A. W. YOUNG IS DEAD; KENTUCKY SENATOR

Legislator Had Been Owner of Circus— Ran Away From Military Institute,

WAS A COUNTY ATTORNEY

Campaign Manager for William Goebel in His Race for the Governorship in 1903.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 18—Allie W. Young of Morehead, State Senator and one of the political leaders of Kentucky, died at 2:45 o'clock Monday afternoon at St. Joseph's Infirmary of a heart attack. He was 89 years old.

Born in Elizaville, Fleming County, Kentucky, in 1846, he realized a boyhood ambition to be a circus owner before entering politics and becoming one of the state's most powerful political leaders.

His father was Colonel Zachary T. Young, one of the figures in the famous Lincoln-Douglas debates. He was a leader in the Confederate States Army, and his son was a junior at the University of Kentucky when he was captured, and spent two years in a Confederate prison camp.

In 1867, after the war, he was elected to the State legislature, and later to the United States Senate. He served in both houses of the legislature for 12 years.

He was appointed to the United States Senate by President Andrew Johnson, and served in the Senate for 25 years, until his death.

Young was a graduate of the University of Kentucky, and practiced law in Morehead, Kentucky. He was a member of the Kentucky Bar Association, and was active in state and local politics.

Young was also a noted horseman, and was a member of the Kentucky Horsemen's Association. He was a member of the University of Kentucky board of trustees, and was a generous benefactor of the university.

Young was married twice, and had five children. His first wife was Mary Eunice Johnson, and they had three children. His second wife was Flora Johnson Morehead, and they had two children.

Young was a member of the Kentucky Bar Association, and was active in state and local politics.

He was a member of the University of Kentucky board of trustees, and was a generous benefactor of the university.

Young was also a noted horseman, and was a member of the Kentucky Horsemen's Association. He was a member of the United States Senate, serving in the Senate for 25 years, until his death.

Young was a graduate of the University of Kentucky, and practiced law in Morehead, Kentucky. He was a noted political figure in the state, and was active in state and local politics.

Young was married twice, and had five children. His first wife was Mary Eunice Johnson, and they had three children. His second wife was Flora Johnson Morehead, and they had two children.