Crime Level Steady In County During 1980

On the whole, crime in Rowan County in 1980 stayed at about the same level it did in 1979, according to interim figures released by Kentucky State Police Commissioner Marion D. Campbell.

Although the final tabulation of Kentucky's 1980 crime and arrest figures will not be ready for release until about July, the preliminary data given out by Campbell shows that only two of seven categories of major crimes in Rowan County had higher figures during 1980.

The number of robberies in 1980 doubled from 1979, going from three to six. In addition, the number of cases of larceny, excluding auto theft, increased from 285 to 291.

There were three murders each of the two years in the county but no rapes reported for either year. The cases of aggravated assault decreased from 18 to 14. Burglaries declined from 131 to 128 and the number of car thefts decreased by one, from 34 to 33.

Statewide, the number of crimes reported during the past year rose

Across the state, burglaries were up 18.1 percent, aggravated assaults up 17.5 percent, larcenies up 9.4 percent, robberies up 6.8 percent and auto thefts up 1.1 percent. Of the seven major offenses followed by state police in computing the annual crime rate, only murder, down 4.2 percent, and forcible rape, down 2.9 percent, went against the otherwise upward trend.

In 1980, 321 murders were reported in the state, down from the 335 listed in 1979. In 22 of Kentucky's 120 counties, no murders were reported in either 1979 or 1980. In 26, there were no murders in 1980.

As would be expected, the state's two largest counties had the largest number of murders. Jefferson County led the state with 76 in 1980, compared with 91 in 1979. Fayette County murders decreased by seven during the year, going from 18 in 1979 to 11 in 1980.

Three counties in this region reported no murders in either of the two years. They are: Lewis, Menifee and Morgan counties. Carter, Bath, Fleming and Wolfe counties each reported one murder in 1980. Elliott and Mon-

State Police Begin Neighborhood Crime Watch

By ROB DOLLAR
Staff Writer

If state police have their way, a new crime program being initiated in the area will make thieves stick out like a sore thumb.

According to Lt. C.A. Thomas, assistant Morehead post commander, state police will begin a "Neighborhood Watch" program in Rowan County, which, if successful, will be implemented in the remaining 10 counties in the post 8 state police district.

Trooper John Lambert will coordinate the new crime program with the aid of other personnel at the Morehead post, said Thomas.

In commenting on the program, Thomas said, "It's a method of citizen involvement."

Lambert termed it people "helping us so we can help them."

"Neighborhood Watch" consists basically of neighbors watching the homes and property of each other to protect against thefts and vandalism.

Thomas said the program, in a nutshell, will involve numerous neighborhoods in the entire county designating one particular person to serve as a "community leader" who will coordinate crime information from that area and relay it to the state police.

State police plan to initiate the program "anywhere there is a lot of houses close together," said Thomas, particularly noting county areas such as Lakeview Heights, Pine Hills, Park Hills, Haldeman, Farmers and Elmdale.

"I'm sure there are other areas out in the rural county that it could also work," noted Thomas.

Lambert said state police will hopefully begin contacting individuals in the many neighborhoods across the county sometime this week. He said the purpose of the initial visit will be to determine if there is an interest in the neighborhood to start a program and if so to organize a neighborhood meeting.

At the meeting, a community leader will be picked and state police officials will explain the program to the residents, said Lambert.

Thomas said state police believe that setting up the program "neighborhood by neighborhood" will "get it across better" than trying to organize at one large meeting.

"We feel that the program is necessary because in some of these areas we've mentioned, burglaries are nearly at an epidemic proportion," Thomas noted in regard to the program initiation.

Thomas said last year in Kentucky there were 80,000 stolen property crimes which averaged out to one out of every ten homes and businesses being victimized by thieves.

He added that less than 20 percent of these thefts were cleared by an arrest.

Lambert said burglary losses in the state last year ran at an estimated $50 million with the average loss per person at $400.

"I think people are tired of getting things stolen from them," he observed.

Thomas said, "We feel like people want to get involved and help themselves in these crimes." He added that he believed a lack of coordinating measures was to blame for the small amount of participation by residents in crime prevention and detection.

The "Neighborhood Watch" is designed to provide the needed coordinating efforts between the public and state police.

Thomas said the concept is not new and has been used successfully by other law enforcement authorities across the country.

"It has been used for the past few years, but it has been concentrated in urban areas," he said.

Noting the success of the program in cities, he added, "We feel that it could do the same in the rural communities."

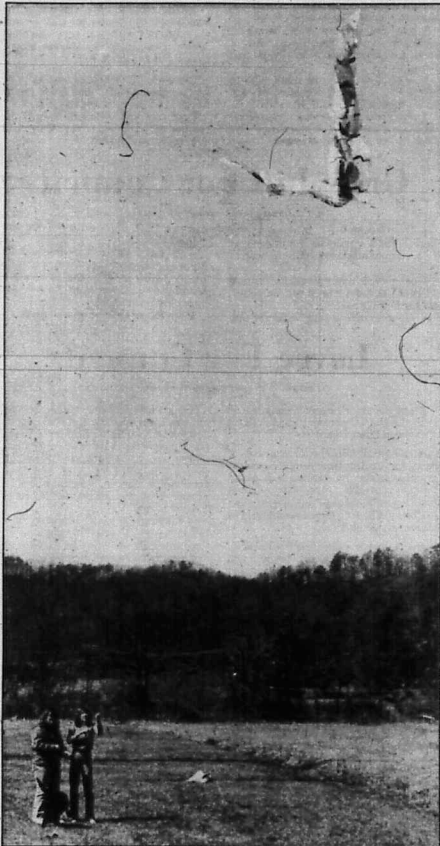

Thomas and Lambert both stressed that when police are patrolling a neighborhood, they do not know what people or cars belong at the different houses — but neighbors usually do.

Recognition of anything out of the ordinary and reporting it to the community leader, who in turn will contact the police is the key to the success of the program, they noted.

"Another aspect of this program is we will do a security check of each neighborhood," said Thomas.

Lambert added state police will point out weaknesses in the particular neighborhood, such as inadequate lighting facilities, in an attempt to help residents strengthen their area against

Quite A Kite

Anyone stretching back to look at the bright, clear sky this weekend most likely saw bright objects in the distance, bobbing with the breeze. Kite fliers were out in full force, but not all had as large a "bird" as Gail McIntosh and Diane Buckler of Clearfield. Drivers in West Morehead were able to view the typical March scene. ## Sewer Service For Trademore, Lakeview Are Topics Of Utility

By JOE LAMB

Discussions about providing sewer service to two areas outside the Morehead city limits dominated Thursday's regular monthly meeting of the Morehead Utility Plant Board.

The Plant Board agreed to make the service available to Trademore Shopping Center and to the city of Lakeview Heights, providing that the hookups are made at no expense to the city and that both groups pay the appropriate tap fees.

There was some heated discussion, however, concerning the question of Trademore hooking onto the system as Clyde Baldwin, chief engineer of the operations enforcement branch of the state division of water quality, came to the meeting "to open lines of communication" about providing the service to the privately-owned shopping center.

Trademore operates its own, state-certified waste water treatment plant, which, as Baldwin explained, was approved on the basis that it was a temporary system, to be used only until a central sewage collection system became available.

The Plant Board's most recent wastewater expansion project has brought collection lines within a reasonable distance of Trademore and the state is interested in seeing that the Trademore plant be closed down, Baldwin said.

Baldwin said that the state is concerned with sewage disposal systems having "the least impact (possible) on the water quality environment."

Although Plant Board Attorney Paul

Blair pointed out that the utility really has no choice but to provide the service to Trademore, board member Curley Barker noted against a motion to permit the shopping center to connect onto the collection line at its own expense and at a pre-determined load connection fee based on the number of plumbing fixtures.

Even though there was no evidence presented that Trademore would not be paying a proportionate share of the city's costs of operating the system, Barker, a downtown merchant, said he wanted to be certain Trademore owners "carry their own weight and, by cracker, 100 percent of it."

Barker told Baldwin, "I'm not against Trademore, but I don't owe them anything."

Caudill Auto Center Grand Opening Set

By ROB DOLLAR
Staff Writer

A new addition to Caudill Tire Company Inc. on East Main will provide area residents with the latest innovations in automobile service and maintenance, according to its owner, James T. Caudill Jr.

The company recently opened for business its brand-new "Car Care Service Center," a one-of-a-kind in the immediate area.

The facility is being called the "most modern service center in eastern Kentucky," by General Manager Bill Hough and Co-Service Manager Robbie McGrath.

The service center is a 3225 square foot facility that features a five-bay garage, a customer waiting room and a huge inventory parts storeroom.

Hough said construction of the facility began last October and the addition to the company was "very expensive."

McGrath noted the new service center has been serving customers for almost four weeks now with a good reaction.

He added that the facility has been busy since it opened, despite limited advertising and few area residents being aware of its existence.

"That problem should be solved this week with a formal 'grand opening' which will showcase the new facility to the public by way of many service specials. The grand opening activities are scheduled to run from March 16 to 21.

Coalition Will Fight Federal Budget Cuts

By ROB DOLLAR
Staff Writer

From different backgrounds they came, but with one purpose in mind - to raise their voices.

Not at each other, but instead at proposals by President Ronald Reagan to trim or eliminate some 83 federal programs for government savings of approximately $34.7 billion. One or more of these programs would affect each of them in one way or another.

Thus about 50 area residents, grouping themselves under the banner of the "Citizens Coalition," met Thursday night at the Carl Perkins Community Center to make preliminary plans to fight the budget cuts that they believe will adversely affect their lives.

Attending the meeting were many local residents as well as individuals from counties that recent state figures indicate have been hit hard by unemployment and other economic problems.

The Thursday public meeting was organized by Forrest Roberts, director of Northeast Kentucky Legal Services, Tom Clay, of Cave Run Comprehensive Care Center, and Tom Carew of Frontier Housing.

Carew opened the meeting by stating the purpose for the gathering, which he termed was to "voice our concern as citizens" over the proposed budget cuts of the Reagan Administration.

He set the agenda for the evening which included explanations of the proposed Reagan budget cuts, as well as their implications to the people of eastern Kentucky.

This year, 1982, will be the biggest year for Exxon, Carew told the crowd, commenting on the recent deregulation of oil prices.

"It could be the worst year for some of us," he added, setting the tone for meeting.

Comparing the growing profits of the oil companies and corporations enhanced in part by Reagan's easing of many governmental restrictions with the proposed cuts to numerous social programs, Carew said, "If that isn't putting the rich against the poor, then I don't know what is."

Carew claimed that much of the press and media coverage of the proposed budget cuts has been positive in nature, thus generating very little public reaction.

He said, "We love our country," but added the group is bonded together by a difference of opinion with President Reagan. Carew said that as citizens of the United States it was everyone's right and duty to speak out on his beliefs and the issue at hand was not one of patriotism.

In regard to the attitudes of Kentucky's representatives in Congress, Carew said he, Roberts and Clay have recently been in touch with Sen. Wendell Ford, Sen. Walter "Dee" Huellstemon and Congressman Carl Perkins about the proposed budget cuts. All three basically said they had to hear "from the people back home before they stood on a limb," according to Carew.

Social Program Cuts

At the meeting, Roberts explained the proposed Reagan changes in a number of social programs including food stamps, school lunch programs, social security and V.A. disability, legal services, Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC) and unemployment insurance.

"What he is cutting is going to affect a lot of people drastically," said Roberts about Reagan's proposed social program budget cuts.

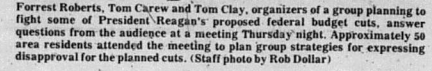

She questioned the rationale of many of the program changes proposed by the Reagan Administration saying a lack of thought was evident or else most of the proposals never would have been made in the first place.

One change she pointed out specifically was the Reagan proposal to reduce funding for the Women, Infants and Children Program (WIC) by one-third by eliminating anemic children from the program.

"They are the ones that need food stamps," she said.

Concerning another budget cut proposal regarding a reduction of federal subsidies for school lunches, she predicted that many school systems might have to eliminate school lunches entirely because of costs.

Clay summarized his feelings about the block grant proposal and other social service cuts by calling them "short-term planning," that would result in a "long-term fiasco."

Forrest Roberts, Tom Carew and Tom Clay, organizers of a group planning to fight some of President Reagan's proposed federal budget cuts, answer questions from the audience at a meeting Thursday night. take place during the 1982 fiscal year. Under this plan, the $1.3 billion that would be required during fiscal year 1982 under the present funding levels to operate these programs as they now are would be slashed to $1.5 billion, again a 25 percent cut.

Clay noted that one of the dilemmas of the block grant program would be that it would not discriminate against the poorer states; since they would not be able to support various social services to the same extent with their funds as would wealthier states.

On the local impact of the block grant proposal, Clay outlined what it would mean locally to the Cave Run Comprehensive Care Center by passing out a fact sheet which projected loss of services at the center.

Among examples he pointed out would be a 45 percent reduction in Alcoholism Treatment sobering-up services since admissions to the program would be cut by 179 from the current 325 due to the impending fund reductions.

Clay summarized his feelings about the block grant proposal and other social service cuts by calling them "short-term planning," that would result in a "long-term fiasco."

FmHA, CETA and APR Cuts

Carew spoke to the audience about Reagan's proposed cuts for Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) and the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC).

"We're not just talking about low income people - everyone will be affected by these cuts," he noted.

In regard to FmHA, Reagan's proposals call for a cut in the Home Ownership Program loans by $300 million less in 1981 and $600 million less in 1982. The dollar amount translates into 8,871 and 17,143 fewer homes being built each year, respectively.

Carew also said a Reagan proposal will eliminate the one percent interest loan (502 Loan Program) and replace them with five percent minimum interest rate loans thereby increasing mortgage payments on a typical $35,000 loan from $104 to $181 monthly.

"This will effectively eliminate families with minimum wage incomes and fixed incomes from the American dream of home ownership," he said.

Stressing the impact of the FmHA cuts, Carew observed that Kentucky last year was number three in the nation in the use of FmHA dollars.

"In Kentucky, FmHA is the name of the game if you're low or middle income," he said, adding, "In terms of home ownership, FmHA is the only."

Reagan proposals for cuts in the CETA program include the eventual abolishment of 310,000 public service employment jobs (Title VI and IID) and the complete defunding of the National Employment and Training Programs from which Frontier Housing gets its training funds, said Carew.

Carew pointed out that Frontier Housing was responsible for injecting over three-quarters of a million dollars into the local economy last year. He said Reagan's proposed cuts for the CETA program will increase unemployment in the area and be responsible for the further decline of the local economy.

In regard to the ARC, which Reagan advocates the complete defunding of, Carew said "It's tremendous what it affects."

He said the ARC has been responsible for helping to fund major water and sewer projects in the area communities, as well as funding an addition to the St. Clair Medical Center.

Carew said the effects of the proposal to do away with the ARC, if adopted, will be to further increase the cost of housing and utilities in the area and continue the sharp decline in the local economy.

He stated that President Reagan was infringing on the people's constitutional right for "the pursuit of happiness" with his proposed budget cuts for many of the social programs. Carew said to keep the people fed and clothed just enough so "we won't cause a big stink."

Audience Reaction

After Roberts, Clay and Carew had finished their presentations as to what the proposed Reagan social cuts will mean, discussion and ideas from the meeting were allowed.

One unidentified woman said, "People are not aware of what's happening - it's happening too fast." She said one major action of the group should be to inform the public on what the cuts will mean for everyone.

Commenting on the lack of reaction from the public over the proposed cuts, Robert J. Perkins, a local businessman, said he could not believe how the public is accepting the proposals without so much of a stir.

"I think Perkins needs our support. He wants to stand up and fight, but he needs the support of the people back home," he said.

Frank Olson, a teacher from Elliott for nearly 20 years in West Virginia, said he and other teachers are in a "double squeeze" having to face state cuts, as well as federal slashes.

"I've told John Y. Brown how to sell his helicopter, but that doesn't really bother me," he said.

Numerous ideas were offered by individuals in the crowd in regard to actions that might be taken. Ideas included letter-writing campaigns to state and Kentucky Congressional representatives, meetings with state Congressional delegations, formation of "telephone trees" to generate public support for the cause, informational booths at area locations and even demonstrations.

One idea for a demonstration was popular and suggested locations included the Rowan County courthouse, the state capital in Frankfort and the surrounding area.

Near the end of the two-hour meeting, people broke up into smaller groups to concentrate their efforts on the activity that was of interest to them.

No Group Action Planned

It was decided by the coalition at the meeting to attempt to generate more public awareness in Rowan County and the surrounding area concerning the proposed cuts through the smaller group activities.

Carew noted the general agreement of all to try and develop other coalition groups in the surrounding communities and build-up a following before any other actions were taken.

A definite date for the next meeting was not established, but Carew said interested persons would be contacted.

Granville Marcum, a retired coal miner from Bath County, was typical of those attending the meeting when he said while the budget program would affect many people for different reasons, everyone had to group together as "one" for strength.

His particular concern at the meeting was the proposed reduction of black lung benefits for miners, he explained. Marcum said that he had mined coal for nearly 20 years in West Virginia and added, "Coal mining is a terrible life for anyone." He said that those who had spent their lives in the coal mines had earned all of the benefits Reagan wants to take away.

Caudill Auto Center

necessary repairs or simply tune an automobile.

"It is the only accurate way to tune a car," said McGrath about the engine analyzer.

Concerning car repairs, Hough said, "Basically, it (the engine analyzer) takes all of the guesswork out of a mechanic's job." He added that before a mechanic even picks up the tools to begin a repair, the engine analyzer will have already specified the exact problems of the car.

McGrath said the engine analyzer has been received extremely well by the public thus far and should be utilized frequently with the high prices of gasoline these days. He said one man brought his car in just to have the carburetor adjusted to the manufacturer's specification, so as to achieve the maximum gasoline mileage possible.

"We hope it's going to be popular," he said of the engine analyzer.

Other features of the new service center include tyne bender equipment and a huge storeroom for auto parts. McGrath said the pipe bender allows company mechanics to do custom bending of exhaust pipes or design dual exhaust additions to cars, according to the exact specifications for any particular car.

Concerning the auto parts storeroom, McGrath said it will be responsible for reduced customer costs since the company will stock parts for the majority of automobiles on the road in lieu of having to order individual parts. "Bulk" buying is cheaper for the company, which in turn is cheaper for the customer, McGrath explained.

Previous to the opening of the new service facility, Caudill Tire Company's main business was tire sales and minor automobile service, such as brake work and wheel alignment.

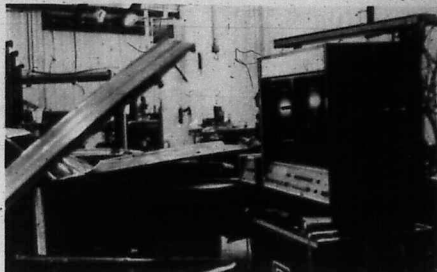

McGrath said the whole idea behind the service center has been the desire to offer customers full automobile service, which is now available.

"We don't want to turn people away for anything," he said.

The opening of the service center has also been responsible for the addition to the Caudill Tire Company staff of one of the top mechanics around, according to McGrath.

Jim "Scooby-do" Skaggs, who has over 20 years of experience as a mechanic, will serve as the head mechanic for the Caudill Tire Company; as well as Co-Service Manager of garage operations.

Skaggs lives in Irond, Ohio and will commute to and from work in Morehead.

With the $18,000 engine analyzer that is the main feature of the new "Car Care Service Center" at Caudill Tire Company, an automobile can be hooked up to the machine, which analyzes the various automobile systems, giving a printout of pertinent data and specified problems (Staff photo by Rob Dollar)

Wreck Injures Three

An early morning accident Saturday sent three persons to St. Claire Medical Center for treatment of minor injuries and then two of them to jail for public intoxication.

According to the state police report, the accident occurred 1.2 miles north of Farmers on KY 801 at about 4:50 a.m.

A vehicle driven by Charles Carpenter, Rt. 4, Morehead, was apparently traveling at a high rate of speed, when it left the roadway, became airborne and struck two trees before coming to rest on its side 50 feet off of an embankment, noted the state police report.

Passengers in the car included Phillip Kiser, Morehead, and Shirly Jolly Flemingsburg. Both were also treated at St. Claire Medical Center for minor injuries and then released.

Carpenter and Kiser were arrested by state police for public intoxication upon their release from the hospital and lodged in the Rowan County Jail.

Nearly 3,000 Acres Burn In Area Forests

By KATHY PARTIN
Staff Writer

Dry weather and high winds set the stage for the fiery destruction of nearly 3,000 acres of area private or state owned land since Wednesday.

Rains fell early Monday morning after State Division of Forestry crews extinguished the last of the flames they battled steadily all weekend. Several citations were issued, including four warrants in Carter County, according to Steve Eldridge, District Fire Control Assistant.

Jim Ragland, supervisory forester of the U.S. Forest Service, said locally the Daniel Boone Forest was not touched by fire, although Berea and Redbird districts had problems.

He said Monday's wet weather would give "immediate relief, but a few days of sun and wind and we'll have a pretty extreme fire situation."

The area has had about 19 inches below the average amount of rainfall, and "any rain we get soaks us fast," he said.

Sunday, the Division reported 18 fires burned 1,026 acres in Greenup, Lewis, Boyd, Morgan, Rowan, Carter and Elliott counties. Overall, Greenup was the county "hardest hit" by fire, according to Eldridge.

Twenty-two fires Saturday burned 937 acres; 17 fires Friday destroyed 374 acres; 448 acres burned Thursday in about 16 areas and 13 acres were lost in two fires Wednesday, the Division reported.

Along with the counties mentioned above, Fleming and Bullitt had fires Thursday. Further details about the blazes were not available at press time.

In Rowan County, 12 acres burned on the Rowan-Elliott county line Friday as the result of debris burning. Three division workers and six volunteers fought flames on the property owned by Hattie Johnson.

W.C. Bailey was burning a Bull Fork field Saturday when flames jumped the road. Three division workers and two volunteers extinguished the two acre fire.

About ten acres burned on a hill behind Haldeman Saturday. The land is owned by General Refractories. Reportedly youths were smoking in the area. Two crew leaders and 10

Raymond Swatzyna, director of the Kentucky Division of Forestry, and Jerry Zochl, regional director of the division, came to Morehead Saturday with supplies to help fight forest fires in the area. (Staff photo by Joe Lamb)

Forest and brush fires hit most sections of Eastern Kentucky as an extended dry spell and high winds turned the forest lands into a tinder box. A forest ranger and a homeowner battle a fire above that threatened Hidden Hills Subdivision near Grayson on Sunday.

Board Indicates Approval Of Anticipation Notes

Fiscal agents for the Rowan County and Ashland school systems were surprised to meet with positive reaction at a meeting of the State Board of Education in Frankfort Friday.

The school representatives requested permission to use revenue bond anticipation notes for the building of new facilities, a move the board has denied other districts in the past.

Although a decision was not made by the board, Superintendent of Rowan County Schools John Brock said the majority of the state board's members appeared to favor such action, nodding their heads as several persons spoke in favor of anticipation notes. Among those voicing approval of the notes, which have short term loan interest, was Arnold Guess, director of the School Building Authority.

The board decided to make an official decision at the April 22 meeting in Lexington, if interest rates remain at current high levels. Anticipation notes at present have about two percent lower interest rates than 25 year bond terms.

Action was postponed as the State Board wants to learn approximate construction costs, as will be revealed at the March 19 bid opening. Also, several of its members were absent.

Brock said Board Chairman Henry Pogue has expressed doubts about use of anticipation notes, and asked Rowan's fiscal agent Don Bradshaw what action would be taken if, after a two year interest period, to bond market were higher. Bradshaw, who made the presentation on behalf of Rowan County, replied the short term notes would be reissued.

The schools' audience with the Board lasted about 90 minutes. Brock returned from the meeting with an optimistic attitude, saying, "Things are looking up for us."

He explained that in terms of high interest rates, the senior high school building situation has been at a "critical state" but "we're over that now."

The "only other problems" facing the school board, he said, are getting a sewer line to the construction site on KY 32 and receiving "respectable bids."

Thefts Occur In Area

Several thefts have been reported to state police in the past few days, as well as an apparent burglary.

James Robinson, a MSU professor, reported a burglary of his father's summer house at Leatherwood. Robinson told state police furniture and several items were taken in the break-in.

State police were notified of the incident Sunday. The elder Robinson is presently in Florida.

A theft of a Rowan County trailer was also reported to state police on Saturday. James Williams told state police, thieves took several items from his trailer located at the foot of a hill on Bluestone Flat Road.

The state police received two theft reports on Friday in which thieves made off with two axels from a large truck and son tractor parts.

The truck axels were stolen from trucks belonging to the MJM Stone Co. in Morgan County, while the tractor parts were taken from the Emil Lykins property on KY-746 about one mile out of Campton.

In another reported incident, Ellis Reynolds reported the theft of his car from his residence on KY 460 outside of Jeffersonville on March 15. The car was described as a 1975 Cutlass 2-door supreme, white in color with a partial maroon colored vinyl top. State police are investigating the incident.

Several arrests were made last week by state troopers assigned to the Morehead post.

Trooper Jim Cooper arrested a William R. Wilson six miles west of Morehead on I-64 and charged him with the illegal transportation of alcoholic beverages for the purpose of re-sale. The man allegedly had 166 cases of assorted alcoholic beverages in his possession.

A Darryl Conley was arrested in Morgan County by Trooper George Gyurich on a DUI charge, but a check revealed that he had two outstanding felony warrants against him from Henderson Township, Nevada for two counts of forgery. State police officials said the man will be extradited to Nevada authorities immediately, providing he waives extradition procedures.

Grand Jury Will Face Unusual Cases Thursday

When the Rowan County grand jury reconvenes Thursday, it will be confronted with some unusual information regarding two Kentucky State Police investigations.

For one thing, the 12 jurors will hear the results of an investigation of Morehead State University's admission office that began in mid-January, upon the discovery that international students at the university apparently were being admitted to pay a monetary deposit to show financial responsibility in the United States.

That money was apparently being paid despite the absence of a formal policy at MSU requiring it.

The day the investigation was first publicly reported in The Morehead News, William Bradford, associated director of admissions at MSU, resigned.

A followup story by the newspaper showed that several foreign students said they had paid Bradford money as a prerequisite to registration.

In addition, the grand jurors will hear evidence regarding charges stemming from a party at a private residence in Rowan County where a 15-year-old male was allegedly encouraged to have sex with an adult woman.

Two state officers within the state police division of security and compliance were fired in February after information about the incident surfaced. The two officers were allegedly present when the boy was said to have engaged in intercourse with one or both of two women who were at the gathering at a private mobile home in east Morehead last December.

Jerry Ravenscraft, a motor carrier officer and M.D. "Bo Bo" Crawford, a water enforcement officer, have until April 1 to appeal their terminations but have yet to do so.

State police have been investigating the incident to see if any of the six people believed to have been at the party may have been guilty of any criminal act.

According to reliable sources, one of those present at the gathering was a member of the Morehead City Council.

Others allegedly at the party include: two other men and the two women, all of whom have yet to be publicly identified.

The investigation of the incident was begun by the Morehead police department and turned over to state police, according to City Administrator Don Evans, when it was discovered that a city official might be involved.

Members of the grand jury include the foreman, Clyde Litton, Robert Fraley, Nancy Copeland, Mary Wells,

Rowan Has Three Fires

The city department was at a small trash fire at James Trailer Court in Morehead earlier that day.

Saturday, a flu fire in a Clearfield trailer was extinguished by firemen. The blaze was contained in the mobile home.

Grass Tetany Reported

At the March meeting of the Morehead Art Guild, held on Saturday the seventh, a lot of lovely paintings were on display for a critique session. Comments and suggestions by our guest speaker for the program, Gerry Hoover, left the members with a great deal of information about color, composition, shading, painting of trees and handling of edges. Those attending were Yvonne Baldwin, Nadean Hone, Mabel Reynolds, Mary Mueller, Christine Barker, Ethel Williams, Betty Gregory, Blandina Landreth and Kay Schaefer. The members of the Art Guild are planning an exhibit to be held in May, and plans for the exhibit were among the subjects discussed at the business meeting preceding the program. Dates, hours, and other details regarding the exhibit will be announced in a future Palette Talk column.

We have heard from several members that they really enjoyed the weekend for artists and photographers at Jenny Wiley State Park. Since her work was displayed at the exhibit open to all those attending the weekend workshop, Christine Barker has been contacted by two art galleries interested in displaying her work. One gallery is located in Pikeville and the other is a new gallery opening at Larks Lane in Knott County. It appears that art weekends, such as the ones sponsored by the Kentucky Heritage Artists and the Kentucky park system, are often a source of good contacts as well as being lots of fun, and we hope that more of our Morehead artists and craftsmen will have a chance to attend one.

The Morehead Art Guild trip to Irvine has been rescheduled for the first Saturday in April. The trip will cost $10, which includes the workshop and lunch. Our hosts in Irvine will be Russell and Delores McClanahan, an enthusiastic and talented couple whose work has been shown at exhibits throughout the state. We will carpool together, leaving from the vicinity of the Methodist Church parking lot at 8 a.m. promptly.

On April 25, there will be a Sara Rouch Watercolor Workshop at the Lexington Art League Studios in Lexington. The workshop is open to nonmembers at a cost of $15. The studios are in the back of the Woodhill Shopping Center.

Friday, March 20, is the first day of spring, and with spring comes the opportunity for outdoor field trips. Later this month we will be bringing you some ideas about painting and sketching in the out-of-doors.

Life Care Highlights

The Life Care Center will hold its St. Patrick's Day party March 17 at 6:30 p.m. All families and friends are invited.

You may ask, "does it matter?" Well, our residents think so. When asked about St. Patrick's Day, one said green is the color that represents growth; another said it is a religious holiday for the Irish, and one was really enthused about the fact that the shamrock represents the Holy Trinity.

Volunteers at the Life Care Center have played a great part in the residents' lives lately. They have enjoyed and have helped the residents enjoy a variety of activities each week.

Residents appreciate a young ear waiting to hear about the "elders" experiences. This is a great way of bridging the generation gap, which doesn't have to exist, as the volunteers and residents of the Life Care have proven.

The Social Service Department of the Center encourages families who have residents at the Center to feel free to contact any staff member with questions they may have about the resident's needs.

Many patients request items from the staff that cannot be provided, such as tobacco products, personal items, writing materials, etc.

Bridge Winners Are Announced

Winners of the Morehead Duplicate Bridge Club game held March 13 were: first place, Bob Lindahl, Morehead, and Frances Edmundson, Mt. Sterling; second place, Anna Lou William and Judy Bailey, Mt. Sterling; and third place, Dorothy Conley and Virginia Rice, Morehead.

The club championship game will be held March 20 at the Morehead State University Alumni Tower Cafeteria. Players may come without partners.

Hood Doctor Is Promoted

Dr. Sharon W. Smith, assistant professor of chemistry at Hood College, Frederick, Maryland, was recently promoted to associate professor, effective September 1981.

She was also awarded tenure, which will become effective in 1982. Both actions were taken at a recent meeting of the college's Board of Trustees.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.A. Williams of Morehead, Dr. Smith has taught at Hood since 1975. Prior to her appointment at Hood, she served as a biochemist for the National Heart and Lung Institute, as a science teacher in Lexington city schools and as a chemist for Proctor and Gamble and the Charles Pfizer Pharmaceutical Company.

A graduate of Transylvania College in Lexington, she earned her Ph.D. degree in biochemistry from the University of Kentucky.

She is the wife of William O. Smith, Jr. and the mother of Dyan and Kevin Smith.

Ashland Team Ends Viking Season, 71-69

By MARK PERKINS
Sports Editor

Rowan County basketball coach Ted Trent sat all by himself on a bench in the dressing room, staring at the scorebook which was resting on the floor.

His Vikings had just been handed a disappointing loss to Ashland, 71-69, in a first round 16th regional tournament game, which brought the season to a close.

Trent glanced up and saw several reporters standing near the door wanting to get his reflections on the game.

"I'll be glad to give you some comments. As long as you don't use your pens and paper. That way you'll know how I felt out there tonight having to get by without John Stamper and Randy Eldridge. Those players are my pen and paper," Trent said.

Eldridge and Stamper, two key players on the squad, whose performance is what got Rowan County into the regional tournament, were saddled with three fouls in the first quarter.

Stamper went to the bench with his third personal with 3:17 left in the opening quarter, and Eldridge followed at the 1:21 mark.

Just seconds later Trent received a technical foul for trying to get a message to one of his players, and from that point it looked like it would be a long evening for Rowan County.

Troy Hogge had just been called for three seconds on the other end of the floor, and I was yelling at him to stay out of the lane and avoid the three second violation. The referee must have thought I was speaking to him about Ashland being in the lane too long. I just couldn't believe it. I always let the officials know that's how I coach, shouting out instructions from the bench," Trent said.

When Trent was hit with the technical, with 1:14 left, the Vikings had kept pace with the Tomcats basket for basket.

After the technical, Ashland outscored the Vikings 11-2 the rest of the first quarter.

Rowan County was hampered by turnovers through the game. They committed 21 in the first half.

Despite being down by 12 points after eight minutes of play and with two starters on the bench, Rowan County fought back and actually took a brief lead, 34-32 with 12 seconds left in the half.

Scott Crank's jump shot with two seconds on the clock gave the Tomcats a 34-32 half time lead.

Senior playmaker Matt Sparks pumped in nine of his 13 points during the second quarter.

Ashland could manage just two baskets in the second quarter, while Rowan tossed in six, and outscored the Tomcats, 18-10.

By staying in the contest despite the number of fouls affecting key personnel, the Vikings' figured to take command in the third quarter.

Just 24 seconds into the second half, Stamper was whistled for his fourth foul.

Ashland's Tom Webb took matters in his own hands in the third quarter by connecting on six straight field goals for the Tomcats.

He totaled 14 points in the third period.

In spite of that outburst, the Vikings scored 10 of the last 14 points produced in the third quarter.

Sparks hit a basket, Kelly Curtsinger scored two buckets and made two free throws and Jeff Johnson tossed in a shot.

Rowan County was never farther than five points behind in the final period and was within one point on two occasions.

Eldridge, the Vikings' leading scorer this season, fouled out with 4:45 left in the game.

Rowan County, down 69-67 with less than a minute to play, had a chance to tie the game, but was called for traveling.

"It really hurts to lose a game like this, one that we had several chances to win. I'd just as soon lose by 30 points," Trent said after the game.

Trent had high praise for his bench, which kept Rowan in the game during the second quarter. "They had two kids who can score from anywhere and they did," Trent said, speaking about Webb, who totaled 24 points, and Jerry Farrow, who tossed in 26 points.

"I think what did us in were those streak of baskets from Webb during the third quarter," the Viking coach said.

Rowan County was also hurt by five baskets being disallowed in the first half due to various violations, three seconds, or traveling. "We had a total of eight baskets called back tonight, and that really hurts," Trent said.

Curtsinger led the Vikings with 19 points. He hit five out of six shots from the field and nine out of 11 free throws.

Stamper scored 16 points, despite spending too much time on the bench. The junior hit eight out of 10 shots from the field and led all players with 10 rebounds.

Sparks potted in five out of 13 shots from the field and three out of five free throws for a total of 13 points.

Darrell Littleton was the other Viking in double figures with 10 points. Littleton connected on three out of five shots from the field and all four of his free throw attempts.

Jeff Johnson added seven points, and Eldridge accounted for four points.

As a team the Vikings hit on 25 out of 44 shots from the field for 36 percent. They hit 19 out of 24 free throws or 79 percent. Rowan County outscored Ashland 35-22.

While Farrow and Webb accounted for 50 of Ashland's 71 points, Crank also hit double figures with 11 points.

Ashland hit 28 out of 60 shots from the field and 15 out of 25 shots from the charity stripe.

Rowan County's season ends at 13-14, after a slow 2-2 start. The team finished the last part of the season 11-5.

Viking Spirit

The Rowan County basketball team was well represented in the 16th regional tournament last week at Summit Junior High School in Ashland. The Vikings' first round opponent was Ashland, a team they have never beaten. Rowan County, along with hundreds of yelling fans, took the Tomcats down to the wire, before losing by just two points, 71-69. The Vikings' season ended with a 13-14 record.

Trent Praises Team

With the Rowan County basketball season over, Viking coach Ted Trent reflected back over the season, and what each player's contribution meant to the squad.

"We haven't had anyone in the program since I've been here that has come as far as Matt Sparks has. He has as much basketball court sense as any point guard we've ever had. He will be the hardest to replace. He was our leader, and a very sincere young man," Trent said.

"Wade Littleton represents the class part of our team. Wade is always clean cut and gives more than he had to offer physically. He got everything out of his body. The flu Wade came down with this season would have put other athletes out for the year, but he never quit. He's the kind of player every coach dreams about having on his team."

"Brent Sparks overcame a very serious broken leg in the eighth grade. He became our designated shooter over zone defenses. If I had to pick an assistant coach I would choose him because he really became a student of the game."

"Kelly Curtsinger has really come a long way considering he hadn't played high school basketball since his sophomore year. He was very quick off the floor and it's just unfortunate that he wasn't able to compete last season. The entire senior class is made up of quality people, men who will one day be leaders in their community," Trent said.

The Viking coach then went on to say a few words about "the strongest junior class in the history of athletics at Rowan County."

"John Stamper and Randy Eldridge. I can't talk about one without talking about the other. John's potential in basketball is unlimited, but he has to get his priorities straight. Randy is a tremendous offense threat. A great leaper. He led us in scoring and blocked shots. If he works on his offensive moves, like laying the ball down for a jump shot, he will be unstoppable."

"Troy Hogge's performance was not surprising this season. He is one of the top candidates for point guard next season. Troy has to work and continue to improve his game if we are going to be good next year."

"The loss of Wes Hardin probably did more to affect us in tournament play than any other factors. He is going to have to work on the weights this summer to help his knee that he injured. He will have to give us more playing time next season."

"Jeff Johnson's moves are almost unstoppable. He might become the first six-foot player in the history of this school who will be able to dunk in basketball. He needs to work on his ball handling this summer. He's an example of a gym rat, because of the time he spends trying to improve his game."

"If I was going to be in a fist fight, I would want Darrell Littleton on my side. He is really a hard nosed player, a real intimidator. If there is a loose ball, you know that he will be around it. I think he will be tremendous next season, he really has the determination and skill to play."

"Greg Gorham, the mountain man, has to improve to give us depth next season. During practice this year, he really improved our front line players. Due to his size, 6-6, he will have to be a factor next year."

"Greg Ramey showed up overweight this season and was disappointing. He never did reach his potential."

Trent calls Kevin Layne the team's missing link. "Due to his injury last year Kevin sat out this season, and will be able to play two more years. The question will be if he will be able to handle the physical part of the game, running up and down the court. He's going to have to dedicate and discipline himself to get his body back in shape," Trent said.

Over 504,000 Fans Saw The Cats Play

Statistics from the University of Kentucky indicate that over one-half million people saw the Wildcat basketball team play during its 27 regular-season games this year.

The total attendance this year was 504,553 in games on home, away and neutral courts.

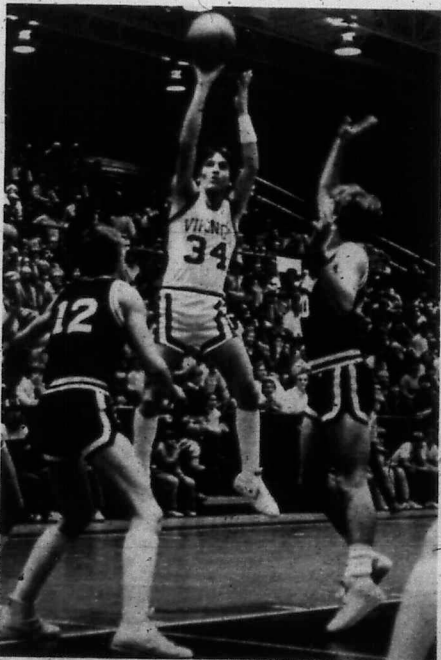

More than 70 percent of those people saw the Cats play in Rupp Arena, for an average of 23,666 per game. Another 104,743 people watched at road games in arenas with an average attendance of 10,474 people. There were 27,493 people who saw the team play on neutral courts with average attendances of 13,746.

The average at each of the 27 games was 18,687 people.

As might be expected, the largest crowd to watch the team play was during the Louisiana State game at home, when 24,011 people saw the Cats lead LSU a 73-71 setback.

Rowan County school superintendent John Brock stepped out of the stands last Thursday night to offer some words of encouragement to Viking head basketball coach Ted Trent during the second quarter of a 16th regional tournament contest against Ashland. The Tomcats ended the Rowan County season with the 71-69 victory.

Matt Sparks, playing in what was to be his final game as a Viking, puts in two of his 13 points against Ashland last Thursday night. "We haven't had anyone in the basketball program at Rowan County that has progressed as far as Matt has in four years," coach Ted Trent said.

Rowan County was still in the basketball game at the time of this scramble for the ball late in the game. John Stamper (21), Matt Sparks (34) and Kelly Curtsinger (53) all five chase for the Vikings. Rowan County could have tied the game with less than a minute to play, but turned the ball over on a traveling violation.

Baseball Eagles Open Home Season With Double-header Win

By KURT PICKERING
Sports Writer

An extra inning pitchers' duel and a one-sided runny added two wins to Morehead State's 1981 baseball record as the Eagles opened their home season Saturday by beating Anderson 2-1 in nine innings and 19-0 at Allen Field.

The first impression MSU handed its home fans was one of leaky defense. The second batter in the first inning of the opener, Don Morris, nudged a roller down the third base line and reached when Jamey Bennett couldn't handle it. Morris then stole second. Next, a pickoff play at second backfired when pitcher Mike Mattox whipped the ball into centerfield, giving Morris third. Morris later scored when a pickoff throw from Mattox on another runner at first got through Mark Downs and bounced into right field. Haven pitcher Ed Reed quickly lost the 1-0 lead when John Combs slammed Reed's first pitch of the season over the right field fence.

Reed and Mattox then settled down to duel. Neither side scored again in regulation or in the first extra inning, the eighth. In one stretch, Reed retired 15 consecutive Eagles; he did not allow a base hit from the third inning until the very last pitch of the game.

It was the last pitch that decided it, however. Glenn Jones, whose third inning single had been the last MSU safety, poked a game-ending drive over the fence in right to give the Eagles a 2-1 victory.

While Reed obviously pitched well enough to win, Mattox's doings were not unimpressive. The righthander, who whipped a no-hitter past Northern Kentucky here last fall, struck out 10 Ravens and walked only two. The win was his first after two losses on this month's road trip south.

The Eagles aired it out in the twin-bill's caper. Joe Mitchell and Bengett each popped a pair of home runs. Mitchell added a triple and drove in two runs, while Bengett chased six runners home, including four plated by his sixth-inning grand slam.

The batting support for starter Mark Molitor, who went all the way to even his record at one, came early and never stopped. Morehead rang up five runs in the very inning. The Eagles scored in every inning but the fourth, adding one each in the second and fifth, four in the third and eight in the sixth.

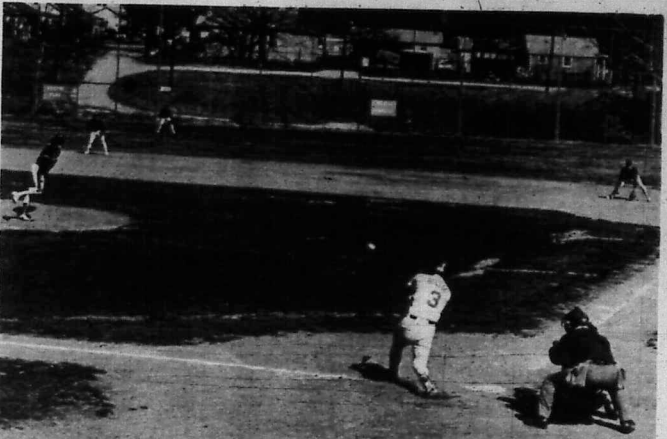

Other hitting heavies for Morehead included Tom Rastani, Davis, Combs, Jones and Alan Steele. Rastani had three hits in four trips, all doubles, tying the Ohio Valley Conference record for doubles in a game. Davis drove in three runs by going three-for-four and Combs also turned in three-for-four performance. Steele singled three times in five trips. Jones, who has hit safely in all nine MSU games this season, went two-for-four in game two, leaving his batting average at .515.

Like Jones at the plate, Molitor is off to a fast start on the hill. In 16 innings this spring, the lefthander has allowed only one earned run for an ERA of .56.

The victories stopped an early losing skid at 21-ye. The Eagles, who split a season-opening doubleheader at Mississippi and the never won again on a trip that included another game at Ole Miss, three at Memphis State and one at Middle Tennessee State, are now 3-4. The losses ended the season for Anderson.

The Eagles return to the road briefly, visiting Indiana-Southeast in New Albany tomorrow, before a six-game late-week homestand. The Eagles host Davis and Elkins Thursday, Northern Kentucky Friday and Cincinnati Saturday. All are doubleheaders, scheduled to start at 1 p.m.

NCAA Tournament Roundup

After a wild whirl of a weekend in college basketball the NCAA was left with its Sweet Sixteen.

No longer a wall-to-wall party of 48 teams, the tournament sent home 32 guests, including some of the biggest names it had to offer.

Consider those who didn't make it through the weekend:

- DePaul, the No. 1 team in the nation, was eliminated by St. Joseph's 49-48 in a mind-boggling finish in the Midwest Regional.
- Oregon State, the No. 2 team, was ousted by Kansas State 50-46 in the West Regional—the second straight year the beavers were eliminated in their first NCAA tournament game.
- No. 5 Arizona State, the only team to defeat Oregon State during the regular season, was bumped off by 19 Kansas 88-71 in the Midwest Regional.
- No. 8 Kentucky, the top team in preseason, led 69-62 to upstart Alabama-Birmingham in the Midwest.
- No. 13 and defending champion Louisville was stunned by Arkansas 74-73 in the Midwest, getting a buzzer shot from 49 feet by U.S. Reed.
- But they were in good company. Others who didn't last the party were: No. 11 UCLA, No. 12 Iowa, No. 14 Wake Forest, No. 16 Wyoming and No. 20 Maryland.
- In all, 10 of the Top 20 teams have been bounced, setting up some intriguing matchups for the next round.
- In the East Regional in Atlanta Thursday, it's No. 9 Notre Dame vs. No. 17 Brigham Young and No. 3 Virginia vs. No. 15 Tennessee.
- In the Midwest Regional in Bloomington, Ind., Friday, it's St. Joseph's vs. Boston College and No. 7 Indiana vs. Alabama-Birmingham.
- In the Midwest Regional in New Orleans Friday, it's No. 4 Louisiana State vs. Arkansas and Wichita State vs. No. 19 Kansas.
- In the West Regional in Salt Lake City Thursday, it's Kansas State vs. No. 18 Illinois and No. 10 Utah vs. No. 6 North Carolina.

The home court will figure decisively in the next round with three schools returning to familiar turf: Utah to Salt Lake City, Indiana to Bloomington and LSU to New Orleans.

The East appears to be the strongest bracket with four ranked teams; the West is solid with the Utah-North Carolina game the highlight; the Midwest has a decidedly Kansas accent with the Jayhawks and Wichita State the surprise survivors; the Midwest is the most bizarre collection — and anyone who predicted a St. Joseph's-Boston College matchup at this stage surely has been touched by the angels.

Here's how the games went over the weekend:

- At Charlotte, N.C. Sunday, Virginia beat Villanova 54-50. All-American Ralph Sampson scored 17 points and the Cavaliers hit the critical foul shots down the stretch. The Cavaliers, who trailed most of the way, scored their last eight points at the line.
- In the other game, Tennessee shaded Virginia Commonwealth 56-56 with Dale Ellis of the Vols scoring 22 points and hitting the only basket of overtime. VCU trailed by 13 in regulation but tied it in the final seconds on a 15-footer by Danny Kottak.

In Saturday's games in Providence, R.I., No. 17 Brigham Young beat No. 11 UCLA 78-55 on 57 points by All-American Danny Ainge. No. 9 Notre Dame stopped James Madison 54-45 behind Tracy Jackson's 21 points.

— In Tuscaloosa, Ala., Sunday, Alabama-Birmingham defeated one of the aristocrats of Southern basketball with a 69-62 decision over Kentucky. Glenn Mercer made 12-of-15 foul shots in the last five minutes to win it.

— In the second game, Boston College upended No. 14 Wake Forest 67-64 as John Bagley scored a season-high 35 points. The Eagles trailed by 6 in the second half but went ahead with less than a minute to play on Bagley's three foul shots.

— On Saturday in Dayton, Ohio, St. Joseph's pulled the shocker of the season by beating DePaul 49-48 on a layup by John Smith with three seconds remaining. DePaul could have won it with 12 seconds left but Skip Dillard missed the front end of 1-and-1.

— In the other game, No. 7 Indiana pounded No. 20 Maryland with the Hoosiers shooting 65 percent from the floor.

— At Wichita, Kan., Sunday, Wichita State stopped Iowa 60-56. The Hawkeyes were assessed a technical foul with five seconds to go for calling timeout with none left. Randy Smithson made two free throws to break a 56-56 tie. The Shockers, who trailed by 15 in the second half, were led by Cliff Levington with 25 points and Antoine

We care about OCEANS

By JOHN WILSON

The average Kentuckian probably doesn't give much thought to the oceans, except as places for vacations. Except for that well-earned two weeks of lying on the beach, it's hard to see what oceans have to do with folks as far inland as we are.

So it's difficult to get too excited about this year's National Wildlife Week, (March 15-21) with its theme of "We Care About Oceans." That's too bad, because oceans are important to all of us, no matter how landlocked we may be.

Oceans, according to the National Wildlife Federation, cover more than two-thirds of earth, provide homes for more than three-fourths of the world's animals and support half the world's annual plant growth.

A quick trip down the frozen food section of any grocery store will reveal how much of our food comes from the oceans. And as human populations increase, more and more demands will be placed on the food resources of the seas.

For all their vastness, the oceans are not immune to man's pollutants. As traditional dumping grounds for everything from raw sewage to radioactive wastes, oceans are beginning to show the adverse effects of this abuse.

Nor are the seas immune from over-harvesting. Several species of whales and other marine mammals have been seriously reduced by uncontrolled taking. And evidence is mounting that continued commercial fishing is limiting harvests on some of our best fishing grounds.

"When we talk of environmental quality we must consider the oceans, too," says the NWF, "for life on this planet is inextricably tied to the oceans." Any concerned conservationist and sportsman, whether or not he ever intends to sail the seas or wet a line for any of salt-water game fish, should be willing to make his voice heard in decisions affecting the oceans, because these decisions will ultimately affect us all.

Policy regarding oceans is usually national or even international in scope, so the inland conservationist's best bet is make sure his senator and representative in Washington know of his concern with oceans. Lawmakers from all 50 states need to realize that their constituents care about the fate of our seas.

So while we in Kentucky might find it hard to get involved directly in this year's National Wildlife Week, we can, and should, still observe it, even if only by writing a few letters to Washington.

Cawood's Comments

By the voice of the University of Kentucky Wildcats, David Ledford

1981, Cawood Ledford Productions, Inc.

LEXINGTON — The Southeastern Conference tournament meant a lot of money to the teams this year. No, I'm not talking about approximately $60,000 each team will get from the tournament itself but of the potential dollars created when the SEC sent four teams to the NCAA tournament.

Mississippi was invited to the NCAA for only one reason. It won the SEC tournament, which automatically qualified the Rebels for the post-season classic. Mississippi's win at Birmingham allowed it to join LSU, Ky. and Tenn. in the NCAA's first round and that put approximately $280,000 in the conference's bank account to divide among the 16 member teams.

The NCAA field has dwindled down from the 48 teams that started the big show to only 16 teams. That will be reduced to four this weekend as they stage the regionals. The four survivors will meet in Philadelphia for the semifinals and the finals. The payouts get bigger as the teams advance.

Each team that participates in a regional this week will take home about $220,000. Each of the Final Four teams will get around $360,000. The four teams that go to Philly will pocket a total of about $670,000.

Teams in the NCAA tournament aren't playing just for glory, they're playing for big bucks. And you ain't seen nothing yet. David Cawood of the NCAA office says there will be a whopping increase in the payout next year.

"We'll get an increase of over $4 million in TV revenue," Cawood says, "because of the switch from NBC to CBS next year. We're playing the finals in the Superdome in New Orleans and we expect to sell out the arena. They're arranging for 62,000 seats for the finals and we think ticket sales for the Final Four will be over a million dollars."

There's a great prestige playing in the NCAA tournament. Winning it is college basketball's highest honor. There's gold in them thar hills too.

Dr. Kelly Praised
Transylvania Board
Accepts Resignation

LEXINGTON — The Executive Committee of the board of curators of Transylvania University March 13 accepted the formal resignation of William W. Kelly as president.

Dr. Kelly had announced March 9 he was resigning as the 22nd president of Transylvania at the end of the current academic year to accept a position as senior associate with University Associates, an educational consulting firm in Washington, D.C.

According to Board Chairman W.T. Young, president Kelly's resignation was "voluntary and accepted with considerable regret." The board went on to adopt a resolution citing Dr. Kelly's accomplishments during his five-year tenure in office.

The board also appointed a search committee to begin the process of seeking a successor to Dr. Kelly. Co-chairmen of the committee are James E. Bassett III, president of the Keeneland Association, and Joseph C. Graves, Lexington business executive. The committee also includes William C. Clay Jr., Mt. Sterling attorney; James C. Codell Jr., Terrell A. Lasseter, Young and two members of the Transylvania faculty who will be selected after the spring break.

The board also reviewed the status of the search for a vice president and dean of the college and indicated a list of more than 100 applicants had been reduced to six candidates and an appointment is expected to be announced within a few weeks. Last fall, Dr. Walter G. Emge announced his resignation as dean; before joining Transylvania, he previously held positions at Boston and Duke University.

cessful term as president, and we hope to recognize the quality of his leadership and totality of his dedication and commitment by recommending that an honorary degree of doctor of literature be conferred upon him."

The resolution cited that he had enhanced the tradition of excellence at Transylvania, had worked with Dr. Emge in an academic reorganization plan that changed the quarter system to two 14-week semesters followed by a one-month May term.

It also stressed that Transylvania, under Dr. Kelly's leadership, had reorganized the Division of Business Administration and Economics and that the university had become a leader in the computerized Southeastern Library Network.

The community education program was called one of the greatest successes of the Kelly administration and the growth of student services was praised. His part, with Charles Shearer, vice president for finance, in developing the internal financial control was commended and the growth of financial resources of the college cited.

Other accomplishments of Transylvania under Dr. Kelly's leadership also were mentioned in the resolution.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Ed McMahon will lead the Louisville St. Patrick's Day parade as grand marshal today. McMahon, Johnny Carson's sidekick on the "Tonight Show," will ride just ahead of Gov. and Mrs. John Y. Brown Jr. near the head of the 130-unit parade. Handy frozen vegetables in handy pour-out bags are a good buy. You can easily use the amount needed, keeping the rest for later, uncooked and frozen in the bag. Be sure to re-close the bag tightly. Don't use vegetables frozen with sauce; you're paying for fat and calories instead of vegetables.

Snack foods are expensive, instead get out your popcorn popper and make your own snacks with less than 50 calories per cup plus one quart costs only about 3 to 8 cents. Once popcorn is popped, keep the unpopped kernels in an airtight container in the refrigerator.

When buying cooking oils avoid the expensive brands. Fried food won't taste greasy if the temperature of the oil is correct along with time of exposure to the oil. Most cooking oils have about the same properties.

Cube your own stew meat and save high labor costs. Use shoulder cuts or pot roast, freeze the meat lightly and cut into cubes the easy way.

Sewer Discussions

He also said, "As long as it (the connection of Trademore) is not costing anybody on this side of the hill anything, I'm for it."

Baldwin, who became visibly perturbed by Barker's interjections during his presentation, said the situation was a mutual problem. "It's not their problem; it's your problem too. And, it's the state's problem," he said.

Baldwin noted that the federal grants for the sewage project were based on a proposed service area that included Trademore and that grant funds, which he said were not completely closed, could be taken back if the Plant Board did not permit Trademore to hook on.

Baldwin said his purpose in coming to the meeting was to "try to get the communication flowing" to see that this did happen.

Barker asked Baldwin if he was making a threat to the city about the matter. But Clayton Perkins, chairman of the Plant Board, told Barker it was a "pure old, cold fact" that the utility had to let Trademore hook on.

Perkins also said that the utility had never been approached by Trademore about hooking on. He said the Plant Board did not make it a policy of trying to force people to do so either.

"Baldwin said the owners of Trademore had been called to Frankfort for an administrative conference" about the situation.

The Plant Board has been preparing for the hook on of Trademore and had already drafted a proposal for a sewer load connection fee of $21,340.

That fee was based on a charge of $30 each for the first 20 fixture units and $20 for each additional fixture unit. A fixture unit is a measure of the water volume a particular piece of plumbing will use and is a standard used by the state. At Trademore, there would be 1,057 fixture units.

Blair said the amount for the load connection fee probably would be less than it would be if every customer that had a water meter is charged the standard $300 per construction tap fee. The $300 fee would be used because there would be no construction costs for the taps as the lines already exist for the present plant at Trademore.

Users of the sewer service at the shopping center would be paying the standard water treatment rates of the city, plus 20 percent for being located outside the city limits. Water usage at Trademore is estimated at about 360,000 gallons per month.

Although there were no representatives of Trademore in attendance at the session, Blair also explained that the Plant Board had a provision for financing the load connection, or hook on, fee over a 10 year period.

Under that procedure, Trademore, if it desired financing the $21,340, would have to sign a contract 30 days prior to construction agreeing to pay back the principal, along with interest based on the market rate, over the 10 year period.

The shopping center would also have to provide security or collateral, which Blair said would mean "we would have to see the whole ball of wax as far as (the center's) financial information" to determine that the Trademore developers have sufficient equity in the property. And Blair noted, Plant Board proceedings are open to the public.

Plant Board policy also requires the tenant to sign the contract on the financing agreement.

After the Plant Board passed its motion saying that Trademore could hook on as long as it does so at its own construction expense and pays the connection fee, Baldwin said, his people would go back to the Trademore owners and tell them, "Damn it, we've gone the extra mile with you, now get your butt down there and make application to the Plant Board."

Baldwin later told the newspaper that the state's insistence on having Trademore hook onto the sewage system would be "a sizeable priority."

Lakeview Sewage Service

Similar questions surfaced in regard to providing sewer collection service for the city of Lakeview Heights.

Gary Van Meter, chairman of the city's board of trustees, came before the utility to gather information about the costs and procedures for having the city obtain the service.

Van Meter explained that the city is simply "interested" in finding out about costs at this point.

Like Trademore, Lakeview Heights has its own temporarily-licensed treatment plant and collection system. The effluent line from Lakeview's plant going to Triplett Creek runs across the top of a Plant Board main and there would be little problem in making the connection at that point, according to Perkins.

He said, however, that the city's mains would have to be checked out by the board's engineer before the utility would agree to assume maintenance of the lines. The lines would also have to be tested for ground water infiltration.

In addition, Perkins said it probably would be necessary to have several manholes installed in the lines for maintenance purposes.

The 80 homes that are now on the system would each have to pay the standard $300 tap fee, rather than the $600 after-construction tap fees.

Van Meter was accompanied to the meeting by James Brammer, former chairman of Lakeview, and Dr. Glenn Johnston, who is responsible for the existing sewer plant.

Both of those men had attended a Plant Board meeting in March 1978 where it was agreed that the board would undertake a survey of the system. Perkins said, however, that various projects of the utility had prevented that survey from being completed.

Van Meter pointed out that it had not been decided definitely that the city would want to hook onto the system, but he said the potential cost estimates would be presented to the city's residents.

Divide Hill Housing Water

Members of the Plant Board also agreed to two water extensions, one of them for a low income and elderly housing project by the Morehead Housing Authority on Divide Hill and the other, a private subdivision development near the water plant at Farmers.

Mike Coleman, of Coleman Construction Co., developers of the Divide Hill project, said it will be necessary to obtain water service from a line running from a high-level tank above Pine Ridge Apartments on the opposite side of KY 32.

Tapping that line would require a bore under KY 32.

Coleman pointed out that the elevation of the new housing complex would be about 26.5 feet above the road level of KY 32 and that it would not be possible to use water from a tank to be built near the project, because the gravity force pressure would not be high enough.

Coleman said the cost of boring under the roadway had been included in his original bid on the project.

The Plant Board agreed to permit the tap into the line and to supervise the construction of the line to the housing.

New Subdivision

Members of the board also agreed to allow Daniel Blanton to run water lines to serve a seven-lot subdivision being developed near the Plant Board's water pumping station at Farmers.

Billy Joe Needham, representing Blanton, said about 410-feet of line would be run.

Under board policy, Blanton would receive $200 from each water tap made from the line, so long as it does not exceed his total lot cost of construction.

The Plant Board would inspect the lines and Blanton would be required to warrant them for one year and provide permanent easements to the utility.

Owners of each lot would be required to pay $300 for each tap.

As a sidenote, one of the lots in the subdivision is needed by the Plant Board for its water expansion project.

The board began condemnation proceedings to obtain the property after Blanton refused to offer of $7,500 for the lot. The lot has since been sold as part of a package to another person. That person paid $22,000 for two lots.

As part of condemnation proceedings, the Circuit Court names three commissioners who agree to determine the value of the property and the amount due. Either party then has the option of accepting the decision of the commissioners or filing suit in Circuit Court to seek more money.

The commissioners placed the value of the lot formerly owned by Blanton at $12,000 and assigned a value of $27,500 to Blanton because ownership of the lot by the Plant Board would mean the lifting of restriction on the placement of campers or mobile homes on the property. The utility plans to construct an above-ground holding tank on the property when the construction project gets underway.

Board members took no formal action on what to do about the situation with the lot.

First Street Building

Upon the suggestion of Barker, board members agreed to hire a local architect to draw a rough sketch for renovation of a block building that the board purchased last April for office space.

After buying the building and an adjacent lot last year, the utility encountered some opposition to the idea. It was suggested then that the Plant Board build a new office on property owned by the city at the corner of First Street and South Wilson.

Drawings were made of such a building but no action was taken on it. Along with the drawings for the renovation of the block building, located next to Harvey's Auto Parts, the utility will obtain cost estimates. Earlier estimates by board members had placed the cost of renovating the building at about $30,000.

In addition to office space, the two-story building would be used for storage and possibly a meeting room upstairs.

Board members have also talked about building an apartment on the second floor that could be rented to an employee as part of his compensation. The employee could also serve as a night watchman for the building.

crime. The crime prevention efforts will not stop here either.

"The community leader would also provide us with a diagram listing the different houses and the owners of the houses," said Thomas. He added that this would allow for a quicker response by state police in answering calls about potential crimes being carried out in a given community location.

Lambert said state police will provide "neighborhood watch kits" to communities participating in the program at no charge to the residents.

"These kits, which will be distributed through the community leaders, will include forms residents can utilize in reporting a crime to the neighborhood leader, as well as a detailed explanation of all aspects of the program."

"It will educate them on what to look for," said Thomas, about the kits. He added that police could apprehend more offenders if residents are aware of the kinds of information most helpful to police.

Another part of the program will consist of state police furnishing the people of the different communities "Operation Identification" engravers, if they have not already participated in this crime measure.

Thomas noted that this is an additional safeguard that has proven to be a deterrent against thefts, since statistics show a person with property engraved is 17 times less likely to be stolen from than someone who does not mark his property.

"Thieves pay attention to items that are marked," added Thomas.

Thomas and Lambert are both optimistic that the program will be a success in Rowan County and will spread to the other counties in the post-state police district.

Thomas said he thinks the overall results of the program will be a reduction in the number of thefts and a greater apprehension rate of offenders.

County residents interested in participating in the program are asked to contact Trooper Lambert at the Morehead post at 784-4127.

"We want people to get enthused about this program," Lambert said.

Crime Statistics

tomery each had two reports of murder.

According to language in the report, attempts at comparisons of crime figures should not be made without first considering the individual crime factors that exist in each region and county.

These crime influencing factors are present, the report said, to some degree in every county, and their presence affects, in varying degrees, the crime experience of that county, and ultimately, the geographic region of which it is a part.

The report noted: "Crime, as an outgrowth of society, remains a social problem of grave concern and the state police are limited in their role as to its suppression and detection."

Relatives Of Nursing Home Patients Rate Rowan Care Highly Report Shows

Relatives of patients in Rowan County nursing homes give high marks for the quality of care the homes provide, according to a survey conducted by the Kentucky Association of Health Care Facilities.

Based on a 1 (poor) to 5 (excellent) scale, the overall average score for the quality of services in Rowan County was 4.5.

The average score for specific services were:

- Nursing care: 4.6.
- Personal attention and staff involvement: 4.5.
- Activities program: 4.5.
- Dietary services: 3.9.
- Housekeeping: 4.7.

The surveys were distributed to relatives of each patient earlier this year. Relatives were not asked to identify themselves or the name of the patient.

In addition to the five questions about quality of care, relatives also were asked whether or not they supported increased Medicaid support from state and federal agencies. One hundred percent of those responding favored increased Medicaid expenditures for the elderly.

Many relatives chose to explain their ranking with additional comments.

One relative was especially impressed with the close attention paid to bed-ridden patients.

"Due to my husband's disease he hasn't known me or any kind of activity for four years," the woman wrote. "Yet in all the time I spend, often three or four days at a time at this facility, I never have heard or seen anything but kind words for every patient and courtesy to both patients and their families."

KAHCF conducted the survey in each county in Kentucky with nursing homes that belong to the association. KAHCF President David Wren said the surveys helped the association assess how relatives of patients perceive the quality of care provided in each home.

"We are alarmed by proposals by the Kentucky Department for Human Resources (DHR) to reduce the scope of the state's Medicaid program," he said. "The survey is really a report card from people who spend enough time in nursing homes to see and appreciate the quality of care we're able to provide."

Wren said the quality of care in nursing homes is threatened by the proposal from DHR.

"Patient care is bound to suffer because 40 percent of participating facilities will receive less than the cost of providing for Medicaid services if the current reductions are put into effect," he said.

He also said one proposal limiting each facility to 80 1/2 Medicaid patients is unworkable.

"One hundred and one of our 166 facilities already have more than 80 percent Medicaid patients.

Witness Says Stamper Directed Tobacco Crop At Hidden Valley

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — A witness in the federal trial of State Sen. Woodrow Stamper said Stamper directed tobacco to be grown on portions of the former Hidden Valley dude ranch in which federal prosecutors say Stamper held secret options.

Bernard Whisman told the jury Friday in the trial of Stamper, D-West Liberty, and Lexington realtor Robert F. Link he grew 2,732 pounds of tobacco in 1977 under an agreement he would split proceeds from the crop in half with the owner of the property.

But Whisman, who worked for Stamper at the state senator's auto dealership in West Liberty as a mechanic before he grew the tobacco, said he did not know who the exact owner of the property was. He said he registered the crop under the name of Investors Trust Inc. at a tobacco warehouse in Mt. Sterling.

Whisman, now of Hazel Green, said Stamper asked him to grow the tobacco and told him to take the crop to that warehouse.

ITI is the firm which sold the former dude ranch to the state in 1977. Stamper and Link are accused of persuading the state to pay an inflated price for the 54 1/2 acres it purchased.

Federal prosecutors say Stamper convinced the state to transfer the entire parcel's 8,850-pound tobacco allotment onto a smaller, 139-acre portion not sold to the state. Stamper allegedly held a secret interest in the smaller portion.

The pair face charges of extortion, conspiracy and mail fraud in connection with the state's purchase of the land. Stamper also faces two counts of signing false income tax returns to allegedly conceal profits he made on the land deal.

Whisman testified he received a total of $2,002 for his 50-percent share of the crop when sold by the Clay Tobacco Warehouse in Mt. Sterling. He said he saw Stamper at the warehouse, but had no knowledge who received the other half of the proceeds from the sale. The tobacco sales were made after the state purchased the Hidden Valley property.

Federal prosecutors also tried to demonstrate how Stamper and Link allegedly inflated expenses on Hidden Valley. Link charged ITI more than $87,000 for expenses and payment for options, held in Link's name but allegedly under Stamper's control. ITI had to repurchase the options before it could sell the property to the state.

Whisman's brother Denny, who guarded the property in 1976 and 1977 before the state transaction, told the jury he was paid a total of about $4,500 for his work.

But prosecutors have introduced into evidence invoices which show Link charged ITI $18,600 for Denny Whisman's duties. Whisman said he didn't remember signing the document, although it bore his signature.

"I think I signed some blank paper for him (Stamper) sometime," Whisman said.

Whisman also testified Stamper had asked him to endorse a $7,800 check to him written on Link's real estate company account. He said the state senator said the check was for salary already paid to Whisman in cash and for other expenses Stamper had incurred on Hidden Valley.

Prosecutors called Paul D. Kidd, assistant cashier of the West Liberty Commercial Bank where Stamper serves on the board of directors. Kidd testified he cashed the $7,800 check, but could not remember who presented him the check.

Kidd said, however, he would not have handed out so much cash to Whisman for a check written on an account he did not know (Link's). Kidd, as well as a bank employee who testified earlier Friday, said he would cash a third party check presented by Stamper even if it was not made out to the state senator.

Kidd had written "W. Stamper" on a "cash out" receipt for the check and said he had done this to know who was responsible if the check bounced.

In other testimony Friday, Ronald Holton testified he never hauled water to the Hidden Valley property although prosecutors showed invoices which charged ITI for six loads of water at $41 a load. Holton said he had never seen the documents.

U.S. District Court Judge Bernard T. Moynahan recessed the trial until 9:30 a.m. Monday. Asked when the prosecution could be expected to wrap up their case, federal prosecutor Joseph L. Lewis said it was not "unreasonable" to say the long parade of prosecution witnesses would end by next Friday.

Stamper Or Hunt: Who's On Trial Anyway?

By MARK R. CHELLGREN

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — The classic comedy routine by Abbott and Costello asks the question, "Who's on First?" Defense attorneys involved in the celebrated Stamper-Link trial are beginning to ask themselves the same question with a bit of a twist: "Who's on trial?"

More and more in recent weeks — the trial enters its sixth today — defense attorneys for state Sen. Woodrow Stamper, D-West Liberty, and Lexington realtor Robert F. Link are hearing testimony from prosecution witnesses about former state Democratic Party boss Howard P. "Sonny" Hunt Jr.

And frankly, they're getting a little tired of it.

During testimony last week by Robert Tabeling, vice president of Wombwell Insurance of Lexington, attorney James Shuffett objected, saying it was a "deliberate attempt on the part of the prosecution to interject the Hunt indictment into these proceedings."

Tabeling was testifying about commissions from the state's workman's compensation policy which his firm shared with dozens of other insurance agencies around the state. Tabeling said it was all done at Hunt's direction.

The same special federal grand jury which indicted Stamper and Link has also put Hunt in the middle of the alleged commission-sharing scheme and named him in an indictment — all 22 counts of it.

A portion of the Hunt indictment also deals with "his involvement in the Hidden Valley transaction for which Stamper and Link are on trial on extortion, conspiracy, and mail fraud charges. Stamper is also charged with signing two false income tax returns.

Hunt allegedly received $16,700 for his troubles in influencing the state's 1977 decision to purchase the former dude ranch in Powell County. Stamper and Link purportedly paid Hunt that amount for his help.

Hunt, who ruled state Democratic politics during the term of Gov. Julian Carroll, was first mentioned in the Stamper-Link trial by Russell McClure. A former state finance secretary, McClure said everything in state government from the hiring of non-merit employees to the awarding of personal service contracts had to be approved by Hunt.

But like most of the comments by witnesses about Hunt, McClure and Tabeling testified after Chief Federal District Judge Bernard T. Moynahan Jr. had ordered the jury from the courtroom.

Exactly why federal prosecutors Joseph Lawless and Robert Andary are bringing Hunt into these proceedings is not clear. An agreement between the government and Hunt's attorneys has put off until the conclusion of the current trial any filing of documents in the Hunt case.

All the publicity about Hunt runs some risk of contaminating a prospective jury in any trial. But as was shown with the 18 men and women who sit in judgment of Stamper and Link, just because there is substantial pre-trial publicity doesn't mean anyone pays any attention.

Letter To The Editor

The Editor:

I certainly appreciate the space that you gave me last week in your nice newspaper, especially since you gave me front page space. I also appreciate the nice interview by Kathy Partin.

But I am old fashioned and believe in the old adage "credit where credit is due." I would like to recognize the Gateway Community Services Organization. The ladies with whom I worked years ago in crafts helped me in making quilts and many other things including caning an antique piano bench and an antique rocking chair, both the seat and the back. I consider both of these items very valuable. I also got patterns and help in making many small items.

The following also gave me information, transportation and encouragement about getting my GED: Juanita Cooper, Valery Thomas Pennington, and Cathy Hazard, of the Adult Learning Center.

I would be sorry to lose the services of this organization or these nice folks.

Thank you all,
Sincerely,

Bull Riding: Eight Seconds Of Danger

To stay aboard the back of a twisting, gyrating 1,500 pound package of angry bull can be the most dangerous eight seconds in rodeo. To not stay on could, however, be even more dangerous.

The bull rider in professional rodeo does actually take his life in his own hands. One hand that is, for that is all he is allowed to hold on with in the bull riding.

A specially braided rope called, logically enough, a bull rope, is what he holds onto. One hand is placed in the bull rope, the other must be kept free in the air for the duration of the eight second ride.

Although the cowboy is not required to keep his feet moving in the bull riding as he is in the other riding events, competition has become so tough in this event that to win it, it is almost a necessity to move your feet.

Once the ribbons over the cowboy still has the problem of getting off. Since no pickup man rides close enough to the bull to take the cowboy off, the rodeo clown plays a very important part. He must attract the bull's attention long enough to allow the cowboy to reach the safety of the fence.

Bull riding will easily be one of the most dangerous and exciting events at the Diamond World Championship Rodeo at the Morehead University Farm Show Arena on March 20 at 8 p.m., March 21 at 2 p.m., and again at 8 p.m. with the final performance being March 22 at 2 p.m.

Retirement Age Of 68 Recommended

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A special commission appointed by Congress today recommended the retirement age gradually be raised to 68 and Medicare be financed by income taxes to rescue the ailing Social Security system.

The recommendations highlighted the final report of the National Commission on Social Security.

The Congressional Budget Office projects the Social Security system faces a $63.5 billion shortfall by 1986 and experts agree the system will run out of cash by 1983.

Additionally, there are even more serious long-range problems because of the declining ratio of workers paying into the system to retirees drawing from it.

The retirement program is financed by the same payroll taxes that finance disability programs and Medicare, a medical insurance program for the elderly.

commission is the shift in Medicare financing to income taxes. The amount freed by that change would be used to bail out the retirement fund.

Others have advocated such a shift. But the commission went further in recommending a 2.5 percent income tax surcharge be added to ensure the Treasury doesn't run short of cash for other programs.

When commission Chairman Milton Gwirtzman presented that preliminary recommendation to the House Social Security subcommittee last month, lawmakers from both parties told him raising taxes was unacceptable.

The panel also recommended, beginning in the year 2001, the minimum retirement age and the age for Medicare eligibility be increased gradually to 68. The age for early retirement benefits would be raised from 62 to 65.

Other major recommendations include:

- Allowing the retirement fund to borrow from income tax revenues as an emergency measure only.
- Recalculating adjustments for inflation to hold down benefit increases in times of high inflation.
- Providing financial incentives for workers to retire later.

The major recommendation of the Clarification

Agriculture Day

FRANKFORT State Agriculture Commissioner Alben W. Barkley, II, has proclaimed March 19 as Agriculture Day in Kentucky. Barkley's proclamation marks Kentucky's commitment to the first National Agriculture Day, set recently by a joint resolution of Congress.

"The theme for Agriculture Day is Agriculture: It's Your Heartbeat, America," Barkley said. "On this day and every day, we want people to be aware that agriculture is America's heartbeat because of its importance to America — and the world."

"With assets of $927 billion, agriculture is our top industry," Barkley said. "Agriculture is the nation's number one employer, with over 13 million employed. Agriculture is an inflation fighter, with productivity growth over five times that of non-farm business over the past five years."

Barkley added that agriculture is also a major force in the U.S. balance of payments. "It was the number one exporter in 1980, with $40 billion of sales. Exports should reach a record high next year of $45."

On National Agriculture Day, the Kentucky Department of Agriculture will use fact sheets, displays, and informal question and answer sessions to get the story of farming to those who live in the cities or suburbs, Barkley said. He added that he is very pleased with reports he has received of activities organized by other agricultural groups across the state.

"Together, we should be able to provide a much better understanding of the importance of a strong production and distribution system for agriculture. Farming isn't important just to farmers," Barkley said. "It's everybody's heartbeat."

Removing Calf Gets

Young Cow Rebred Sooner
If getting young cows bred back on schedule after calving is no problem in your herd, you probably haven't heard about the profit-boosting benefits from a short calving season and calving heifers as two-year-olds.

"Or you're doing a good job of feeding and already using a relatively new approach to the problem — suckling management."

"That's the reinforcement needed in managing most cow herds to strengthen the weakest link in the calf production chain," says Duane Miksch, Extension veterinarian in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

First-calf heifers tend to be later returning to a fertile estrus or heat period after calving and, to a lesser degree, second-calf cows have the same problem. To stay on schedule of calving by the same date the following year, a cow must become pregnant 80 to 85 days after halving her calf.

The problem, according to Miksch, can be caused by feeding too little energy to the cow and by the calf's suckling stimulus affecting the cow's reproductive system. They are the primary contributing factors that you can do something about in managing your herd.

Suckling management can help solve the rebreeding problem because nursing a calf delays the onset of a cow's estrous cycle, says Miksch. You have three options to get cows back in heat sooner after calving: (1) early weaning, (2) letting the calf nurse only once a day during the breeding season or (3) removing the calf for 48 hours.

Miksch explains that milk production requires energy, leaving less for the cow's reproductive functions, but that the effect of the suckling stimulus, itself, probably is more important.

"Milked cows return to estrus sooner after calving than suckled cows producing less milk," says Miksch, adding that "there is a direct relationship between the intensity of suckling stimulus and the interval from calving to first estrus."

This means that the offtener a calf nurses and the more vigorously it goes about it, the longer it will take a cow to come back in heat after calving.

Of the three suckling management options, temporary weaning looks like the most practical for Kentucky cow-calf producers. But Miksch says research shows that all of them will work.

In temporary weaning trials in Texas, calves 45 days or older were removed from cows for 48 hours at the start of the breeding period. This stimulated cows to cycle, resulting in 62 percent bred and 44 percent pregnant in 21 days compared with only 31 percent bred and 17 percent pregnant when calves were left on the cows. The 48-hour temporary weaning had no ill effects on the calves or cows, says Miksch.

Once-a-day suckling produced similar results. Calves were penned separately at 30 days of age, and their mothers were turned in once a day until they were bred.

If you try once-a-day suckling Miksch suggests penning calves separately at about the beginning of your breeding period and returning them to their mothers six weeks later.

Early weaning increased conception in a 42-day breeding period by 25.9 percent in 2-year-old cows, 15.6 percent in 3-year-olds and 7.9 percent in mature cows up to 11 years old in USDA trials at the Meat Animal Research Center in Nebraska. Calves were weaned eight days before the start of the breeding season at an average age of 55 days, with weaning age ranging from 34 to 76 days.

Actual conception rates in the early-weaning research were 71.4 percent for 2-year-old cows, 76 percent for 3-year-olds and 70.6 percent for mature cows, compared with 45.5 percent, 60.4 percent and 62.7 percent for same-age cows nursing calves.

Research in a number of states has demonstrated that calves can be weaned successfully at 6 to 8 weeks of age, resulting in a higher pregnancy rate among nutritionally-stressed cows, according to Miksch. But he points out that increased labor and the high cost of feed formulated for young calves should be considered before going to an early-weaning program.

Insufficient energy intake by cows, a contributing factor in the rebreeding problem, can be corrected in three ways, according to Miksch: (1) Feeding heifers better, so they develop to near-mature size before calving at 2 years of age; (2) feeding young cows separately from mature cows and (3) feeding additional grain to young cows.

Removing Calf Gets

Young Cow Rebred Sooner
"Young cows do not require more energy for maintenance than mature cows of the same size," says Miksch, "but they have more difficulty consuming enough energy to satisfy their requirements."

He explains that young cows may not have the rumen capacity to get enough energy from pasture or a high-roughage ration and, if run with older cows, they lack the size to compete for their share of the feed.

Keeping your cows on a breeding schedule for a short calving season is well worth the extra cost, says Miksch. You can come closer to your target if you combine suckling management with a good feeding program for heifers and young cows.

Sales Are Set

For Offering Tested Bulls
Three special bull sales are scheduled in Kentucky this month and early April, offering beef producers an opportunity to buy performance tested bulls with traits to improve the breeding in their herds.

The first sale will be March 20 near Princeton. Bidding will get underway at noon at the University of Kentucky Research and Education Center farm.

The second sale will be March 27 near Somerset, starting at noon at the New Farmers Livestock market located on U.S. Highway 27 north.

The third sale will be April 4 in Paris. The auction will begin at noon at the Paris Stockyards.

A total of 143 performance tested Angus and Polled Hereford bulls will be offered at the Princeton and Somerset sales. All bulls are from on-farm testing programs in Kentucky.

The Paris sale will offer about 100 bulls that have been on feed at the Kentucky Central Bull Testing Station on the UK-Eden Shale Farm near Owenton. Nine breeds will be represented at the sale — Angus, Ankita, Beefmaster, Charolais, Chianina, Limousin, Polled Hereford, Shorthorn and Simmental.

All bulls in the central test were fed the same ration under the same conditions to minimize environmental influences on performance so that results are as good an indicator of true genetic differences as possible, according to Dr. John Johns, Extension beef cattle specialist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Superior sires will be available at all three sales," Johns said. He urged producers to take advantage of these special sales to buy bulls backed by performance records in time for spring breeding.

Ridomil Labeled For Black Shank
The federal EPA has approved the use of Ridomil fungicide on burley tobacco to control black shank.

"Over $28 million in burley tobacco profits were lost to black shank last year, according to some estimates."

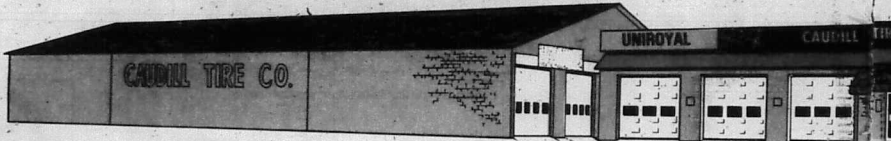

The label calls for Ridomil to be applied in the field as a broadcast application and incorporated 2-4 inches into the soil.

It is recommended that it be used only with those tobacco varieties with some black shank resistance. Because resistance in varieties varies from state to state and even county to county, it is recommended that the grower consult the local cooperative extension service concerning the recommended varieties for a specific area.

Ridomil is labeled for the control of black shank (Phytophthora parasitica) and blue mold (Peronospora tabacina) in the field, and Pythium damping-off and blue mold in the plant bed. It can be used on all types of tobacco.

Agricultural Land Is Lost At Rate Of 252 Acres Daily

FRANKFORT — Each day approximately 252 acres of Kentucky's agricultural land are converted to non-agricultural uses, state conservation officials estimate.

Agricultural land has increasingly been used for urban and rural development, highway networks and other land uses brought about by the state's growing population.

This loss of farmland is the focus of the newly created Agricultural Land Study and Policy Committee established by Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. Chaired by Jackie Swigart, secretary of the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, the 20-member committee met for the first time Wednesday in Frankfort.

Named to committee by the governor were: Dr. Charles Barnhart, dean of the University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture; Thomas E. Neal of the Soil and Water Conservation Commission; Thomas O. Harris, director of the Kentucky Council on Agriculture; and John W. Barnhart, secretary of the Kentucky Association of Conservation Districts.

Also asked to serve were Paul Everman of the Kentucky Farm Bureau, State Conservationist Eddie L. Wood, William Vincent of Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, William E. Burnett of the Farmers Home Administration and Jerry Godsey of the Federal Land Bank of Louisville.

State officials named to the committee were state Revenue Commissioner Robert H. Alphin, Transportation Secretary Frank Metz, Energy and Agriculture Secretary William Sturgill, Commerce Cabinet Secretary James Lunsford, Community and Regional Development Commissioner Andrew Martin and Agriculture Commissioner Alben W. Barkley.

Commissioner of the Bureau of Natural Resources Ken Innes and Division of Conservation Director Stan Head were named as members of the committee along with two Kentucky farmers, recommended by the Kentucky Farm Bureau, one to represent farmers owning less than 150 acres and one to represent farmers owning more than 150 acres.

The organizational meeting included a presentation by committee staff members on the national, world and state agricultural land situation.

Ronald Darden, chief of farmland preservation in the land management section of the Illinois Department of Agriculture addressed the committee. Currently working on a farmland preservation policy to be presented to Illinois officials in July, Darden discussed goals and procedures studied by his department.

The committee, established by executive order on Feb. 16, will meet monthly during the next year. A report will be submitted to the governor in February 1982 listing recommendations for the retention of Kentucky's agricultural land base. Included in the report will be an analysis of the state's state government actions on land conserving and detailed measures that can be taken.

Nearly 19,000 Pounds Of Meat Was Detained By USDA In 1980

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Federal compliance officers for the U.S. Department of Agriculture detained 18,700 pounds of meat in Kentucky during 1980 in their efforts to protect consumers.

William Robertson, USDA compliance officer for Kentucky, said the detentions resulted from efforts by federal and state agencies to protect consumers from meat and poultry suspected of being unwholesome, adulterated or misbranded. While nearly 19,000 pounds of meat were detained in the state by compliance officers, no detentions of poultry or poultry products were made during the year.

USDA is authorized to make detentions under the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act. These two laws authorize detention of non-federally inspected products found in interstate commerce or in a state that does not have an inspection program; USDA inspected meat or poultry products which may have become unwholesome, adulterated or misbranded after passing inspection at a slaughtering or processing plant. If a state, at the request, any meat or poultry product found to be in violation of its law.

Reviews by compliance officers are made on order and samples or can result from consumer complaints.

"Failure to bring detained product into compliance or destroy it for human food 'is the retention of poultry or poultry products found in interstate commerce or in a state that does not have an inspection program; USDA

A large amount of the meat and poultry detained in the Southeast during 1980 was detentions voluntarily by the owners. In addition, some of the product was used in animal food and some was released for reinspection by federal or state authorities.

'Tis No Sin Not To Be Irish — Just A Terrible, Terrible Shame

Of all religious feast days observed by ethnic groups, the feast of St. Patrick, patron saint of the Irish, seems to be the one most universally celebrated by people of differing ethnic backgrounds.

While March 17th is often marked with parties and parades involving once-a-year Irishmen, the feast of St. Patrick is still a day of deep-religious significance to millions of Irish Catholics throughout the world.

"The true seriousness of the day to the Irish is reflected in the fact that the majority of our St. Patrick's Day cards have a religious, rather than humorous, theme to them," said Richard Connor, senior vice president for creative and merchandising at Cleveland-based American Greetings Corp.

Connor explained that industry sales of St. Patrick's Day cards this year will be about 20 million, with at least 60 percent of these bearing cute, traditional, sentimental or religious messages. He added that studies conducted over the years show that nearly 70 percent of all St. Patrick's Day cards are purchased by women.

"Some people send out more St. Patrick's Day cards than Christmas cards," Connor said. "The most popular St. Patrick's Day cards are those which express sentiment about the Irish homeland, the Blarney stone or the joys of being Irish. One American Greetings offering, written several years ago by an Irishman on 'What It's To Be Irish,' concludes by saying, 'Tis no sin not to be Irish, just a terrible, terrible shame.'"

The religious cards recount the exploits of St. Patrick, who was born in England and at age 16 was carried off by a band of Irish marauders. During his six-year bondage, he had religious visions which led him to escape.

Following his escape, St. Patrick took religious training and eventually was ordained a deacon of the Church. In the fifth century he returned to Ireland to convert the Irish to Christianity. Legend has it that he used the three-leaf shamrock to demonstrate the idea of the Trinity to the Irish.

Connor said that other ethnic groups get in on the St. Patrick's celebration just for the fun of it, and for many people the revelry is a way of celebrating the end of winter and the coming of spring. It is a welcome break during the solemn period of Lent for Irish Catholics.

"Even the fairly recent upheavals in Northern Ireland have not diminished the celebration of St. Patrick's Day," he added.

Outlook Good For Feeder Cattle Sales

If you have feeder cattle to sell or if you want to stock pastures or fill a feedlot, this spring looks like a good time to go on the market.

"This may sound like double-talk, but the long and short term price outlook for feeder cattle indicate that both buyers and sellers will have profit opportunities this spring," said Dr. A. Lee Meyer, Extension livestock marketing specialist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Here's how he figures the prospects for sellers:

Spring usually is a good time to sell feeder cattle because seasonal demand is strong from feedlot operators and from farmers who have grass coming on and need cattle to get the forage to market. Highest prices of the year generally are paid in March-June.

"The specific situation this year adds support to the normal trend for feeder cattle price strength in the spring months," said Meyer. "The outlook indicates prices will rise, probably starting upward around mid-April. A spring price rise is fairly certain. Just when it will occur is more open to question."

If you want to buy feeder cattle, an unusual thing about the situation this year indicates good profit prospects on feeder cattle bought this spring, according to the marketing specialist. Prices of feeder cattle will be even higher next fall than during this spring's strong market, according to the longer-term outlook.

"Buying feeder cattle early this spring especially looks like a good profit opportunity in view of the outlook for higher prices in the fall," Meyer said.

The specialist advised preparation of a feed cost budget to get a good estimate of how you might come out by buying feeder cattle this spring for feedlot or pasture. Forage improvement by top-seeding or inter-seeding a legume such as red clover in fescue pastures can help hold down feed costs.

For cattlemen who see enough profit opportunity in buying feeder cattle to push pasture carrying capacity to the maximum, Meyer recommended supplementing pasture to increase the stocking rate and produce faster gains on the cattle.

If you decide to sell or buy feeder cattle this spring, the marketing specialist said there are several types of market in Kentucky — auctions, direct selling on the farm and board sales which are relatively new and combine features of an auction with those of direct selling.

In addition to regular auctions, the Kentucky Beef Cattle Association sponsors graded and grouped auctions. There are 19 KBCA auctions scheduled from March 26 through April 29. County Extension agents in Kentucky can provide dates and places as well as conditions of sale and number of cattle expected.

Direct sales at the farm include operations of cattle dealers and order buyers.

A board sale is scheduled April 6 at the Clark County stockyards, with over 900 Angus and Angus crosses expected to be offered. In this type of sale, the cattle actually stay on the farm of the producer until after they are sold. A description of the cattle is available to buyers, and they may go out to the farm to inspect the cattle prior to the sale. At the auction, buyers bid on each offering on the basis of the description without the cattle being present.

Drought Predicted For Great Plains

WASHINGTON — What regional fluctuations in weather are on tap for the near future?

Next summer may see another drought in the Great Plains as severe as the 1980 summer's, and it could be even more destructive in the Corn Belt. The West, too, may be drier than normal next summer, but the Ohio River Valley may have a wetter than usual spring.

The southern Plains should have good weather in June for harvesting the winter wheat but significantly lower rainfall in May — not good for filling out the grain.

These predictions come from the Climate/Food Project at the University of Wisconsin. Dr. Reid Bryson, director of the Institute for Environmental Studies there and head of the project, of the Institute for Environmental Studies there and head of the project, says the predictions have a 65 percent chance of being accurate.

The Climate/Food Project prepares long-range forecasts to help predict famines around the world. It forecasted a year in advance the 1980 drought and the severe cold of this winter in the East.

Everett Anderson May Get Medal He Earned During World War II

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ky. — Thirty-six years after the action on the island of Leyte in the Philippines during World War II for which he was honored for gallantry in action, Everett Anderson of Barlow Ridge, Rt. 1, Jeffersonville, may finally receive the Silver Star Medal.

He has the order awarding him the medal. It was issued by Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, commander of the 38th Infantry Division, with which he was serving. But he has never received the medal, and his children think their father should have the medal.

At the request of the family, The Montgomery News contacted Congressman Carl D. Perkins about the matter, sending copies of Anderson's discharge and the order awarding the medal. Perkins wrote early last month "I have contacted Army authorities, and hopefully, he will have his medal before too long." However, Anderson said last week he still had not received word from the Army.

Not Too Interested

Actually Anderson isn't too interested in receiving the medal, but his children are. Anderson said he got a letter one time to send in for the medal, but he didn't reply.

The incidents that occurred on March 16, 1945, for which the citation was issued still are vivid in Anderson's memory.

The general order awarding Anderson the Silver Star was dated May 7, 1945, and said in part:

"When a soldier of the company to which he was attached as an aid man was wounded by a burst of an enemy machine gun, Technician Anderson, with utter disregard for his own personal safety, left the cover of his foxhole and crawled to the wounded man's aid. Just before he reached the casualty, Technician Anderson was wounded in the leg, but nevertheless kept advancing and administered first aid. While treating his comrade, he was hit twice again. Although in terrible pain, he completed his job and assisted the wounded man to safety. The courageous conduct and determination of Technician Anderson reflects great credit upon himself and the military service."

On Mountain in Leyte

Anderson recalled that he was with a machine gun company on a mountain in Leyte. About 6 p.m., one of the men in the company was hit. (His foxhole wasn't deep enough, Anderson said.) The Montgomery County medic crawled to the foxhole to treat the soldier and quiet him down, but as he was doing that he was hit in the hip and chest with machine gun bullets.

It was 54 hours before he reached the hospital for treatment of his wounds, Anderson recalled. The company spent more than 24 hours on the mountain before pulling back under cover of darkness. Anderson and the other wounded men were carried by their comrades down the mountain to a headquarters post where a field doctor treated them about midnight, 36 hours after they had been wounded.

The next day Filipinos carried him all day, Anderson said, and finally they reached an ambulance, which drove six additional hours until he reached the hospital, Anderson explained.

As they were being carried down the mountain, Anderson said there were Japanese snipers in the area and sometimes he was dropped while they eliminated the snipers.

Before he was hit, Anderson said the men in the company had watched the Japanese moving in a holler below them, but they were not permitted to shoot because there were Americans in the area also. And then the Japanese spotted them and Anderson was wounded.

Somehow his unit had ended up behind enemy lines. "To my notion, we were lost," Anderson added. "We weren't supposed to be back there. They had to drop food to us by plane."

Ship Struck

Anderson said he had another narrow escape en route to the Philippines. A Japanese plane made a suicide crash on the deck of troop ship he was on, striking a spot where he had been playing cards with his buddies only 15 minutes earlier. Several men were killed and wounded in the crash, but the fire was brought under control and the ship continued to the Philippines.

After treatment in a hospital in the Philippines, Anderson returned by ship to Norfolk, Va., from where he was sent to Camp Atterbury, Ind. The cruise home took 30 days, Anderson said. He was discharged on Oct. 3, 1945, after serving four years, five months and 14 days.

When the war ended, Anderson was on convalescent furlough from Camp Atterbury visiting his brother in Cincinnati, he said.

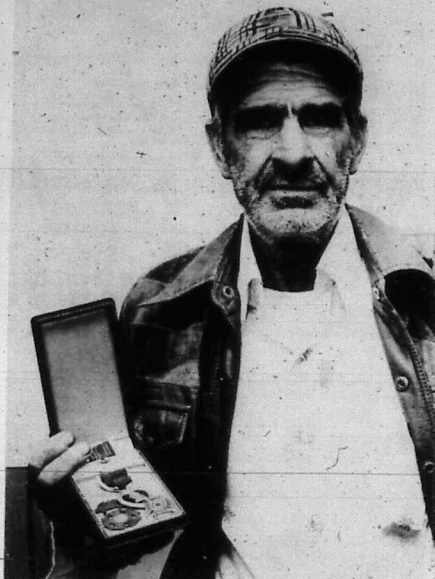

When he enlisted April 23, 1941, at Fort Thomas, Ky., Anderson was assigned to a National Guard unit and trained in Louisiana.

Discharged with a disability, Anderson said he still is bothered by the wound, especially when there is rain.

Since the war, Anderson, who is now retired, worked at a saw mill, ran a junk yard and spent 19 years at the Home Lumber Co.

Anderson, who spent six months in Hawaii training, called it a beautiful place and said he was particularly impressed by the beautiful flowers there. He expressed a desire to revisit Hawaii.

Serving as a medic had his advantages, Anderson recalled. One of his jobs was to inspect the kitchens. The only way they could tell if the food was good was to sample it.

Everett Anderson doesn't have the Silver Star Medal which he was awarded for gallantry in action in World War II, but he is displaying the Purple Heart he received for his wounds and two medals for his rifle shooting and for maneuvers. His other citations included the Asiatic Pacific Ribbon with two stars, Philippine Liberation Ribbon with one star, Good Conduct Ribbon and American Defense Service Ribbon.

Bass Fishing Institute At Morehead State Will Be Big Event

If fishing's your bag, if you'd like to know more about fishing and bass fishing in particular; if you'd like to see your wife, girlfriend, mother and children learn the proper way to go after bass in lakes, streams, farm ponds or strip mines, then the Bass Fishing Institute scheduled for Morehead University is just what you've been looking for.

The weekend of April 4-5 is the date set for the very first advanced fishing school in the area and a host of the world's finest bass fishermen will be on hand to teach participants almost everything they need to know about fishing — beginning with the basic fundamentals and ending with the most recent and productive fishing methods suited for the Tri-State angler.

Heading the list of star instructors for the Morehead University Bass Fishing Institute will be Bill Dances, Tom Mann, Billy Murray, Bobby Murray, Kim Whitaker and Shag Shahid. All of these personalities are famous in the world of bass fishing and each is a well respected professional bass angler who knows the sport inside and out.

According to Harry Ryan Jr. Coordinator of Campus Events for MSU, the Morehead area is fortunate in attracting the Bass Fishing Institute, which is presented in Cooperation with Indiana State University, founder of the first Bass Fishing Institutes in America.

Normally, the institutes are held in highly-populated areas, but Ryan is convinced the heavy drawing power of the Cave Run, Morehead area will attract anglers from all over the Tri-State region to participate in the two-day session.

The Morehead Bass Fishing Institute will concentrate on family participation, including youths and wives. "This is an excellent opportunity for bass-fishing husbands who would like their wives to know more about the sport of bass fishing, to have them taught by a group of the finest fishing instructors in the business."

Kids will get special treatment. Part of the program designed for youths will be taught without the influence of fathers or other family members. Kids are taught the basics of fishing on a one-to-one basis by the same big names in the institute that instruct adult participants. These special youth instructions are conducted in private and adults are excluded from the sessions.

The general sessions of the Bass Fishing Institute, which will include all participants, cover eight areas of concern to anglers. These are conservation; seasonal patterns; balanced tackle and casting techniques; lures; structure and pattern fishing; depth finders, sounders, locators and graphs; rivers and streams, reservoirs, natural lakes, strip mines and farm ponds.

There are also three concurrent sessions that participants may attend. They include lure techniques — this activity is held in the swimming pool with the instructor demonstrating the speed, depth and action of particular lures.

There'll be 50 to 60 manufacture displays including all phases of angling. While no selling is permitted, qualified representatives of the country's top fishing tackle manufacturers will be on hand to demonstrate their products and answer any questions related to their particular field of manufacture.

One of the top attractions to the institute will be a 3,500-gallon fishing simulator that is filled with water, rocks, stumps and other structures. Live bass will be placed in the huge aquarium and world famous bass fishermen will demonstrate how they select and work lures under these simulated natural conditions.

Bass angling isn't the only kind of fishing included in the Institute. Techniques, methods and theory will also be discussed for northern pike, bluegill, crappie, striper, walleye and, most important for many anglers in the Cave Run region, muskie!

Campus Events Coordinator Ryan feels the upcoming Bass Fishing Institute will not only teach many regional anglers more about bass fishing than they ever thought they could learn, the event will also help focus attention on the steadily increasing popularity of Morehead, Cave Run and Northeastern Kentucky area fishing possibilities.

Ryan explained that already Cave Run is becoming the muskie fishing capitol of the South and also affords excellent fishing for bass, crappie and panfish. Nearby Grayson is expected to become a good smallmouth lake in the future due to the increased stocking of the species. Greenbo has already produced two state record largemouths and currently holds the record for the species with a 13½ pounder, and area streams offer some of the best stream fishing for muskie and smallmouth bass to be found in the state.

"All of the factors," Ryan said, "add up to this area being a natural fishing attractor to anglers from all over the Tri-State and I believe those who attend the Bass Fishing Institute will recognize just how important a fishing area we really have."

The Bass Fishing Institutes were initiated by Indiana State University two years ago and have pioneered the teaching of advanced fresh water sport fishing in the U.S. Already, the traveling institutes have proven to be highly popular in the major population areas of the country.

The Institute's mission, from the university level, is to educate youths and adults in the best bass fishing methods and equipment; to promote the highest level of ecological and conservation practices; to stress safe boating and fishing techniques; to stimulate youth and adults to renew their interest in fishing and to support sound fishing programs and policies and to encourage and promote fishing as a leisure time recreational activity.

Fees for the first Bass Fishing Institute are geared to attract the entire family. Cost is $40 per adult; spouses can enroll for an additional $20. One youth, age 10-15, will be admitted free with each paying adult. Additional youths may enroll in the program for $20 each.

On a family basis, a man, his wife and two children may enroll in the two day session for a total of $60.

The two day institute will be conducted in the new Academic Athletic Center on the MSU Campus. Free parking is permitted just outside the center.

Ryan said the event will get under way about 8:30 a.m. on both Saturday and Sunday and will end each day at 4:40 p.m. Food and beverages will be available both days so that participants need not go out of the area for breakfast or lunch.

In special cooperation with MSU for the Bass Fishing Institute weekend, a number of Morehead merchants are planning special sales promotions for participants of the Institute. While details are still incomplete, Ryan said that many stores will remain open late on Saturday night and special prices will be afforded those who present their Bass Fishing Institute name tags.

Pre-registration for the first Bass Fishing Institute at MSU is encouraged. Registration forms may be obtained by phoning 1-606-783-2276 or by writing to Harry W. Ryan Jr. Coordinator of Campus Events, 901 Ginger Hall, MSU, Morehead, KY 40351.

GENERAL SESSIONS at the Institute will cover eight specific areas of interest to sport fishermen. A variety of audio-visual methods will be utilized during the program.

ONE ON ONE Youth are given an opportunity to work hand in hand with the bass fishing pros to get help in particular areas. Adults will not be permitted in these sessions.

SIMULATOR — a 3,500-gallon clear tank, filled with simulated lake bottom structures and live bass, will be a chief attraction of the two-day Bass Fishing Institute.

This is where the pros show just how they became famous as bass fishermen.

50-60 fishing equipment manufacturers will have displays at the Institute. While there will be no selling, qualified representatives will be on hand to demonstrate their products and answer any related questions.

WORLD FAMOUS bass fishermen, such as Tom Mann of Eufaula, Ala., will act as instructors during the first Bass Fishing Institute scheduled for Morehead State University, April 4-5.

Joe Haney Is A Mountain Moving Man

By ALICE AKIN
Staff Writer

WEST LIBERTY — The adjectives have nearly been depleted when it comes to describing Morgan County's legendary Joe Haney, financier, politician, community leader and country music entrepreneur.

He's been referred to as a "one-man chamber of commerce" and "the man who moves mountains."

Indeed he has earned both titles. It takes only a few minutes of conversation with the rapid-talking, free-wheeling, explosive Haney to realize he's a man who has a finger in many pies.

However, a mere "finger" is not an appropriate metaphor for Haney's dynamic approach to the long list of projects he has tackled.

He's more likely to thrust his entire energy and personality into any area that catches his attention or teases his appetite for challenge.

Haney's fierce spunk and non-stop drive have hurled him into a successful career as a businessman among other accomplishments.

Sitting behind his paper-piled desk in a book at Morgan Home Supply, the sprawling furniture and appliance store which is his pet enterprise, Haney puffed on a King Edward cigar and unraveled his past.

Began Business In 1941

"I started out in business in 1941 with a $6,000 loan from the bank," reflected Haney, adding that it took him three years to convince his father, William Haney, to sign the note.

"I didn't know what or how much to buy that first year but I did $47,000 worth of business," he smiled, adding that his business this year might go as high as $11 million.

Haney also remembers his salary that first year in business.

"It was $125 a month or $1,500 a year and I managed to save $1,400," he laughed.

"Of course I lived at home and did everything else to save," he interjected. "I had to also give credit to his father in... H.L. Gevedon, who helped him get a start in business."

But even with help, that start wasn't easy. Haney remembers many trips to High Point, N.C., when he drove a truck to get furniture for his store.

"I would leave at two o'clock in the morning one day and get back at two o'clock in the morning the next day," said non-stop Haney who says he still puts in many 10 to 12-hour days, often getting up at 3:30 a.m.

But then long days of hard work are part of Haney's fiber.

Born 59 years ago on a farm at Nickell, Haney barely remembers his mother, the late Ella Lykins Haney, who died when he was an infant.

His youth was composed of uncompromising days when he had to walk three or four miles to school often in the snow and rain without enough clothes to keep him warm.

His high school days at Morgan County High School were even tougher.

Did Janitorial Work

He stayed with relatives for a while and then lived two years with Ed Turner, the janitor of the school, who boarded him in return for work. "I scrubbed the rest rooms and did janitorial work at the school to get through," Haney said.

"But I always made good grades," Haney said proudly, "and I knew I wanted to go to college. I just didn't know how I was going to go."

Haney did go to college and earned a teaching certificate from Morehead State Teachers College where he received a scholarship upon recommendation from then Morgan County Judge William Caskey who served on the college's Board of Regents.

The teaching certificate equipped Haney for his first big job — teaching first through eighth grades in a small schoolhouse at Panama, Ky.

"I made $37 a month," Haney chuckled.

Haney's teaching stint lasted a year and then he was ready to move on to bigger things.

"I went to Dayton, Ohio, and enrolled at the University of Dayton and picked up a job at nights as a toolmaker," he related.

Joined The Seabees

"Then World War II came along and I joined the Seabees," he continued. "I could have been deferred because I was more valuable at home as a journeyman toolmaker, but I couldn't stand all my friends and other people serving their country and me staying at home, so I enlisted."

And so Haney spent 23 cold, monotonous months in the Alutians before coming back to the States for officers training in the Navy V-7 program.

When the Japanese surrendered, Haney came home to West Liberty to begin his career in the hardware business and start "moving mountains." Haney's "mountain moving" legend is built around his arranging to have a mountain moved so that Lycopodium Shoe Company would locate a $10-million dollar factory in West Liberty.

That was when Haney was chairman of the Morgan County Development Association.

He had bargained with the shoe company for nearly a year to get the factory.

To clinch the deal, he rallied local citizens to raise some $50,000 for an industrial site and persuaded them to back a $350,000 industrial bond issue to build the plant.

He is particularly proud of that accomplishment.

Served In Legislature

And he is also proud of his term in the Kentucky Legislature where he introduced a bill for the establishment of research centers to find a cure for black lung along with a companion bill for seminars to study the impact of the disease on the coal mining industry.

The bills passed in February of 1970, and the entire membership of the state legislature gave the freshman legislator a standing ovation.

Although Haney only served one term as the 98th District's representative in the General Assembly, he made a statewide indelible impression and scored several firsts during his service in Frankfort.

"I was the first freshman representative to be a member of the Democratic Central Executive Committee and I was the first freshman legislator to ever introduce key legislation," Haney said.

Haney's political record was noteworthy, but he says he never did have the desire to run again.

There were other roads to explore, including building the "Big Red Barn" at the famous Remko Valley.

Through that enterprise, Haney was put in touch with many notables in the country music field, winning their respect to the point that a song was written about Haney's life.

It is entitled "The Legend of Joe Haney" and is in the process of being rewritten and promoted by Mae Boren Axton who wrote Elvis Presley's first million seller, "Heartbreak Hotel."

"If I had to pick a force to put behind the song I'd pick Mae Axton," said Haney, who added that the song is being revamped to emphasize his role in researching black lung disease.

Haney has frequent telephone conversations with Nashville on the progress of his song but he also has other irons in the fire.

New Showroom

He's presently renovating Morgan Home Supply for a showroom.

And he has formed a corporation called Liberty Manor Furniture which will manufacture upholstered furniture.

He also owns Morgan Loan Company and Haney's Realty Company and is president of the Corporation of 200, a firm covering 25 states which seeks out distressed merchants and auctions, etc.

Haney's civic and community involvement has touched almost every organization and agency in Morgan County and surrounding areas.

And the list of his accomplishments would probably stack just about as high as the mountain he is credited with moving.

Joe Haney is unquestionably a man on the move.

His moments of relaxation are found on the golf course of Morgan County's Pleasant Valley Country Club and on the waters of Cave Run Lake where he likes to fish.

He and his wife, Jean, also enjoy their three children and their families — Billy Walker Haney, a senior at the University of Louisville Medical School, and Dinah Jo Webb and Regina Carol Jones, both of West Liberty.

What Joe Haney enjoys most, however, is getting things done and seeing just how far ahead he can move in his business interests and the promotion of Eastern Kentucky.

The fact that he is approaching 60 hasn't slowed the bustling Haney down much, despite a recent bout with ill health.

"I feel better than I have in years," Haney said, "and I intend to keep moving."

And for West Liberty's Joe Haney, that could mean moving more mountains as he's done in the past.

Joe Haney's desk is piled high with papers relating to the Morgan County businessman's multiple interests. Among other projects, Haney is in the process of installing a showroom at his Morgan Home Supply Company in West Liberty. (Staff photo by Alice Akin)

Kentuckians Asked To Assist In Fight Against Auto Theft

Frankfort — The commander of the Auto Theft Section of the Kentucky State Police recently called for a massive effort by all Kentuckians to help stop automobile theft — a "gold mine" for professional thieves.

"It is time we stop Kentucky from being a 'gold mine' for organized chop shop operators and join together to drive the professional car thieves out of the Commonwealth," Lt. Richard McQuown said.

Thieves made off with 40,000 automobiles in Kentucky in 1979, McQuown noted. He said many of the stolen autos ended up in the hands of the 35 to 40 chop shops operating in Kentucky, reaping millions in profit for professional thieves. Chop shops, McQuown explained, strip cars and trucks then resell the "spare parts."

McQuown added that the value of an automobile's replacement parts — fenders, hoods, side panels etc. — often is three or four times the value of the original automobile, according to a recent insurance study.

"In cases where the vehicles aren't recovered," Lt. McQuown said, "we aren't talking about teenage joy riders. The cars that disappear forever are those taken by professionals who are part of a $4 billion-a-year national car theft business."

McQuown pointed out the cost of these stolen autos is not borne by just out-of-luck motorists. "Stolen autos cost all citizens of the state through higher insurance premiums and tax dollars spent to investigate and prosecute offenders."

There are a number of steps each citizen can take to help in the crack down on the auto thieves, McQuown said. "Don't leave your keys in the ignition. Lock your car. Take the extra time to mark auto parts with your identifying number or personal insignia," he suggested.

"In fact," McCowan said, "Kentucky's state and local police forces will mark motor vehicle parts for all Kentucky citizens upon request." This effort, the Vehicle Identification Program (VIP), is aimed at deterring professional thieves from selling stolen motor vehicle parts without detection.

McQuown said he and the state's insurance industry are working on a long-term effort to crack down on auto theft. "We will not be able to eliminate or even reduce auto theft overnight," he concluded, "but with all Kentuckians working together, we can have a serious impact."

Mock Tornado Exercise Being Planned Thursday

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Tornadoes — nature's violent, unpredictable windstorms — are in season again. To help prepare Kentucky's communities for their destructive force, the state's Disaster and Emergency Services and the National Weather Service are co-sponsoring a Tornado Awareness Week, scheduled this year for March 15-21.

The highlight of the week will be a state-wide Tornado Preparedness exercise set for March 19 between 1 and 2 p.m. EST. This exercise provides an opportunity for state and local organizations to review warning and communications plans for tornadoes. DES Executive Director Wilbur R. Buntin Jr. said.

Buntin cautions that fire drills are not adequate practice for tornado protection, as the actions taken during the two emergencies are entirely different.

Although tornadoes can occur at any time of the year, they are most common during the spring and early summer. More than half of the nation's 700 annual tornadoes occur during the months of April, May and June. Although they can happen at any time of the day or night, the most likely hours are between 3 and 7 p.m. Most do little harm, but about 15 tornadoes a year may cause terrible damage.

On the average, tornado paths are only a quarter of a mile wide and seldom more than 15 miles long. Tornadoes usually move from the south, southwest or west at about 30 mph. But it's the longer-lived tornadoes that usually move at more than 40 mph that are responsible for most of the tornado-related deaths.

Velocity of the air can range from 100 mph in a mini-tornado to 300 mph in a maxi-tornado, although sometimes air speed exceeds 500 mph. The high winds generated by the storm cause the most destruction by pushing in walls and windows and ripping off roofs. Flying debris picked up by the tornado's funnel is the second-most-serious problem. Collapsing buildings are another deadly result, and an explosive effect resulting from a rapid drop in air pressure is rated as the fourth-greatest danger. Schools and public buildings that meet normal building codes often can withstand the explosive effect, although smaller buildings usually cannot.

Watches and Warnings
It is important to know the difference between a "watch" and a "warning."
"A watch" is issued by the National Weather Service when conditions are favorable for the development of severe weather, either thunderstorms or tornadoes," Buntin said. The primary purpose of a watch is to alert the public to be ready to take protective action in case a severe thunderstorm or tornado does occur.

"A warning" means that a funnel has actually been sighted and calls for immediate action," Buntin said.

What You Should Do
Buntin advises that during a watch, people should determine the best shelter available. Lawns should be cleared of outdoor furniture, trash cans or any other objects that might be blown away. Such items can become deadly weapons in high winds, he said.

A transistor radio and a non-electric light source should also be available and matches should be on hand. Residents of the affected areas should remain tuned to a local radio or television station and watch the sky to the southwest.

When a warning is issued, residents should make certain that everyone in the household or immediate area is warned and told to seek shelter immediately.

In homes and small buildings, the basement or the interior part of the lowest level is the safest place to go. Closets, bathrooms or interior halls provide the best protection, particularly under a piece of sturdy furniture. The head should always be covered with hands and arms. Stay away from windows, doors and outside walls.

In schools, nursing homes, hospitals, factories, shopping centers and large buildings, go to the pre-designated shelter areas. Interior hallways on the lowest floor are usually best. Avoid auditoriums and gymnasiums or other structures with free-span roofs.

People in mobile homes or vehicles should get out immediately and seek shelter elsewhere. If outdoors, a ditch or other low-lying area is best. Lie flat in the ditch, ravine or culvert and cover your head with your hands and arms. If the tornado is approaching you while you are seeking shelter, move out of the direct path of the tornado to your immediate right or left. Do not try to outrun a tornado.

Buntin noted that schools have tornado plans and that parents should not go to schools when a warning is issued.

"Parents only expose themselves and their children to needless risk," he said. "In nearly every case, the child will be safer in school than at home."

Buntin added that additional safety information is available through DES, civil defense and other emergency preparedness organizations.

By Robert Stapp
Ashland District Mgr.

Annual reports of 1980 earnings must be filed by April 15 by people receiving social security benefits who earned more than the annual exempt amount in 1980.

The 1980 annual exempt amounts were $5,000 for people 65 and over and $3,720 for people under 65 of last year.

People who received some benefits in 1980 who earned more than the exempt amount are required to file a report of those earnings by April 15.

Those who received no benefits in 1980 are not required to file a report, but, those people should file a report to make sure that any benefits that might be due for the year are paid.

A person who earned less than anticipated, for example, may be due some benefits. The only way these benefits can be paid is if the person files an annual report.

The general rule is that $1 in benefits is withheld for each $2 earnings above the exempt amount. A person can have substantial yearly earnings before all benefits are withheld.

People who are required to file an annual report should have received a copy in the mail. If they have not, they should contact the nearest social security office to obtain a copy. Those not required to file, but who wish to do so, can also get a copy of the form at any social security office.

The 1981 annual exempt amounts are $5,500 for people 65 or older and any part of 1981 and $4,080 for people under 65 all of 1981.

Your problem may be as simple as dirty headlights or as serious as a change in your vision. Your vision may have changed, but so slightly that you only notice it at night, when darkness restricts seeing.

If you haven't had a thorough vision exam in the last year, you should probably see your vision care professional.

Tax Tips

For certain taxpayers who use their automobiles for business, employment, educational pursuits or transportation between jobs, the IRS allows an income tax deduction of 20 cents a mile for the first 15,000 miles and 11 cents a mile thereafter. The 11 cent rate is also used for automobiles that are fully depreciated. The IRS considers that if you have always used the standard rate, your car is fully depreciated after 5 years.

If you use your car for charitable work (such as church work, soliciting for charitable foundations, and similar qualified errands), a deduction of nine cents a mile is allowed.

The same cents a mile deduction also applies whenever the taxpayer uses his car for medical, dental, and hospital transportation or, more simply stated, to and from the doctor's offices or to and from the hospital.

In addition, the IRS standard mileage rate for computing deductions for family and household moving expenses is nine cents a mile.

Sharpsburg Water District Gets Grant

— SHARPSBURG — Congressman Carl D. Perkins recently announced that a grant and loan from the Farmers Home Administration have been approved for water system improvement in the Sharpsburg Water District.

The FHMA has agreed to provide Sharpsburg with a $26,000 loan and a $299,000 grant to replace the district's present deteriorated treatment plant and a reservoir and to renovate existing distribution lines.

Funds approved will be used to construct a 100,000-gallon storage tank, a pump station and approximately 10 miles of 8-inch transmission line, allowing the district to purchase water from the Bath County Water District.

Additional monies for the project are being provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Area Development Fund, Perkins said.

The Sharpsburg Water District opened in the fall of 1963 with approximately 200 customers and a rate of $3.75 set by the Public Service Commission, according to its manager, Charles Martin. It owed $14,000 to its bonding company and, Martin said, the district was at that time unable to pay its chemical and electric bills not counting its bonded indebtedness.

In 1974, the PSC reset the water rates and the district began paying off its indebtedness, which had risen to $25,129. Since then, it has paid off considerable amounts each year until last year when the district paid off in full the $14,000 bond debt and interest.

In recent weeks, since J.W. Swartz became a member of the Water District Commissioners, a number of questions on the quality of water, feasibility studies and environmental impacts has been brought out, leading to the dismissal of Swartz from the board by Bath County Judge Executive Ray Bailey. Mr. Swartz contends his dismissal was illegal and that he is still a member of that board.

"All I am interested in is good drinking water for our community at a reasonable cost," Swartz said. His initial concern was that a proper feasibility study was not conducted that would show the district board that abandoning its present water source and treatment plant (or going to Licking River for its water source) and buying its water from the Bath County Water District was the best feasible solution. "We still do not know what that district is going to charge us for water," he said.

Another concern of Swartz is the fate of the lake and dam where the Sharpsburg Water District now gets its water. If the land is eventually sold, the dam and lake, upkeep becomes the responsibility of the new owner which, Swartz feels, is not necessarily a solution. Or, if the dam is torn down, he said, he feels the people living below the dam will again be subjected to flooding as they were before the dam was built.

Judge Bailey said it was imperative that no time be lost in applying for the grant and loan while FHMA and other agency monies were available before the Reagan Administration cuts in the federal funds that appear to be a certainty.

Jury Rules In Favor Of Ex-Jailer

A Menifee County Circuit Court jury recently ruled in favor of the defendant in a civil suit in which Gladys Lawson was suing William "Joker" Benson, former Menifee County jailer, for alleged recklessness and carelessness in the death of Gary Neal.

Neal died March 4, 1978, from smoke inhalation in a fire in the Menifee County Jail where he was being held prisoner.

The suit filed by Lawson as administratrix of Neal's estate claimed that Benson "failed to remain within reasonable distance" of Neal and that the deceased had "no means of escape or assistance."

Lawson sought damages totaling $402,331.65.

Also named in the suit was Dick Youcum who acted as surety on the bond of Benson.

David Redwine, of Winchester, was the plaintiff's attorney in the case which was tried before Circuit Judge Caswell Lane.

Asa R. Little Jr. was counsel for the defendant. Pamela Davis served as foreman of the jury which included Karen Berry, Shirley Back, Doyle Napier, Walter Osborne, Everett Sexton, Alipe Back, James Osborne, Carolyn Creech, Kenneth Stephens, Wanda Brewer and Robert Downs.

The Kentucky Easter Seal Society offers professional rehabilitation assistance to those with communication problems at five of its centers. These include the West Kentucky and Northern Kentucky Easter Seal Centers at Paducah and Covington, respectively; Cardinal Hill Hospital at Lexington; the Griger Easter Seal Center at Ashland and the Easter Seal Hearing and Speech Center in Louisville.

Sally Field at Oscars; confused Forsythe fan

By Cindy Adams
NEW YORK - Luciano Pavarotti will sing on the Oscar telecast and Sissy Spacek, Angie Dickinson, Margot Kidder, Sally Field and Dustin Hoffman will present awards ... A story from John Forsythe: "A lady maybe 80 years old spied me in an Atlanta airport, circled a few times, then screwed up the courage to say, 'Pardon me, didn't you used to be John Forsythe?' ... Jackie O's cousin and chum, John Davis, got permission from the kinfolk to do a thing for McGraw-Hill titled, 'Family Saga.' He was in Wexford, Ireland researching the ancestors and is now finishing it in Puerto Vallarta.

Charles Strouse, who knocked off the music for "Annie" and for Donald O'Connor's "Bring Back Birdie," relaxed Sunday night with chums at a New York restaurant ... N.Y. Mets hotshot Lee Mazzilli, who has a Connecticut mansion with wooded acreage, 20-foot cathedral ceilings, 15-foot wide windows and loads of bedrooms, sighs, "I miss Brooklyn. I miss the sound of fire engines at three in the morning." It's enough to make you cry, ain't it?

Matthau: "An epidemic of mediocrity is sweeping the human race" ... Streisand: "Women are expected to stay on the sidelines and keep their mouths shut. Well, I'm not like that" ... Telly Savalas: "A man's hair has three basic styles: parted, unparted and departed" ... Shirley Booth: "I'd like to be 40 again. At that age - you haven't yet sagged and you've still got a little mileage left."

My letter from President Reagan says, in part: "Speaking for both Nancy and myself, I wish you to know that both of us appreciate the many hours and sacrifices that you devoted to the effort," and "Only with your help and prayers can we meet the challenges ahead."

Cher: "I already have children so I can't think of any reason to ever be married again" ... Philippe Jeantot, ex-husband to Princess Grace's daughter, Caroline, is now steering someone named Vivian Gaither, a model, around the disco dance floor.

John Denver will vacuum up nearly 18 million Yankee dollars for recording six albums ... Melissa Gilbert, aged 16, bought herself her own station wagon ... Erik Estrada's doing an update of John Garfield's role in the oldie, "Body and Soul" ... Sally Struthers shrieved 20 pounds by inhaling only fruits and veggies - not meat, fish, chicken, cheese, eggs, nothin'.
