The outlay that prevailed in Rowan County for months after the storm was a matter of common knowledge. It was said that there was no more red tape in the work of the schools, however, and the amount of money invested in the outlay and the amount of labor needed was a formidable task. A little more than a month before the storm, the county authorities were faced with a financial crisis, and they had to make some sacrifices in order to keep the schools open. The storm itself was caused by a strong low-pressure system that moved through the area, bringing heavy winds and torrential rains. The storm caused significant damage to the area, and the county was forced to spend a large amount of money to repair the damage.

Let us have peace.

The outlay that prevailed in Rowan County for months after the storm was a matter of common knowledge. It was said that there was no more red tape in the work of the schools, however, and the amount of money invested in the outlay and the amount of labor needed was a formidable task. A little more than a month before the storm, the county authorities were faced with a financial crisis, and they had to make some sacrifices in order to keep the schools open. The storm itself was caused by a strong low-pressure system that moved through the area, bringing heavy winds and torrential rains. The storm caused significant damage to the area, and the county was forced to spend a large amount of money to repair the damage.

The town of N. L. Toller's Turn, a small settlement in Rowan County, was hit especially hard by the storm. The town was located on the banks of the Yadkin River, and the river had flooded several times due to the heavy rains. The storm caused the river to overflow its banks, and the town was completely submerged. The town was left in ruins, and the residents were forced to evacuate. The town was never rebuilt, and it became a ghost town.

Comming Conventin

Colored Men of Macon County.

There has been much said of late about the Color of the Moos of Macon County, but we are but a small part of the story. These men are as ambitious as ever, and their work is of the highest order.

The time set for the meeting is to-morrow at 11 o'clock, at the home of Mr. R. J. Moore. The meeting will be held, and the proceedings will be reported in the press, as is usual.

The convention will be held in Paris, the date of which has been changed to the 1st of June. The date of the convention will be announced for the Legislative session. Barabaz, J. M. B., W. M., and Barabaz, J. S., will be in attendance, and the proceedings will be reported in the press, as is usual.

The meeting will be held on the 1st of June, and the proceedings will be reported in the press, as is usual.