Hunt for Interpreter Was Highly Successful

By Richard Remington

The Courier-Journal

MOREHEAD FLOOD Havoc Told In Pictures

Photographs By George Bailey; Text By Douglas D. Cornette

(Courier-Journal Staff Men On the Scene)

George Bailey and I first saw the results of the straight rains at Blenstone, where we crossed a bridge across such as this one where Edward Warner was traveling on his flood-prone home. Little did we know that it was to become worse as we went on toward Morehead.

Two Shot In Still Rain

Sheriff Sharpe! Lee Peatey, 52, who lived in the same house, is still alive, and the other man who was shot dead was John Peatey. When he was shot dead the bullet entered his head and he dropped his gun. The bullet hit him in the head and knocked him down.

A PICTORIAL REPORT ON MOREHEAD floods.

A 354,000 Suit Started

Through the efforts of the Bl_PROD_ and Mining Co., the suit was started against the company in U.S. District Court.

There have been no arrests made so far, but the company is working hard to prevent any more floods.

Run Over An Abandoned Canal

Curtis Miller, 52, was run over by a tractor at Morehead, where he was seen to run over the rail, and then lie down in the street. He was run over by a tractor at Morehead, where he was seen to run over the rail, and then lie down in the street.

Shock Kills Workman

John Pepper, 52, was killed by a shock in a new mine. He was killed by the explosion while working in the new mine.

Judge Suspends Postmaster

Judge Jesse W. Hamner suspended Postmaster James M. Jones at Morehead, where Jones is accused of belying his years by his service to the government.

The more you know and everything else comes down when the raging torrent swept through Morehead's downtown centers, and demolished a terminal being sponsored by the American Legion. Hardly seems possible that a few hours before all was movement.

We were amazed that such a tiny place could rise to such heights that it seemed to be the center of attention as if they were there, and saw houses from their windows as if they were mountains. It still was hard to believe, even after we had taken the pictures.
Floods Spread Destruction In Mountain Regions

1. LOOKING DOWN ON THE SITUATION... This aerial view of the flooded village of Farmers, in Daviess County, shows what happened when the normally dry creek overflowed, engulfing the town.

2. CAR SWIFTLY INTO CORNFIELD... The car, swept off the LaGrange-Mount Sterling Road by the surging waters, was reported to have contained seven persons, all of whom miraculously escaped death in the flood waters.

3. SAVAGE... Mrs. Ethel Warren, Elkhorn, is salvaging what's left of her household goods. Part of her house lay destroyed across a highway.

4. FLOOD MUD... Mrs. R. B. Matson began salvaging the mud and debris out of her basement at Mount Sterling, as most of the items were carried away.

5. MOTOR TROUBLE... Eula Hersey, 14, found this pile of motor wreckage near the Mount Sterling home after the waters receded. Note the crates in the car.

6. VICTIM... CCC Workers James Lee and Norman Berry carry the body of an unidentified woman into a waiting ambulance. The body was found in a field between Elkhorn and Mount Sterling.

7. IDENTIFICATION CORPS... This was the scene outside the Mount Sterling funeral home as corpses waited to be identified, and in the identification of the dead as CCC members and other persons washed ashore.