

Bradford pleads not guilty in Rowan court

William A. Bradford, former associate director of admissions, pleaded not guilty yesterday to a 24-count indictment handed down by the Rowan County grand jury. Circuit Court Judge Caswell Lane set a December 9 trial date and Bradford was released on his own recognizance.

Bradford was charged with taking $33,000 from foreign students under the pretense that they were required to deposit the money with him to prove their financial solvency.

The indictment covers 12 counts of theft by deception, a felony, and 12 counts of official misconduct in the first degree, a misdemeanor.

The felony charges carry a prison sentence upon conviction of one to five years for each count. The misdemeanor charges carry a penalty upon conviction of up to $500 and/or up to 12 months in jail for each count.

The indictment says Bradford converted the money he obtained from the students to his own use by depositing it in non-university accounts.

The Trail Blazer was unable to reach Bradford for comment.

The grand jury also issued a report that:

✓ stated no evidence was found that any other MSU personnel was involved in the matters that resulted in the charges against Bradford.

✓ stated that according to evidence, MSU Controller Mike Walters was told by one foreign student at registration in August of 1980 that he had given Bradford money to be deposited in an international student deposit fund. Walters gave that information to John Graham, vice-president for fiscal affairs on the same day, and then referred the student to Bradford.

It was stated there was testimony to suggest MSU officials should have suspected improper handling of foreign student funds in August of 1980 and should have had enough information by October of 1980 to notify the proper law enforcement agencies or at least to determine Bradford was using an unauthorized bank account and illegally collecting money from foreign students. (Note: Bradford resigned at the request of the university four months later, on Feb. 3, 1981.)

criticized the U.S. attorney for failing to accept prosecution of the case.

President Morris Norfleet, responding to the grand jury report, said, "I have complete confidence in the administrators who were involved in bringing this unfortunate matter to the attention of law enforcement officials. Mr. Graham, Mr. Walters and Mr. Conn (vice-president for university and regional services) acted professionally and with dispatch as soon as they became aware of the details of the situation."

Norfleet added that in accordance with university policy "the question of possible wrongdoing was referred to the proper authorities and administrative action was taken to correct the personnel aspect of the problem."

UBS and Rowan merge smoothly, officials say

By Sean Kelly

Officials of Morehead State University and the Rowan County school district said the merger between University Breckinridge and Rowan County High School has produced no problems.

Rowan County School Superintendent John Brock said that he was "proud of the way the students and staff of both schools have handled the situation. They have done a marvelous job."

The merger took place when MSU's Board of Regents, upon recommendation from Morehead State President Morris Norfleet, voted 9-1 to close the laboratory school.

Brock said the 53-year-old school will remain open until a new Rowan County Senior High School is completed and the present high school is converted to a middle school.

The decision was made by the Board of Regents to offset a $686,900 reduction in MSU's 1981-82 budget as ordered by Governor John Y. Brown.

Michael Davis, dean of the School of Education, said "no one wanted" to give up UBS.

He said the decision was a result of a move last spring by the Council of Higher Education to "take a look at all lab schools" at the state universities and "reevaluate their purpose."

Davis said CHE member Harry Snyder suggested that the lab schools be closed and used for other purposes.

As a result, Davis was given permission to talk with Rowan County school officials about the merger. Davis added that Norfleet established a study committee to look at all alternatives.

Davis said that while the committee convened recently to study the situation, "Snyder went public and said that the schools should be closed."

"The committee had eight options," he said, "but when Snyder went public, they were cut to two."

Davis said the two options were "either wait until next year when the CHE would cut out the money" or give UBS to the county immediately.

Davis said job security for UBS teachers was a major concern. He said 11 UBS teachers are employed by the county school district — "the balance is still employed by the University."

He said he agreed with Brock about the transition.

"The merger is really bringing people closer together. The parents are really pulling together in this. Most people don't realize that the students all know each other anyway," Davis said.

Brock added that the school district has an open policy which allows UBS and Rowan County High School students to choose which school they want to attend.

Students and teachers at both high schools said they had no complaints about the merger.

"It was inevitable that it would happen," said physical education instructor Phil Sheppard, 29. "It was smart of the Board of Regents to do this before the new high school was built."

"There have been no problems, and I seldom hear the students mention it," said math teacher Nadine Griffith, 30.

Tom Stern, whose children Kelly and Shelly, both 14, transferred to Rowan County High School, said he is "all for the merger. My daughters really like it."

"Things couldn't have blended in better," said UBS physical science teacher Mat Dillon, 33. "There are no problems outside of the ordinary."

Parents Weekend promises fun

By Doug Bolton

Morehead State will host its second annual Parents Weekend on September 25-27, and Vice-President of Student Affairs Buford Crager is excited about the event.

Crager, who is also co-chairman of the Parents Weekend Committee, called Parents Weekend "one of the more important highlights of the year for Morehead students, faculty and the community."

MSU's first home game against Middle Tennessee will cap off Saturday's activities. Tickets for the game, beginning with a pre-game show by the marching band at 1:15 p.m., will be on sale for parents and must be purchased by a student before 4 p.m. on Friday, September 25 at the office of the Division of Athletics in the Academic Athletic Center for $2 for reserved seats, $1.50 for general admission.

Friday's activities include a boat ride on Cave Run Lake, recreational sports, a movie, "The Champ," and "get acquainted" parties in campus residence halls.

A continental breakfast will be hosted by President and Mrs. Norfleet for parents at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, September 26. All academic facilities will be open for tours at 9:30 a.m. and the organizational meeting of the MSU Parents Association is scheduled for 11 a.m.

Saturday evening at 8:30, the Student Association will feature singer Livingston Taylor and comedian David Letterman at the Athletic Academic Center. On Sunday, MSU's annual Parents Weekend Golf tournament starts at 10 a.m. and Morehead's churches welcome parents and their students for morning services.

Parents Weekend, planned by a 39-member committee consisting of students, faculty representatives and bureau and major division representatives, was derived from the idea of Parents Day, which was started 4 years ago by the athletic department to promote the university and the football team.

One of the main purposes of Parents Weekend is to let the parent experience what college life is like at MSU. Crager also explained that this visit by the parents could be considered a follow up to the pre-registration visit they might have made and could help the parents to re-confirm their decision of sending their son or daughter to Morehead.

"Part of Parents Weekend is for the parents to experience college life here. For example," he said, "they can stay in the residence halls with their students and also attend the open houses and meet the faculty members under which their student has classes during the regular week."

Not only has the University itself put a lot of work into Parents Weekend, but different organizations on campus and in the campus community will be a part of welcoming MSU parents.

"Morehead merchants, the Ministerial Association, WMKY radio station and many other organizations will be helping out with the weekend's activities," Crager said. "The parents and students are going to have to make the decisions about which activities to attend and participate in."

Temporary housing ends; students move by Friday

By Ginny White

All the women in temporary housing have been moved out of the north wing of Waterfield Hall into permanent rooms, and the less than 80 men still located in temporary housing in Butler Hall should be moved out by Friday, said Jim Morton, director of student housing.

"We will make every effort to relocate them in the hall they want with the roommates they request," Morton said.

According to Morton, the housing office finished relocating the women on Wednesday, September 2.

At this point, Morton said, there is still "tripling" in the rooms at Butler Hall. Tripling is when three are assigned to a room which is usually only assigned to two people. Approximately ten rooms in Butler Hall were used for "tripling."

These rooms were given first priority in the moving out process, according to Morton. However, Morton said some

As Crager mentioned before, parents will be allowed to stay in residence halls with their student.

Parents may also stay in one of 34 rooms available in Waterfield Hall or one of 70 in Butler Hall. Rooms will accommodate four persons, the charge being '2 per person per night. Students should contact Jim Morton in the Student Housing Office in the Administration building, room 301. Otherwise, parents should make arrangements for lodgings at local hotels.

Although Parents Weekend is geared towards the parents of MSU students, Crager urges all students, even if their parents cannot attend, to stay on campus and get involved with the activities.

"With the special golf tournament, duffers and all," he said, "the football game, billiards, swimming, movies, the concert aimed to please both age groups and the special competitions between residence halls and students, there is no reason why a student should show any reluctance and not participate."

of the men in these rooms aren't in a hurry to move out.

"We have three who formerly played football together, for example. They're glad to be in with people they know," said Morton.

Morton also said there would probably be no refunds for the time spent in temporary housing due to university policy which requires students to have stayed in temporary housing until September 21, in order to receive a refund.

"We're shooting for September 11. We have everything moving in that direction," said Morton, concerning the date housing hopes to "wrap up" reassignment of rooms.

According to Morton, men in Butler were assessed a fee of $280 and will be moved to residence halls in which the fee is $290.

"We will not require them to pay the difference. But, let me add, we hope it will compensate for the inconvenience of moving," said Morton.

Aid director retires, will take on other post

A long-time member of the Morehead State administration has retired from his post, but will continue to serve the University in another position.

Elmer D. Anderson, director of student financial aid and assistant to the president, retired after 15 years, but the Morgan County native will become the executive director of the MSU Foundation, Inc., on Sept 15.

He succeeds Dr. Rondal Hart, MSU's director of admissions, who has held the foundation post on a volunteer, part-time basis since October, 1979.

Anderson becomes the first full-time employee of the foundation, which was established to receive and administer private gifts to the University. Governed by a 15-member Board of Trustees, the Foundation is incorporated in Kentucky as a non-profit corporation and has been declared tax exempt under Section 501 (c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

"We are pleased that Anderson is available and willing to accept this bold challenge to continue his dedicated service to the University," said President Morris L. Norfleet, who also holds the title of president of the Foundation.

Anderson said of his appointment by the Foundation board:

"I am most appreciative of the board's confidence and I look forward to working with alumni, parents, local citizens and other friends of Morehead State University who are interested in offering their financial support to this fine institution. It should be apparent that fund raising has become a critical factor in the future success of our University."

Anderson joined MSU's administrative staff in 1966 after serving as a teacher, coach, high school principal, pupil personnel director and assistant superintendent in the public schools of Morgan County.

A two-time graduate of MSU, he is a former president of the Kentucky Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators and member of the Grant Advisory Board of the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority. He also is active in several other professional organizations.

Anderson is a Shriner and an elder in the First Christian Church of Morehead. He is married to the former Elizabeth Carpenter, also of Morgan County, who is a retired faculty member at MSU.

Kuralt in, Kangaroo out in bad switch

Nothing is sacred anymore. Now that the TV networks have pulled the old switcheroo on the "Wonderful World of Disney," they've gone after larger, more juicy game: Captain Kangaroo.

editorial

Yes, the Captain will be only a half hour long next season, striking a blow for the news programs that are blitzing our TV screens and leisure time. ("Morning With Charles Kuralt" (or whoever is filling in for him) will expand to one and a half hours instead of the one hour that it now has. This will cut the Captain's customary one hour slot to one half hour.

This is indubitably a blow for (or against?) the modern persons' unending battle to be on top of everything that is happening in this world.

Now we are being informed that twilight news (that's the news from 5:30 p.m. to 7:00 p.m.) may be lengthened by one half to one hour. Great! Just what we need, more "Today" shows in the afternoon.

Why do the networks think average Mr., Ms., Mrs., or Miss United States want to be newsed-to-death morning, noon and night? Why do they think we want another news show that just draws out the pain of hearing 10 minutes of the same news over and over with the changing of the half hour, then a spunky change-of-pace or human interest that may include "Hormer Makins makin' sorghum in the mornin' do in ole Kaintucke?" (Perhaps it's due to the illusive Nielsen Ratings?)

What this boils down to is why the network stations have the misconception America wants news all the time? Perhaps they should rename the news the "olds" since what you hear is the same over and over again. And making more time for the news is like retoasting your morning toast—you end up scraping it off until there is nothing left but a few motly crumbs.

It is really too bad about the Captain, but now they are trying to get Andy, Scooby, Tom and Jerry, the Clampetts and all those other afternoon favorites to join the members of the "given up for news" team that have bitten the dust to make way for the smiling faces of news commentators, anchors, field personnel, etc.

Wonder if the networks have ever heard the old adage, "No news is good news?"

The call that doomed John Y.

It was just another Thursday morning in Frankfort.

In the governor's office, John Y. (for yellow-bellied) picked up the phone and dialed a few numbers.

Comment by

H. B. Elkins

"Hello," the voice said in John's ear.

"George, this is John. How are you this morning?"

"Pretty good, John, how about you?"

"Oh, very well," John replied. "What can I do for you today, John?" George said.

"Well, it's a long story. You see, we've got this small school in the northeastern part of the state, called Morehead State. And we've never been able to get a first-rate football team. Oh sure, we've had some good teams and players. You may have heard of Phil Simms, Gary Shirk and Greg Bright. They all played for Morehead and are now pros. And a couple of years ago Morehead was ranked in the top 10 in class I-AA. We had a real good coach, too. His name was Lichtenberg. But he left to become an assistant at Notre Dame," John explained.

"But anyway," John continued, "Our new coach is Steve Loney, and he hasn't won a game yet. Morehead's fans are upset, so I'd like to offer you the coaching job at Morehead."

"Besides, Phyllis thinks you're cute."

George was wary of the deal. He'd heard of some of John's bumbblings before. "Have you talked to President Norfleet or the Board of Regents yet?"

"I don't have to. I'm God, er, governor around here," John replied smugly. "Besides, they know I've got a hickory switch and I'm not afraid to use it."

George thought for a minute. "Aren't you forgetting something, John?" he asked.

"What?" was John's reply.

"Well, for one thing, Morehead hasn't played a game yet. They open at Marshall this weekend. So how could Coach Loney win a game when his team hasn't played yet? Besides, he's got a good team, a good coaching staff, and should get some good fan support. Steve's got everything going for him. You don't need me at Morehead, John. Steve L. will go to fine. I'm a busy man, Jo n. Do you want anything else?"

"Yeah, George. What about those commercials you were going to do in favor of my succession amendment?" John sounded worried.

"Forget it, John," George said. "I don't think Kentucky can stand another four months of you, much less four years!" And with that, Coach George hung up.

"Wait!" John shouted. "Do you know any basketball coaches who are unemployed who won't hit a referee?" But it was no use. The phone was dead.

Dejectedly, Governor John Y. Brown thought sadly about another one of his plans to help the Commonwealth that had been shot down in flames. "These hicks," he thought. "When will they ever learn that I'm trying to help them?"

Meanwhile, Coach George holding his "Curci for Governor" bumper sticker, had a different idea.

"I guess those Kentuckians are smarter than we give them credit for. They all know what an ass John Y. is, but he's too dumb to realize what everyone else knows."

Now listen here, Curci, try the bootleg with a . . . What do you mean . . . "don't I have enough to do as Governor!"

Trail Blazer adviser will emphasize efficiency

By Ginny White

Although he says he has no "dramatic changes" in mind for The Trail Blazer, Dr. Richard Dandaneau, associate professor of journalism and new adviser to The Trail Blazer, plans on emphasizing "efficiency in operation and production."

Dandaneau came to Morehead State University from Banning, Calif., where he was owner of Dandaneau Productions, a company dealing in graphics and editorial work. He has a master's degree in journalism and received his doctorate in speech communication from Southern Illinois University. He has previously taught business, speech and communications as well as journalism courses on the college level at several universities.

Dandaneau began teaching at MSU this semester and as he expressed it, came to the job as adviser to The Trail Blazer "cold."

Other than slight difficulty with the new computer typesetter, there have been no production problems, according to Dandaneau.

"In my experience there hasn't been a newspaper that didn't experience some production problems," said Dandaneau.

The Board of Student Publications, the group which governs The Trail

Blazer named a new editor and managing editor last spring. Lisa Sayble, a senior from Huntington, W. Va., was named editor, and H. B. Elkins, a junior from Beattyville, was selected managing editor. Both Elkins and Sayble assumed their duties at the opening of the current semester.

Concerning The Trail Blazer staff Dandaneau said, "I am impressed by the students' enthusiasm and ability."

He mentioned the awards received by last year's staff members given by the Kentucky Intercollegiate Press Association as an example. Those staff members are:

Dandaneau emphasized that working for The Trail Blazer is meant as "learning experience."

"We have several people who aren't journalism majors," he said, "and if they have an interest, we can train them in some capacity."

Last year's adviser, Cheyenne Oldham, has left MSU to work on her doctorate.

Davis gets movie offer

By Leigh Ann Stone

No one who's ever met MSU karate instructor Virgil Davis would accuse him of once being shy and afraid. Yet, that's how he described himself before he began taking karate lessons 14 years ago.

"Karate helped me develop my self-esteem," said Davis. "I'm much more outgoing."

Davis said he started taking karate lessons because the school he used to go to in Covington was predominantly white and the older boys always picked on him because he was so small.

"I got the idea of taking karate from comic books and decided to talk it over with my parents," said Davis. "And that's what got me started."

Davis' drive and enthusiasm have certainly paid off. Not only is he more outgoing, but he has done so well he recently received an offer to do a two minute fight scene in karate champion and actor Chuck Norris' latest movie.

He was "discovered" at a karate tournament in West Virginia, where Norris had sent some black belts and his brother, Aaron, to scout for talent. Davis and his team won eight trophies during the tournament and Aaron Norris asked Davis to attend the Chuck Norris National Convention in Las Vegas. Davis got to meet Norris there and was offered a part in his next movie.

Although to be in a movie would be most people's dream of a lifetime.

Davis has decided not to take the part. "My family and I are very close and I talked the situation over with them. I would be getting $250 a day for four to five weeks to shoot the movie in Los Angeles. However, we decided my education was the most important thing. If I left school that long it would ruin the entire semester and I want to finish the science requirements here that I need to go to osteopath school where I would study the muscles and bones."

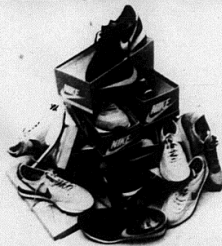

Davis has been at MSU since 1976 and graduated with a sociology/psychology major this past May, but wants to continue his education. He set up MSU's official karate club last year and is the instructor. He has also taught at many other boy's and girl's camps, such as the Harrold Boys Camp in Harrison, Ohio.

"Several of my friends are in Norris' last movie and they got to do stunt scenes. Two hundred and fifty dollars a day is a lot of money, but I decided not to do it at this time. Norris will be doing another movie around Christmas time and I'm thinking about doing it during Christmas break," Davis said.

"I never thought anything like this would happen unless you know someone or got some kind of break. A lot of people said it (this movie) could be that break."

But to Virgil Davis, education is the most important thing.

TIE ONE ON.

Unlike shoes, you can't buy new feet when they wear out. That's why NIKE makes shoes for individuals. Shoes for the road, the trails and models for both. For feet that are flat or arched, rigid or flexible. Whether you chum out 125 miles a week or run a good ten.

So come tie one on. And avoid a run-in with your feet.

Herschel Walker is to millions of Americans, the ultimate hero... Hank Aaron and Indiana Jones rolled into one.

Sure, he runs track like he's being chased by the KKK and he's good for about five or six miles every Saturday on the football field . . . but can he sing?

My heroes have always been . . .

On the surface, the Georgia Blur has what it takes to be a hero. Nevertheless, Herschel misses the mark by my definition, and he's probably a better person for it.

Hell, some of my sports heroes turned in their best performances on beer commercials.

My list of sports heroes past and present is dedicated to those parents who would rather see their offspring grow up like Adolf Hitler than Billy Graham:

✓ Fernando Valenzuela; for becoming a beer-guzzling American hero without even bothering to speak our language.

✓ Hunter S. Thompson; he went to the Kentucky Derby and wrote about "Drunks screaming in the flames and mud, crazed horses running wild."

✓ The Mighty Casey; in missing the fatal third strike he made the world safe for losers.

✓ Billy Martin; for kicking dirt in the right places.

✓ Illie Nastase; for making offensive behavior on the tennis court fun.

✓ Primo Carnera; as a 54-year old ex-heavyweight boxing champ, he took a job as a pro wrestler making $50,000-a-year.

✓ An anonymous Reading, Pa. beer distributor; in commenting on the 1981 baseball strike, he said: "The greedy bastards. How could they do it?" Timeless words . . . the stuff heroes are made of.

Loney-led Eagles ready to tangle Marshall

By Bill Brown

The Morehead State football team will kick off its 1981 season this Saturday as the Eagles travel to Huntington to face Marshall, in search of revenge for the 35-8 loss they received at the hands of the Thundering Herd last year.

The Eagles will be guided by first year head coach Steve Loney. Loney is no stranger to his players, however. He had been an assistant at Morehead for the past two years.

The Eagles will take an experienced team into Saturday's game with 13 regulars and 37 lettermen back from last year's 4-7 team. Loney also recruited 19 freshman with the spotlight falling on Rob Lockhart, a linebacker from Davisville, W. Va.

"Rob Lockhart will be an excellent addition to our defense," he said.

He will add to an already strong defense which is led by seniors Ken Hobkins and Ron Hardee, and junior Dan Gooch.

Gooch led the defense last year in the tackles and may possibly be the best player in the Ohio Valley Conference.

On the other side of the field, Keith Watts and Don Reeves will lead an offense which lacks very little other than depth in the offensive line.

"We have both a solid rushing and passing attack," Loney said, and the Eagles should keep their opponents on their toes at all times.

Beating Marshall is one of the three goals the '81 Eagles have set for themselves. The other two were to come into the season in good shape and to be the winningest team in the O.V.C. history.

Coach Loney said he feels one of these goals has already been accomplished since "the team has finished the preseason without any serious injuries." The team's good mental attitude this fall should also be a plus as they enter the '81 season.
