Judge Cole Concludes and the Testimony—Arguing the Case

The Rowan County investigation was resumed Thursday afternoon with Judge Cole on the stand. A special to the Loomis Post from Morehead reads:

"A grand jury in Morehead has returned a true bill of indictment against several men for violation of the grand jury law. The grand jury was called by Judge Cole on the request of the Rowan County grand jury.

Judge Cole gave an emphatic answer to a question as to whether he had ever written a letter to the grand jury in Morehead. He said he had not and that he had not written any letter to the grand jury in the Rowan County case.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Judge Cole. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator W. H. W. Wathor, a member of the grand jury, in his statement said that he had never received any letter from Judge Cole and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.

"I have never written a letter to the grand jury," said Senator Wathor. "I have always looked upon the grand jury as an independent body, and I have never attempted to influence them in any way."

Senator Wathor also said that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law and that he had never spoken to Judge Cole on the subject of the grand jury law.