Rowan Farmers Are Restoring Woodlands To Productivity

By Clarence J. Lake
The first step has been taken by several residents of Rowan County, during the last half of 1952, in the long trip of bringing the woodlands of the County back into productivity.

Initial work is in the form of clearing from the woodlands, those trees which have been injured by fire, those trees of poor form and the unusable species. It also includes the thinning of a too dense stand of trees, to permit better and faster growth of those trees chosen as crop trees.

On the farm of Frank Conette, Elliottville, 8 acres of woodland were improved in the above manner; 4 acres of pine woods and 4 acres of pine. The improved 3 acres, cutting from the material removed, his wife's wood supply. C. B. Adkins, Harvey McBrayer, Chester Adkins, L. D. Stumber and Emmitt Clark, all of the Elliottville area have done timber stand improvement work on their farms.

In the Sharkey area, George Price improved 6 acres of his 100 acre woodland, a very small part true, but a first step. Ray Black and A. C. Black also have done woodland improvement on their farms. At Haldeman, Powell Ferguson, improved 2 acres of his small woodland.

Down at Three Licks, Ted Moore and Elzire Johnson have done improvement work with an above manner, 4 acres of pine woods and 4 acres of pine. The improved 3 acres, cutting from the material removed, his wife's wood supply. C. B. Adkins, Harvey McBrayer, Chester Adkins, L. D. Stumber and Emmitt Clark, all of the Elliottville area have done timber stand improvement work on their farms.

Kentucky Farm Market Report

Feedstuffs Generally Weaker As Demand Slow; Index Is Off 10 Points Over 1954

Feed markets generally weakened during the week ended Jan. 11, the U. S. Department of Agriculture's offering of most feedstuffs were ample for the slow demand and prices averaged lower. Demand for corn feeds was limited. Oilseed meal markets weakened. Soybean prices averaged $17.75 per ton lower. Lined meal prices declined 96¢ per ton at Minneapolis while cottonseed prices were unchanged at Memphis but 50¢ higher at Chicago. Bran prices averaged slightly lower. Standard middling dropped 21¢ at Buffalo and Minneapolis. Grain shorts advanced $1.25 at Kansas City. Gluten feed and distillers dried grain prices were mostly unchanged while herring feed and brewers dried grains averaged about 50¢ lower due to the slow demand. Animal protein prices were unchanged at Buffalo and Chicago, advanced $1.25 at Kansas City, but declined $2 at Minneapolis. Alfalfa meal prices averaged about unchanged except at Kansas City where dehydrated meal gained $2 per ton. The index number of wholesale feedstuffs prices declined 1.1 points to 227.7 compared with 231.1 a year ago. The feed grain index declined 3.0 points to 213.5 compared with 216.4 a year earlier.

Hay Supply Up
Four per cent
Feed grain supplies remaining on farms Jan. 1 totaled 72.2 million tons compared with 76 million tons for that date of each of the last two years. The record high stock for Jan. 1 were 76 million tons in 1949. The supply of feed grains per animal unit of feed grain is larger than in most years. In 1952, the supply of hay on Jan. 1 totaled 72.2 million tons. These were 4 per cent above the year earlier despite shortages in several Southern and some Western states. In relation to the amount of roughage consumed by animal units on farms, this year's stocks are about average, but larger than the last two years. Hay usage was unusually light during May-December 1952, due largely to the mild open weather this fall. Production of hay in December was the second highest for the month in 31 years of record, due in part to the mild, open weather and liberal supplies of feed. Milk production per cow in feed reporter's herds on Jan. 1 averaged 16.47 pounds, 2 per cent above a year ago and 20 per cent more than average for the date. The rate of egg production in December was 14.0 per cent lower, compared with 13.6 a year earlier and the average of 18.8 eggs. The nation's egg production averaged about 106 million layers during December—2 per cent above December 1952, but 1 per cent below average. The December egg-fed, chicken-fed and turkey-fed price relationship were all less favorable than a year ago.

Prohibit Fiscal Courts From Advancing Funds

A fiscal court is not a money lending institution and may not use public funds to advance its members to meet "incidental expenses," Assistant Attorney General M. H. Holifield advised J. S. Shaver, Trimble County Attorney, Tuesday.

"There is no provision in the law authorizing the fiscal court to lend county funds for any purpose whatsoever," Holifield added. "The power of the fiscal court is limited to the collection and disbursement of taxes and it possesses no authority not delegated to it, expressly or impliedly, by some provision of law."

Does anyone in the audience know what is meant by going into a tizzy?

It is easy to forget that government is the enemy of personal freedom, but it is.

Strip Mining In Forests Studied

Plans for the public hearing to be held Jan. 27 at Stearns, Ky., by a group of special consultants to the Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson on a proposal to permit strip-mining for coal on Cumberland National Forest are being formed.

The following background information on the three-member board of consultants and their assignment has been made available from the office of Charles P. Taft, chairman of the group.

On Dec. 2, 1954, R. L. Wilhelm of St. Clairsville, O., Samuel T. Dens of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati were appointed as consultants to the Secretary of Agriculture. Mr. Wilhelm is a business man with extensive experience in strip mining. Dean Dens is the retired dean of the School of Forestry of the University of Michigan. Mr. Taft is a Cincinnati lawyer, a charter member of the Academy of Arbitrators, and at one time a member of the committee which advised the Secretary of the Interior on his policy with reference to concessions in the National Parks.

The consultants met in Columbus, December 13, and organized by electing Taft as chairman. The function assigned to them by the Secretary was to "examine, on the ground, an area of some 2,000 acres of land in the Cumberland National Forest which the Stearns Coal and Lumber Company desires to strip-mine." To analyze the erosion and stream pollution damage which would result to public lands and resources. To compare these damages with the benefits to local employment and coal production which would probably result from the strip-mining operation. To analyze the possible and practicable remedial and damage-prevention measures which the strip-mining operator might take to minimize damages to land and resources. To sample public opinion regarding the desirability of the proposed strip-mining; and to make recommendations as to which course of action will best serve the public interest.

At Columbus the consultants agreed to meet in Stearns on January 24, and on that day and the next two days examine the area. On January 27th they have completed their study of the area and will submit their report to the Federal government to meet with them, as well as local citizens and others interested. Since time and facilities are somewhat limited and repetition of the same arguments not desired at the oral hearing, written statements have been requested where they are felt to present adequately the various viewpoints.

Increasing The Supply Of Fish And Game

In several states in the United States game and conservation departments have inaugurated programs in recent years which increase the supply of game. One of the methods which at least one state (Florida) has employed is designed to take advantage of the huge timber preserves of major private industries.

These private industries, such as paper manufacturers, often have many thousands of acres of timber lands in many of the states. On these thousands of acres, the paper companies must often take measures to prevent trespassing.

In most instances, the big paper companies do not mind hunters using the acreage but the danger of forest fires is great and hunters, being like everyone else—sometimes careless—their carelessness has often found it necessary to keep all trespassers off their lands to protect their growing timber. After all, that is the private company's prerogative and it is a logical step.

In Florida, state game and conservation officials have entered into agreements with the paper companies holding large tracts of timber land and agreed to patrol the land, for the private companies. This prevents fires from destroying timber, and removes a financial burden and a responsibility from the shoulders of the private companies.

In return, the private companies give state officials the right to set out game to increase the supply and to supervise hunting on such lands. State officials allow hunters to hunt on the lands, at certain times, and all hunters are treated equally. This is a case of first-come, first-served.

We suggest this method to other states game and conservation agencies which are not now taking advantage of it, and who have many thousands of acres of timberlands tied up by big companies. In this way, hunting acreage and the propagation of wild life tremendously increased and, therefore, birds and other game in limited land always open to hunters are not killed down to the last living specimen.

Eat Too Much And You'll Die Early

Recent medical pronouncements have made it clear beyond any doubt that overeating is the primary cause of premature death. Information which is set out here, as discovered by members of the medical profession proves conclusively that overeating shortens their life span by more than one-third.

The shortening of one's life depends upon the age at which he begins to overeat. One doctor recently said that a fifty-year-old male in good health had a life expectancy of about twenty years but that the same aged male, if obese, had a life expectancy of about thirteen years.

This reduction of the life span varies with the age of the individual. It is said that a younger male, at about thirty, faces a prospect of an eighty per cent higher mortality rate than the same aged male who is not overweight.

One of the best suggestions made by doctors for reducing weight is to eat a little before meal time. This small intake of food, a cracker, a piece of cheese, or a piece of hard candy, will increase the blood sugar and cut down on one's appetite. And doctors say that any of these tidbits serve just about the same purpose as more expensive products, sold to reduce weight by this method.

There are also drugs which can be used, but they are usually sold on prescription. In many instances, however, no such tablets or drugs are needed. All that is needed is a little will-power. Considering the startling information about unnecessary and premature deaths, it would seem that every overweight person, who wishes to extend his life span, would promptly attend to the problem of obesity.

The Female Causes Most Of The Trouble

A recent book, dedicated mainly to research in the in-law relationship of American families, indicates, mothers-in-law are quite often the problem jokes make them out to be.

The book, "In-Laws, Pros and Cons," is authored by Dr. Evelyn Mills Duvall. In assembling material for the book, over 5,000 men and women were surveyed and over a thousand of them were interviewed in groups, or singly.

In answering the question who caused the most difficulties, most of those interviewed named mother-in-law. They were described to be meddlesome, dominating, critical, interfering and possessive. It is interesting to note that nine out of the ten complaints pertained to women.

Although women may carry on most of the close in-law relationships, this is still a serious indictment which the female sex would do well to consider. Just why it is that mothers-in-law fail to properly discipline themselves to proper in-law behavior is a question we cannot answer here.

However, the book should be a timely hint to the ladies to improve their in-law relationships. The best advice we can offer mothers-in-law (and fathers-in-law) is to accept the families of their sons and daughters as equals, and to act in their homes just as they would act if they were visiting in a friend's home. If this rule is followed, it would solve ninety-five per cent of the problems which now arise.

The President Has Plenty Of Advisors

President Harry Truman, in New York recently, recently heard talks for newsmen. Never one to mince his words, the President was asked by a reporter whether he thought this country was doing all it could to obtain the release of the eleven American prisoners of war being held by Communist China.

The former President, offered an opportunity for demagoguery, answered with intelligence and candor. He said, when asked what he would do about the situation:

"I had more eager beavers telling me what to do than any other man in history, and I don't want to join the chorus. It's the President's decision."

Mr. Truman also said he thought the country's basic foreign policy was today largely what he had set up when he was in office and his opinion that the United States has lost a lot of friends because of "fool statements by people in high places" contains much truth.

On another subject, Mr. Truman told reporters he was hoping for a third party, as an offshoot of the Republican Party but that he was afraid it might happen. He said much laughter. The former President seems to remain in good form and his words about the eleven prisoners, misadventures by high officials, and on the United Nations and foreign policy contain much truth and are worthy of attention.

A Success Story — Rookie Of The Year

Bob Grim, a rookie pitcher for the New York Yankees, was recently selected by baseball writers as the American League rookie of the year. Grim won twenty games for the Yankees during the 1954 season.

Grim's record is impressive, but what is more impressive is the way he broke in with the Yankees. It proved that a player with talent—even though he has spent the usual number of years jumping from one minor league to another—can make the grade.

Grim came back this year after two years of service in the Marines. The highest he had been in professional baseball was when with a Class A team, Birmingham. Even so, he showed so much promise in the Yankees' spring training camp that Manager Casey Stengel finally made him a regular Yankee—shortly before the season opened.

With this incentive, Grim worked in thirty-seven games during the year, and pitched 199 innings. In that time he allowed only nine homers, struck out 108 and walked 65.

It is good to watch a success story unfold in this manner, an unblemished star turn in to one of the game's great performers. Grim's achievement will encourage all these youngsters who think they have the goods to deliver, but who are told they're not ready, to shoot for the moon. It can be reached.

Restocking In Southwest Of Game Birds

The Fish and Wildlife Service has reached out to Karachi in an effort to restock game lands in the southwestern part of the United States. Dr. Gardner Burns, Fish and Wildlife Service biologist, is presently in Karachi obtaining several hundred Francolin.

The Francolin is a bird measuring about fifteen inches from bill to tail tip, which is mostly brown and has a white patch on its back. It is a good eating bird and usually weighs about one pound when grown. The male is brown and black spotted, with white back and black underparts. He has white cheeks and a chestnut collar. The female is grayish or brownish and less colorful.

Dr. Burns is expected to bring back several hundred Francolin in an effort to restock areas in the Southwest where game birds have been on the wane. The Fish and Wildlife Service will put these birds in areas where they cannot be hunted at first and it is hoped that they will multiply and provide a new source of hardy and prolific game birds.

REFORESTATION Paying Off In Rowan County

Reforestation continues popular in Rowan County, and is increasing in some of the other Eastern Kentucky counties. Servants Foresters Chauncey Lehr and Gene Reynolds are still taking applications. If you want to plant any but can't see how you can make time for it, see Odel Ebel, Route 2, Morehead. He and his boys are willing to plant anywhere in the county. Ebel and March, who are glad Odel is available, because several land owners would like to do some planting but are too busy.

A strange animal was killed near the head of Dry Creek during the holidays. It was brought to Sam Green's Sport Shop for identification. Sam didn't have any trouble in identifying it as a bobcat. He had seen one in the area, but he had never seen one so close to town.

George Nitzsche, West, from a local car dealer, says he saw a bobcat in the area, but he had never seen one so close to town.

The Boy Scouts of America did their part during 1954 in the Conservation Good Turn Project. The good turn reported show they planted 327,000 trees, worked on 729 public recreation areas and planted 1,100 native plants. They also planted 327,000 trees, worked on 729 public recreation areas and planted 1,100 native plants.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America. Several programs are planned in the nation in honor of the anniversary. It was in 1904 that the Service was organized, and it wasn't many years after that that the motto of objectivity was set. The greatest number in the long run.

Right To Criticize Is Privilege In A Democracy

If the average American suddenly found himself—or herself—living under a dictatorship, or in a country where the right to free speech is not guaranteed, he or she would miss most—and the least of which would be a source of constant irritation.

The Right To Criticize is so deeply rooted in the history of our country that we have come to take it for granted. True, we do not have the rule of the majority, but we do not, by accident, have the rule of the minority to oblige.

The Right To Criticize is healthy for a free nation. It is a time for us to clear our minds of the mists of time, and to see the needs of the future.

But the Right To Criticize does not include the Right to Defect.

who are given antibiotics have allergic skin reactions such as hives, rash, or other outbreaks. Taken as an organization to which you belong and give out the proverbial "agony"—the one who always finds fault with whatever is done, but who is either absent or too busy when called upon to do anything, who listens carefully to a suggested program, points out what he thinks wrong or right, and then makes constructive suggestions. With which one of these two would you prefer to work?

Like all of our rights, the Right To Criticize carries with it an obligation—the obligation to know what we are talking about, the obligation to think things through, and the obligation to couch our criticism courteously and firmly to the person criticized.

In that great part of the world under Red domination, there is no Right To Criticize—provided the Right To Criticize is used to keep the Red rulers from the Free World. We think the Free World owes it to itself to have the Right To Criticize well and wisely.

Business Club Of 100 Members Will Be Morehead Goal

The committee working out the merger of Morehead's Board of Trade and Merchants Club have practically every business and professional person will be forthcoming and chairing membership of the new Chamber of Commerce should run over 100.

This committee is using good judgment by drafting a constitution before the membership is called together. In this manner every business man should know the foundation, aims and purposes of the Chamber. He should understand its functions and the membership of authority.

To our thinking the soundest part of the proposal is the membership meeting every year, possibly in February. Business people are generally ready to finance an organization that shows accomplishments, but getting members to a meeting every month is another matter.

This one big gathering should be something, with the President of the State Chamber, the Governor, or some such person of stature as principal speaker.

The new Chamber of Commerce will have its headquarters in the new building at the corner of Main and Adams streets. Included in these, as we have previously mentioned, are Morehead's annual observance in 1956, pushing construction of the Morehead-Vandenberg road, community hospital; the health center; community shopping days; and proper restriction of restaurants and demands being made on merchants.

We Couldn't Resist This

Perhaps our most outspoken critic is Gordon Moore of President Moore. He writes that the administration has made its choice and it wasn't John Watts as we had hoped. He says that the administration has been very wise and you ought to be delighted to support it. He says that the administration has been very wise and you ought to be delighted to support it.

May I make one suggestion. We ought to run for Lieutenant-Governor. Everybody is and you can't go wrong on that.

Thinking citizens have been concerned for years over what appears to be a build-up of class interests in the Morehead High and Breckinridge.

Breck has better facilities because of the special support comes from the state. Breck teachers are paid more than we can level the same criticism at the training schools maintained by Breck. Breck has children of school age have enrolled them in Breck instead of the system where they are employed.

It is not a favorable situation for either Morehead High or Breck. Breck has a satisfactory solution will be achieved of the Breck between Madison and Madison County High.

Some Changes In Our Forum

We will see a change in the make-up of the Rowan County News. This editorial page will go to large display, heads while the society page will also undergo a major change to make it more readable and attractive. We recently we checked the circulation of the Rowan County News and found that this newspaper carries more society items than any other newspaper in the area. This is also Kentucky's only weekly to have a full page of society items.

Complete Six Dams, Buy Lake For Fishermen

Kentucky's Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources completed six dams and purchased a lake for the use of Kentucky fishermen during the last year, according to a report this week by Commissioner Earl Wallace. The total cost was $48,800.

Dams completed and impoundments were located in Carter Cave State Park, 50 acres, costing $10,000; Jefferson County, 50 acres, $65,000; Greenbriar, 50 acres, $10,000; Pine Mountain State Park, 600 acres, $10,000; and two creeks, at Cynthiana, $10,000, and Georgetown, $7,000. Shanty Hollow Lake in Warren County, 180 acres, was bought for $48,800.

Forty-nine lakes have been built and nine dams constructed across streams in the last three years, Wallace said.

Money for the projects has been available because of a great increase in the sale of fishing licenses. Extra money received from the sale has been used to provide new fishing places.

Mr. Eisenhower says he does not engage in personal vituperation, which is a good thing for the President of the United States to say.

Watts Reintroduces Bill Providing Federal Funds For Building School Classrooms

By John C. Watts

The opening day of Congress, Jan. 5, was friendly but short and devoted mainly to the task of organizing the House for the coming year. Sam Rayburn of Texas was re-elected to the post he has held for so many years under Democratic rule—that of Speaker of the House. The Speaker for the 63rd Congress, Joe Martin of Massachusetts, became Floor Leader for the Republicans and John McNamara also from Massachusetts, was elected Floor Leader for the Democrats.

My former assistant, H. H. Morris, was elected Postmaster of the House of Representatives. I was sorry to lose his valuable help.

It was a very pleasant day greeting old friends and welcoming new members to the ranks.

State of the Union.
On Thursday, Jan. 6, the President made the kick-off for the 63rd Session of Congress when he delivered his State of the Union Message. Because the Democrats have a majority in the House by 29 members, and by one in the Senate, the Democrats will undoubtedly carry the legislation.

The extent to which the President receives bipartisan support on his domestic proposals will depend upon the details of the legislation he recommends. I personally do not expect to approach legislation on a partisan basis but will rely on the basis of whether it is of sound policy and beneficial to all the people and not to a few vested interests.

School Construction Bill.
As many of you will recall, I sponsored legislation in the last session to help meet our school classroom shortage and crisis. At that time, however, the President's Cabinet members, Mrs. Brett C. Hobbs, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, testified in opposition to such a bill. Along with several other bills, I have reintroduced a measure to provide Federal funds to help build school classrooms; such funds to be granted to localities on the basis of need, tax effort, and school population, while also providing that there be no Federal interference in the local school control. I hope now that the President has stated his approval of such legislation and that we have a Democratic majority in Congress, my bill, or a similar effective bill, will be enacted. You can be assured that I intend to do everything I can to have this bill become law. I do not feel that the school needs of our children are less needed any longer. Kentuckians From the District.

During the past two weeks the following Kentuckians from the Sixth District have stopped in my office for brief visits: Jesse D. Kish, Winchester; Robert A. Owen, Cynthiana; Mrs. Joseph C. Grable, Lexington; and Clifford Piper and Ben S. Adams, Frankfort.

Kentucky Has Given Nation Many Great Men

By Lee Stewart

Kentucky is one of the richest states in the Federal Union in its natural resources and in the history of great men she has given to the nation.

Kentucky has never furnished a President direct, but when we fought our great Civil War from 1861 to 1865, the President of the United States, Abraham Lincoln, born in Kentucky and he married a Kentucky girl, Mary Todd Lincoln; and the President of the Southern Confederacy, Jefferson Davis, a native of the state who attended Transylvania College before entering West Point as a cadet. He married the daughter of General Taylor, was twice President, and died at that time, lived in Jefferson County, Kentucky.

Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky, was only Vice President to be elected by the U. S. Senate. Since then John Breckinridge and A. W. Barkley, both of Kentucky, have served in that office.

Henry Clay was elected to the U. S. Senate five times, served as Speaker of the House six times, and was the only man ever elected Speaker his first term in Congress and every time he served thereafter. He was also Secretary of State.

Kentucky also contributed Kit Carson, a noted western scout; Carrie Nation, the hutchet woman who destroyed saloons; Oscar Underwood, a Senator from Alabama; Captain Harrison, five times mayor of Chicago; James Lane Allen, writer; Paul V. Vance, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; John W. Harlan, Judge of the Supreme Court; Louis D. Brandeis, Supreme Court; John G. Carlisle; Samuel P. Miller, and Adlai Stevenson.

Kentucky was seriously divided on the question of the right of state to secede, but remained in the Union, and it is reported that President Lincoln said: "I must have God on my side, but I must have Kentucky." Kentucky perhaps furnished more officers to the Confederacy than any other state with the possible exception of Louisiana. He claimed that she gave 75 generals to the "Lost Cause."

Major Robert Anderson, a native Kentuckian, held Fort Sumter 34 hours, until it was taken by the Confederates, and the Civil War started. Albert Sidney Johnson, born at Washington, Mass. Co., did not have a drop of southern blood in his veins; his ancestors had moved from England a few months before he was born. He was one of the great Confederate generals, and perhaps had he been in the East instead of California, he more than likely would have been selected as the commanding general of the Confederate forces, since he was Lee's superior in the army before secession.

Dr. Robert J. Breckinridge, a confident and advisor of Lincoln, had two sons in the Confederate army. John J. Crittenden, one of the most noted Kentuckians, who had been elected U. S. Senator four times, member of the House of Representatives, and Governor of the state and a member of two cabinets, had two sons in the different armies. George B. was a Major General with the Confederate forces, and his brother Thomas T. held a similar position with the Union Army.

John H. Morgan, of Lexington, gave armies of the Union much trouble as one of our Confederate generals.

It is also true that Kentucky has been beset by disaster, and it is only necessary to quote a section of a Kentucky will to show the "swelling waters" I bequeath to my son, and at his death, to his oldest son. They are never to be used by either but when their honor imperatively demands it, and in that case I know they will be held steady.

Kentucky furnished America with great statesmen, writers, poets, warriors, diplomats and politicians, but I want to show that she has done in the matter of furnishing Governors for other states.

To Ohio she gave Gov. Richard Bishop Moore.
To Indiana, Henry Smith Lane (born in Bath Co.). He was chairman of the first Republican convention in 1856, and was elected Governor, but only served a week when he was elected U. S. Senator.
To Illinois, Kentucky has sent the following Governors: Thomas C. Carlin, Shelby M. Cullum, Joseph Duncan, Richard J. Oglesby, John M. Palmer, Nathaniel Pope, and Richard Yates. Palmer and Cullum were Senators when Adlai Stevenson was Vice President. He, too, was born in Kentucky. Palmer was a general in the Union Army, and commanded the troops that captured the noted guerrilla chief, Quantrill, at the Wakarusa battle. In 1890 Palmer headed the Gold ticket for President in opposition to Bryan's free Silver plank.

Men Interested In Women Beauty Secrets

Male Berliners in Germany are flocking to a new movie running which reveals intimate details of the beauty secrets of the opposite sex down through the ages.

The film "Secrets of Venus" was given a general release recently because it is regarded as a documentary on the cosmetics and beauty industries.

Among the high-spots are scenes of slave girls bathing in the Aegean Sea, women in Babylonian baths, and modern-day mail-order parlor. The secrets of modern form-moulding garments also are exposed.

For Jesse James, dead or alive, James killed shortly afterwards, or it was reported that he had been killed, but nothing is known of his death, and Albert Brown was instrumental in keeping Missouri in the Union.

He had served as Governor of Kentucky before moving to Montana. Leslie County is named for him. General Green Clay Smith was a former Congressman from Kentucky before moving to Governor of Montana.

Tennessee has the distinction of giving Kentucky her first Governor, Isaac Shelby, but Kentucky reciprocated by sending four Senators to the U. S. Senate: Albert S. Benton, McMillin, and Austin Peck.

To Oklahoma, the Sooner State, Kentucky sent Lee Cruise to be one of her first Governors.

There is a possibility that other states have been to Kentucky's generosity, but the foregoing is all that I have been able to find up to the present time, 33 in all. Do you know of any other state or commonwealth which approaches Kentucky in regard to furnishing Governors to other states?

Great deal of fun has been poked at Kentucky. There is a story in the paper that a man named Kentucky—Where the corn is full of kernels and the Colonels are full of corn.

But after all she is a great state, or perhaps I should say Commonwealth.

Combs Starts Campaign In West Kentucky

Appellate Judge Bert T. Combs is on a swing through Western Kentucky as the first step in an active campaign for the Democratic nomination as governor.

The announcement, made by his law partner, Jack Howard of Prestonsburg, that Combs has no formal schedule for the trip, but will see as many voters as possible en route to the First Congressional District and while in that district. He has already taken leave without pay from the Court of Appeals.

Meanwhile, former Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler is continuing his visits over the state in his campaign for the Democratic nomination. Chandler was in Louisville, Frankfort and Williamsburg last week visiting and renewing acquaintances as he has done for months.

Robert, Humphreys, Frankfort, chairman of the Democratic State Central Executive Committee and Chandler supporter, who has been mentioned as Chandler's possible campaign manager, said no decision has been reached on appointing a manager yet.

Armadillo Comes To Rest With Dr. West

An armadillo was presented to the science department of Morehead State College. This unusual animal, which was found by Sam Green of Sam's Sport Shop. The armadillo was caught during the last week of December at Dry Creek, a place about five miles out of Morehead. The animal was alive when it was found but has since died.

The odd-fact of this story is the fact that the armadillo is not a native of this section of the country. Its natural habitat is in the south and southwest. The origin of this particular animal is a mystery since there were no other such animals seen in the vicinity.

The science department is having the armadillo stuffed. It will then be displayed with the rest of the varied animal collection of which the science department boasts.

Flu Shots Are Now Available

Cold and influenza shots are now available for student use, according to Mrs. Herbert French, Morehead State College nurse. These shots can be ordered from the drug store upon request. They are $1.25 per person.

These shots are given as a preventive, not as a treatment. They should be given at a time when the person is free of all signs of a cold or other illness. Any person who knows he is allergic to eggs will not be given the immunization because of sensitivity to the serum.
