that although more than two-thirds of all banking employees are female, less than a quarter of their number are bank officials or managers.

Paychecks are still woefully lopsided. The most recent figures show that women on the average continue to earn only 60 percent of the salary of men with the same educational backgrounds. Responsibilities for child care, indeed for most domestic tasks, continue to remain a female ghetto.

But certain achievements are incontrovertible. Lawsuits challenging sexual discrimination and harassment on the job are not only brought into court, they are being won. The phenomenon of "speaking bitterness" and consciousness-raising has led to a growing sense of sisterhood among many women and of sensitivity on the part of many men.

So farewell to pink is for passive and pretty and pallid, and blue is for boyish and brilliant and bold; hail to all the colors of the rainbow for each individual.

TV TATTLE

Lucky pre-buy deal

Universal's "Coal Miner's Daughter," which has produced more than $50 million in box-office gross since its March 7 release, was licensed to ABC prior to release for a mere $3 million for several runs. As reported in Variety on Dec. 18, 1979, Universal sells a significant amount of its product to ABC. Given the success of "Coal Miner's Daughter," ABC appears to have gotten a good deal for itself, particularly if there are no dramatic escalation clauses in the contract.

Newspaper's cable show

A weekly wrap-up of Broward County, Fla., local news is now the topic of a 30-minute cable television show produced by the Fort Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel. "WRAP-UP" is an every-Friday show that includes an overview of the area's top local stories, plus interviews with some of the paper's reporters, editors and special guests of local interest. It begins with the lead stories of the week, which are illustrated by photos, followed by several interview segments.

Give 'Quincy' credit

NBC's "Quincy" has been credited in part for the passage of a bill in the Missouri State Legislature protecting elderly citizens from abuse by other adults. It was revealed in a letter of thanks to series star Jack Klugman from Missouri State Senator Harriet Woods. The episode, "Honor Thy Elders," telecast in January and May, was shown to members of the Missouri Body in a special screening. Sen. Woods wrote: "The segment presented the need far better than any speech or printed material could possibly have done. Thank you for your help; the governor signed the bill last week." The bill provides legal protection for the senior citizen as other legislation does for the battered child.

Sandi Freeman, host of the Cable News/Network produced audience participation interview show, Freeman Reports, appears weekdays at midnight on WTBS from Atlanta.

Texas' cuts umbilical cord

"Texas," a new NBC daytime drama focusing on the "volatile, fast-moving, glamorous way of life in America's glittering new heartland" (this is how the press release puts it) will cut the umbilical cord with "Another World" and become its own series on Monday, Aug. 4. Beverlee McKinsey leaves "Another World" to continue her role as Iris Bancroft in the new series. The action revolves around several generations of wealthy and/or powerful Texas families.

Danny Thomas record

Danny Thomas' second annual St. Jude Children's Research Hospital telethon in Memphis, Tenn., proved a whopping success recently by racking a record of more than $427,000 in pledges during the six-hour stint. This figure topped last year's $303,000 with room to spare.

There is real life love

In what may have been the most ambitious on-location project in daytime television drama, "One Life to Live," the popular ABC series, recently went to Paris to tape a love story tinged with mystery.

Jo Ann Emmerich, vice president of daytime programs in the East Coast, said that the Paris sequences were taped from June 17 to June 27, and are airing through mid-August.

"This will give our viewers, who may never be able to go to Paris, the opportunity to live vicariously and to see the City of Light at its most glamorous," she said. "With the extensive plans made by producer Joe Stuart, we believe that the Paris sequences are visually stunning."

The love story involves Pat Ashley, host of the Pat Ashley television interview program, and Bo Buchanan, a tall Texan who is as impetuous as he is rich and handsome. Pat, played by Jacqueline Courtney, and Bo, portrayed by Robert Woods, have had an on-again, off-again relationship. In Paris the romance is definitely on again.

Producer Joe Stuart and director Norman Hall worked with a French camera crew and hired local actors for bit roles. Although Paris experienced the rainiest June weather in dozens of years, "OLTL" taped between downpours and managed to do a dream sequence shot in the Tuileries Gardens where Bo fantasizes he's a swashbuckler out to save a Marie Antoinette-bewigged Pat.

Jacque insists that all the romantic notions of Paris are true. "No matter where you look, it's picture-book beautiful," says the actress. She adds that although the French people were gracious and cordial, and "totally unlike the stereotypes one is led to believe them to be," the men were generally "saucy."

Once, while taping in front of Notre Dame, a busload of American tourists recognized the soapsters and halted shooting while autographs were signed.

Befitting her role as a leading television personality sent to Paris to cover a fashion story, blonde, green-eyed Jacque wore fashions from an extensive collection by Christian Dior. Woods, the six-foot, dark-haired actor who plays Bo, also wore clothes designed by Dior. In addition, in his role as the scion of the wealthy Buchanan clan, he drove a big, custom-made French convertable.

Pat and Bo's adventures took them to sights every tourist wants to see, as well as to some locations few tourists visit. They went to the Eiffel Tower, of course, took a bateau mouche along the Seine by moonlight, saw Notre Dame Cathedral, Sacre-Coeur, the Arc de Triomphe, the Champs Elysees and the Tuileries Gardens, walked the winding, narrow streets of Montmartre, visited the Cafes des Deux Magots, meandered along the streets of the Left Bank, and stopped at open air food markets.

And in the midst of this beautiful city, Pat discovers a dark secret about the powerful Buchanan clan! The only thing for sure is that the suspense will be continued. Stay tuned.
